One Held Accused Of Harboring Pair

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Without a shot being fired, Department of Justice agents and Philadelphia detectives, working quietly and with precision, today "picked off" five members of the notorious "Tri-State" gang.

Unwittingly, Marie McKeever "fingered" the mob.

The McKeever woman was one of the prisoners. The others, Robert Mais, 29, and Walter Legenza, 41, desperadoes under sentence of death in Virginia, and Martin Farrell, 28, and Edwin Gale, 23, both escaped convicts, were picked up quietly. So was Roy Willey, charged in a Federal complaint with harboring Mais and Legenza.

Arrests Are Described.

Frank Fay, head of the New York division of the Department of Justice, described the arrests with these words:

"We picked them off one by one so that the members of the gang didn't know we were even on the trail until we grabbed them.

"The arrest of these five eradicates, so far as we know, the 'Tri-State' gang with its record of robbery and murder."

It was henna-haired Marie who gave the department and operatives from New York and Philadelphia the break. First, they learned she was in town. They had been searching for her as an accessory.

Completely oblivious, she led detectives shadowing her to the gang, one by one. Fay said the arrests were made with the usual "scuffling," but no member of the gang "had a chance" to reach for a weapon.

Trailed to Hotel.

She first was trailed to a midtown hotel. There Farrell and Gale were picked up, unarmed. They made no attempt at resistance.

Then the agents followed Marie to Legenza, who with Mais had shot his way out of the Richmond Jail last September 29, killing a policeman and wounding two others. He was in a hospital undergoing treatment for fractures of both legs.—broken as he jumped down an embankment to escape Philadelphia police on December 14.

Marie was trailed again. This time she led her shadowers to Mais' apartment.

Scores of officers surrounded the apartment and the street in which it was situated. Fay's men burst in, covered him with their guns before he could grab a weapon near him.

Woman Suspected Aid.

The woman was trailed because she was suspected by Federal agents of knowing something of the escape of Mais and Legenza. The guns with which they shot their way out of jail had been sent to them in "canned chicken" tins. They had been convicted of slaying a truck driver in a Federal Reserve Bank hold-up.

To the "Tri-State" gang the Federal agents attributed many crimes

Graft Charges In D. C. Heard By Crime Body

House Sub-Committee Set to Call Figures Close to Underworld.

Groundwork for an exhaustive investigation of crime conditions in the Capital was laid by the special District crime sub-committee at its first meeting in the House District Committee room yesterday.

Determination to push the investigation was prompted, committee members said, by crime statistics and analyses submitted by The Post and stories told by a score of others, including lawyers, civic leaders and ordinary citizens and others with knowledge of the local underworld.

A member of the District Bar, whose name was not disclosed by Representative Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, committee chairman, has volunteered his services without charge to the committee.

Charges submitted to the committee run the gamut from grafting police, "fixers" about the courts, to accusations that some subchiefs in Government departments receive a "rake-off" on the gambling collections made in their offices.

Joseph L. Gammell, chairman of the police and fire committee of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, was among those who urged the committee to pursue its drive on crime and pledged the cooperation of his organization.

Power to subpena witnesses, both within the District and beyond its borders, is to be sought by the committee. An appropriation of $5,000 also is to be sought.

Among the first witnesses to be called are underworld characters and those having first-hand information of conditions. These are to

Dakota Votes Impeachment

Bismarck, N. Dak., Jan. 18 (AP).—Gov. Thomas H. Moodie, Democrat whose fight for the Governorship only began when he won election last November 6, today was impeached by the North Dakota House of Representatives.

His eligibility challenged in quo warranto proceedings before the State Supreme Court even before he took office 12 days ago, the former newspaper editor today faced suspension until the State Senate votes on the charges brought against him by the House of Representatives.

The impeachment resolution, sponsored by the dominant Nonpartisan-Republican faction of the House, was rushed to a vote two hours after it was offered. Moodie supporters, who fought it bitterly averring it was only a political move, could muster only 51 votes against the Nonpartisans' 60.

The resolution charged Gov. Moodie with "crimes, corrupt conduct, malfeasance and misdemeanors in office," but did not specify the violations.

Under State laws Moodie will be suspended until charges in the impeachment resolution are heard by the State Senate. Lieut. Gov. Walter Welford, affiliated with the Nonpartisan League faction, will take over the duties of Governor.

House Passes D. C. Budget Denying Rise

Riding roughshod over the pleas of House members for restoration of character education funds, an increase in the Metropolitan police force, and additional fire-fighting equipment, the Cannon-Blanton machine yesterday pushed a $39,306,404 District appropriations bill through the House.

The measure was passed finally with approximately 50 members on the floor and scarcely a dozen voting in a voice vote, after all amendments had been defeated.

Hearings will start before the Senate sub-committee at the convenience of the District Commissioners. Senator Thomas, chairman, said that a letter has been sent the Commissioners to this effect.

Expect Better in Senate.

The Senate sub-committee, as heretofore, is expected to give a more sympathetic hearing to the requests of the District heads for a large United States lump-sum payment and other increases blocked by the Cannon-Blanton machine in the House.

Representative J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, the only Republican member of the sub-committee, made a futile fight for restoration of an estimate of $87,540 to continue the three-year character education experiment a second year.

He cited the testimony of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, before the sub-committee in support of his demand that the experiment be continued. He divided his amendment into five parts. The first was defeated, 62 to 33, the second was ruled out of order, so he abandoned the other three in disgust.

Officials' Testimony Read.

An amendment to increase the police force was likewise defeated by 43 to 40, through the joint objections of Chairman Clarence Cannon and Representative Blanton, the ranking Democratic member.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, offered an amendment to restore $16,000 for the purchase of two additional combination hose wagons for the fire department. He read testimony of fire officials before the sub-committee to show that much of the department's equipment is 15 to 20 years old.

Dirksen's amendment was defeated, 37 to 17.

The sub-committee and the House District Committee were urged jointly to take steps to eliminate or control the burning of soft coal in Washington by Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York.

Called "Dirtiest City."

"Washington is one of the dirtiest cities in the country," he said, "and this soot is proving injurious to the health of all District residents."

Blanton said that the appropriations sub-committee is powerless to regulate the smoke nuisance and intimated that the job was one for the House District Committee to tackle.

Two Dominate Sub-Committee.

The District supply bill is practically the only departmental appropriations measure that goes through the House without one or more amendments being forced on the committee from the floor.

For the last two years Cannon and Blanton have so dominated the sub-committee that even another member of it, to say nothing of other members in the House, has been unable to alter it in the slightest respect.

The two members dominate the drafting of the bill from the time it reaches the Capitol until it is sent to the Senate, and last year they were able to force Senate conferees to drop most amendments approved by the Senate.

Biparty War On 'Security' Is Launched

Connery's Committee to Hold "Rump" Hearings.

Insurgents Struggle to Compel Increased Benefits.

Opposition to the New Deal's economic security program developed yesterday among both Democrats and Republicans on Capitol Hill.

Indications were a formidable tug-of-war to force amendment of the Wagner-Lewis bill to provide for larger old-age pensions and bigger unemployment insurance benefits would be waged by a coalition of both major parties.

The views of many insurgents were reflected in an attack on the Roosevelt security program made by Senator Long (Democrat), Louisiana.

"All the people would get that would do 'em any good under that $15-a-month plan," he shouted, "could be put in your right eye." He added he would seek an old-age pension of $30 or $40 a month.

"Rump" Hearings Planned.

Meanwhile, in what observers regarded as an effort to head off congressional criticism of his plan, President Roosevelt emphasized there was no limit on the amount of old-age pensions States could vote. He pointed out the Federal Government only contemplated matching State contributions up to a grand total of $30 a month or $15 each.

Perhaps the biggest storm warning was hoisted in the House by Chairman Connery, of the Labor Committee. He protested against submission of the Lewis bill to the House Ways and Means Committee and disclosed his committee would conduct "rump" hearings on all old-age and unemployment plans and report out those it favored.

Wagner-Lewis bill hearing will be opened Monday by the House Ways and Means Committee and Tuesday by the Senate Finance Committee. Secretary Perkins and other high-ranking officials will be among the witnesses.

Governors Approve.

Chairman Doughton said the House group might require two or three weeks to complete its study. He said there was little possibility of joint hearings.

Representative Keller (Democrat), Illinois, announced he received almost uniformly favorable comments in an old age pension questionnaire circulated among Governors. He revealed Gov. Talmadge, Georgia, was the only executive out of 31 who was opposed.

Most of the Governors told Keller they wished pensions of $30 a month, although a few asked $40 or more.

District Seeks Share In Security Plan.

A study of legislation to enable the District to share in the social security legislation program of President Roosevelt will be undertaken by Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, at the direction of Commissioner George E. Allen.

The legislation for the District will conform generally with the social security program of the President, Commissioner Allen said. Bills providing old age pensions for District residents are now pending in Congress.

Mrs. Hauptmann Shouts 'Lie' At Woman Accusing Husband

Swears He Had Injured Ankle

(Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18.—Anna Schoeffler Hauptmann flung through a steaming courtroom today a shrill defense of her husband.

They were the first words she has uttered above a whisper from her seat two chairs away from Bruno Richard Hauptmann as the State piled accusation on accusation that he was the murderer of the Lindbergh baby.

It sounded like a quarrel between two Bronx housewives over a clothesline or a mop.

On the witness stand was Mrs. Ella Achenbach, an ample matron, who operates a bakery and lunchroom in the Bronx. Anna Hauptmann once worked for her as a waitress.

Another Surprise Witness.

No one expected Mrs. Achenbach to come waddling out of the crowd and say what she did. For, before she got off the witness stand, she had hurled another damning piece of evidence at Hauptmann.

Back in 1932 the Hauptmanns and the Achenbachs lived five doors from each other in the Bronx. The two women ran into each other's back door twice or three times a day to borrow sugar and salt, to trade neighborhood gossip.

Mrs. Achenbach was not surprised, then, when Mrs. Hauptmann came over either March 2 or 3, 1932—she wasn't sure of the date, but she knows it was less than two days after the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped.

"You Are Lying," She Shouts.

The thought sped through every mind in the courtroom that here was refutation of Hauptmann's contention that he was in the Bronx the night the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped. Here was refutation of Mrs. Hauptmann's story that her husband had escorted her home from the bakery (not Mrs. Achenbach's bakery) where she worked on the night of March 1.

The Hauptmanns had been on a trip, Mrs. Achenbach said, and that meant that Mrs. Hauptmann, too, was away from the Bronx on the night of March 1.

Mrs. Hauptmann must have known how damning such testimony was, because abruptly she was out of her chair and shrilling at the witness:

"Mrs. Achenbach, you are lying."

For five seconds she stood there in her shapeless blue dress and her blue hat with the little veil falling over her nose. Then she sat down. Nobody had to pull her back into her chair as Hauptmann was pulled back yesterday after he, too, had called a witness "liar!" Mrs. Hauptmann had a pleased smile on her lips and the attorney general was the first to notice it.

Wilentz Protests.

He addressed the court:

"If your honor please, the State is getting a little tired of this play acting in the courtroom. Three times this has happened now. The defendant, Hauptmann, called a witness a liar some time ago, and called one a liar yesterday. Now the defendant's wife calls a witness a liar. Are the delightful Mr. and Mrs. Hauptmann conducting this trial or is your honor conducting it?"

That was what a lot of people wanted to know—whether these outbursts of the Hauptmanns came from careful coaching or from emotional tension. Justice Thomas W. Trenchard made no attempt to find out. Instead, he turned to Mrs. Hauptmann and said:

"Madam, don't you realize the impropriety of making such an outburst in court?"

"Yes, your honor, I do," she said, rising.

"And you will promise to keep quiet from now on?"

"Yes, your honor, I will."

Gold Decision By High Court Likely Monday

(Associated Press.)

The possibility of a Supreme Court ruling in the gold cases Monday arose last night as a study of its records revealed precedent for announcing a verdict and filing the opinion later.

The court has had one consultation on the case. Another will be held today if its regular schedule is followed. Should the ruling not be issued Monday, it could not be announced until February 4.

The writing of an opinion is generally a time-consuming task, especially in a case of such importance. Precedents and other legalistic considerations usually are discussed exhaustively.

The practice of the court is to expedite cases of great importance. During argument on the gold cases last week it left no doubt that it realizes the importance of the decision it is about to make and its profound influence upon the whole monetary and financial structure of the Nation.

Precedent for announcing the ruling and then writing the opinion goes back to 1905 and a case in which E. H. Harriman brought suit

Anna Dall on a Secret Trip With Boettiger After Wedding

Echoes of wedding bells in New York rang through the haunts of Washington society yesterday as the marriage of Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, to John Boettiger, former Chicago and Washington newspaperman, crowded all other subjects out of tea table conversations. What had long been rumored as a possibility had become a fact.

Yesterday's ceremony in the Roosevelt home, 49 East Sixty-fifth street, New York City, was the second marriage for both participants. Mrs. Dall divorced Curtis Dall, father of her two children, last autumn in Reno, Nev., and Mr. Boettiger was divorced from his first wife in November. Although the wedding came as a surprise, no previous announcement having been given out and even a tantamount denial of an engagement having been made, it was attended by members of the President's family. The President himself remained in the White House, and it was there that a verbal announcement was made to newspapermen by Stephen Early, Presidential secretary.

On Secret Trip.

Regret that the marriage would remove to New York from Washington society one of its most vivacious members was freely expressed throughout the city last night. The blonde daughter of the White House, mother of "Sistie," 8, and "Buzzie" Dall, 4, famous grandchildren of President Roosevelt, has long been a favorite among the Capital's younger set. She has won friendship through a typical Rooseveltian quality of unconventionality, the laughter of herself and her friends having enlivened the White House upon many a gay occasion. She was a familiar figure, usually ac-

Col. Lindbergh To Fly Pacific At Trial's End

Expected to Blaze Way for Transport Service to the Orient.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Jan. 18.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is expected to take the leading part in the conquest of another ocean for United States' aviation—just as soon as the court in Flemington, N. J., decides whether Bruno Richard Hauptmann murdered his son.

The famous flier, it was revealed by intimate associates today, is expected to fly the Pacific Ocean preliminary to the establishment of an experimental air transport service between America and the Orient, which will reduce the transportation time between the Orient and the New World to 60 flying hours.

The Pan-American Airways System, whose technical committee Col. Lindbergh heads, is rapidly advancing plans for the establishment of an experimental air

Eccles Faces Quiz by Glass Before Confirmation Ballot

Federal Reserve Chairman May Be Questioned About Interest in Chain Banks by Senate Banking Committee.

By Robert C. Albright.

Senate confirmation of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, may wait on pointed questioning of the former Utah banker before the Senate Banking Committee, with Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, in the examiner's chair, it was learned last night.

Former chain bank interests of Eccles in Utah and Idaho, as well as the Utahan's views on current agitation for a central bank of issue, are expected to figure in the questioning. An executive meeting of the Senate Committee to consider the nomination was tentatively set for Tuesday, but Eccles has not yet been asked to appear.

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve Board announced adoption of a policy limiting the tenure of office to six years for the three directors it names to the boards of each reserve bank, apparently in an effort to eliminate from the management of these banks many of the men who have been running them.

Although the board's new policy does not become effective until appointments are made the latter part of the year, Owen D. Young, a class C director of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York since 1927, was reported to be ready to resign to conform to the policy.

The question of Eccles' confirmation came up at a recent meeting of the Senate Banking Committee, and the nomination was permitted to go over, at the request of Senator Glass, when he found it impossible to attend the meeting.

Eccles and Glass recently were in sharp disagreement over action by Federal agencies ordering State banks outside the Federal Reserve system to reduce their deposit interest rates from 3 to 2½ per cent. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation subsequently held up the effective date of its order.

Although Senator Glass declined to comment last night, it was learned he is interested in Eccles' former chain bank operations. An advocate of sound branch banking, Glass has consistently fought chain bank extension. Eccles came to Washington after serving as president of the First Security Corporation, operating 26 banks and a trust company, with $50,000,000 in resources. He was required by law to divorce himself of his holdings, before taking office.

Questioning also may turn on Eccles' testimony before the Senate committee in 1933, when, among other things, he urged heavy ex-

More Snow Likely Here Today; Storms Sweep Northwest Area

More snow may fall in Washington today, possibly changing to sleet or rain in the afternoon, the Weather Bureau predicted last night, as winter held most of the Nation within its icy hand.

Much of the snow that carpeted the city with white Wednesday night and early Thursday remained yesterday as the mercury stayed in the upper thirties. Yesterday's minimum was 35 at 9 a. m., while maximum was 37 at 3 p. m. Today, the Weather Bureau said, the temperatures will be between 30 and 37.

Meanwhile, blizzards sweeping the Northwest States, 30 below temperatures on the bleak northern plains and a hazardous sheet of ice from Nebraska to the Atlantic were reported by the Associated Press.

Montana shivered. At Havre it was 32 below, in Helena 26 below and at Bemidji, Minn., the mercury sank to 25. One man died and another was seriously ill of carbon monoxide gas inhaled when they stayed in their ditched truck at Red Wing, Minn.

(Associated Press.)

Disaster overtook four ships today as gales and heavy snow storms kicked up angry seas in both the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans.

At least two men died in the swirling waters, both within sight of their rescuers.

A breeches buoy carried to safety 28 sailors from the stranded British freighter Kennery which broke in two on a ledge off Halifax, Nova Scotia. But her heroic captain, Duncan Milne, last man to quit the battered vessel, lost his footing as he stepped toward the buoy and was swallowed by the churning waves.

A daring rescue by the Japanese destroyer Haki was disclosed today when survivors of the wrecked steamer Hayataka Maru reached Chefoo, Shantung Province, China. An aged man who fell into the sea was the only one of 151 passengers and crew lost.

Two other ships were damaged by fire.

Army Orders 'Rough Ride' Test To Eject 'Swivel Chair' Fliers

(Associated Press.)

A stiff "rough ride" test for the 1,228 pilots in the Army Air Corps, designed to eliminate the "swivel chair" officers and make way for the junior and more rugged personnel, was ordered yesterday by Secretary Dern.

All flying officers will have to take the test by June 30. Those who can "take it" will stay in. Those who can't will be transferred to nonflying duty in the Air Corps or to some other branch of the service.

The test, devised by the general staff and Air Corps chiefs, is a part of a plan approved by the War Secretary for improvement in the corps. Pilots who succeed in passing it, however, will be required to fly a maximum of 100 hours a year, under all conditions such as night, instrument, cross-country and formation flying.

Dern also approved a temporary promotion system through which junior officers, assigned to commands ordinarily filled by higher ranks may receive ratings in accordance with the duties they are performing.

This will benefit officers throughout the corps, but its immediate effect will be to grant higher ranks to officers assigned to the new general headquarters air force.

As recommended by the Baker aviation committee, all Air Corps officers of 15 or less years service hereafter will be required to pass the flying tests annually.

The tests require each pilot to acquire a standard of flying proficiency by flying a minimum of:

Thirty-five hours' navigation, including one flight of at least 500 miles with a minimum of two intermediate landings. Officers in the United States must make not less than two flights of at least 200 miles each over the Department of Commerce airways, using available radio navigation aids and communication systems.

Ten hours' instrument flying, including a minimum of five hours "blind flying" under the hood.

Ten hours' night flying.

Advisory Body Acts to Speed Trade Credits

Committee Is Appointed by Council; Chamber Hails Stock Rules Change.

By Felix Bruner.

Promising to speed its work of assembling business opinion for the guidance of the Administration, the Business Advisory Council of 52 leading industrialists yesterday announced appointment of a committee to consider plans for developing intermediate credits for small concerns.

The council, headed by Secretary Roper, has invited business to express its views on legislation and other governmental problems, promising to see that these views are passed on to proper authorities.

While the council was formulating its plans, Representative Snell, of New York, Republican leader, assailed it as "supercommission" Government.

"If we are going to have supercommission Government, the American House and Senate should be abolished," he said.

Chamber Hails Report.

The action of the advisory council, coupled with the recent liberalization of the Security Exchange Commission's registration rules, was greeted with enthusiasm by business heads. The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States yesterday heard a report approving the action of the Securities Commission.

Henry P. Kendall, chairman of the advisory council, announced he would appoint, in addition to the credits committee, an advisory committee on housing and decentralization of industry. Members of the intermediate credits committee are Fred I. Kent, vice president of the Bankers Trust Co., New York; Harold C. Smith, president of the Illinois Tool Co., and Grosvenor Jones, chief of the finance investment division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The report of the Chamber of Commerce Committee on securities registration was signed by Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the chamber's finance department committee, and vice president of the American Bankers Association.

Improvement Pointed Out.

The new registration form, the report said, "is a substantial improvement over the earlier registration form, which, in many instances, required an almost prohibitive amount of information from issuers of securities, and much of which had little or no value to investors.

"There is reason to believe that the commission has gone a long way toward meeting the criticisms of business executives, bankers, lawyers and accountants, by removing many non-essential provisions that visited expense and annoyance on issuers. The change should be of substantial value in permitting both new and refunding issues to get under way.

"The clarification and simplification permitted in the registration statement should make possible the preparation of concise and intelligible information for use of prospective purchasers of securities."

Byrd Preparing For Start Home

Little America, Antarctica, Jan. 17 (delayed) (via Mackay Radio) (AP).—The second Antarctic Expedition led by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd began breaking camp today, making ready for early departure home. It was the anniversary of his second landing on the Antarctic continent.

Stores are being packed and hauled to the surface. To do this it has been necessary to break down the tunnels which for nearly a year have been the paths of a mole-like existence. Everything fit for salvage will be brought home to help reduce the expedition's debt.

Lieut. Comdr. George O. Noville is directing breaking camp. Both the Bear of Oakland and the Jacob Ruppert, supply ships, are nearing the Bay of Whales here.

Florida Judge Posts Bond on Bribe Charge

Miami, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—Criminal Court Judge E. C. Collins surrendered this afternoon, posted a $2,000 bond and said he would reply tomorrow to grand jury indictments charging him with embezzlement and accepting a bribe.

Judge Collins is charged with accepting $465.16 to suspend the sentence of J. W. Davis, jr., son of a Jemison, Ala., planter, who was returned here in September, 1934, on a charge of stealing an automobile. County jail records show he was released under suspended sentence after pleading guilty.

Pistol Is Ruled Out Of Hauptmann's Trial

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP).—The pistol found in a short beam in Bruno Richard Hauptmann's garage with Lindbergh ransom bills will not figure in his trial.

The State agreed with the defense today that the weapon had no part in the kidnap-murder trial and would not be referred to in testimony, unless inadvertently by a witness. Nor will it be produced as an exhibit. The decision was made during the afternoon session of court by counsel for both sides.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP).—An airplane crash which killed Loren W. Mendell, 28, former endurance flight record holder, and Miss Polly Louise Counnerilh, 24, dancer, was under investigation by Department of Commerce representatives today.

Apparently beset by fog, they crashed against a hillside along Lytle Creek Canyon 40 miles northeast of here yesterday. Mendell and Miss Counnerilh, both of Los Angeles, had been to Barstow to visit her parents.

Between You and Me

A Blue Eagle on the Hot Seat; Williams and the Rich; Grand Coulee Project.

By Raymond Clapper

The Blue Eagle is sitting on a hot stove lid, and guesses are in order as to how long it will be before there is a big explosion in NIRB.

When Gen. Johnson's one-man rule was replaced by a board, various viewpoints were assembled in the new personnel to provide a cross-section of economic and business thought. On the right wing were placed two able figures from the higher ranks of the business world, Chairman S. Clay Williams, tobacco manufacturer, and Arthur Whiteside, head of Dun & Bradstreet. On the left wing was placed Sidney Hillman, head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, a vigorous Lithuanian-born labor leader, who always has regarded the A. F. of L. leadership as somewhat old fogey. Hillman is reinforced by two ex officio members of the board, Leon Henderson, a left-wing economist, and young Blackwell Smith, acting general counsel of NRA.

Recently the board, unable to agree on recommendations as to the future of NRA, rendered a series of alternative proposals to President Roosevelt. Had the matter ended there it might not have been considered unusual. Any group of men is apt to have differences of opinion.

But the controversy began to blaze when Chairman Williams went to New York and made a speech outlining his hope that NRA would be continued temporarily on its present basis. A few hours before he was to speak other members of NIRB called a press conference. When asked for their views on the remarks of Williams, Smith remarked in his mild way that the chairman was obviously expressing his personal opinion. Hillman, more explosive, leaped to his feet and declared emphatically that it would be very unfortunate if the impression went out that Williams was speaking for the board.

Williams had set off the explosion by a passage toward the end of his speech defending the rich man as one who was working on the basis of 25 cents on the dollar—25 cents for himself and 75 cents in taxes for the Government.

"He and his property," Mr. Williams added, "are working for us all and the punitive expeditions that hangers-on and camp followers of the New Deal would like to launch against him won't even stand the test of arithmetic, much less of common sense or public interest."

Such outspoken words are seldom heards from inside the New Deal. Mr. Williams preceded this outburst by a plea in language that has been little heard in Washington for the last two years:

"It's the rich man who can do for the rest of us many, many things that we can't do for ourselves. And he should have encouragement, selfishly given, if you please—if for no other reason because of those important services that he alone is in position to render.

"And lest someone should think that by being rich or by attaining riches through his energy and thrift and his pioneering, he is to be rated as unduly favored above other men, or that there is danger to the country or to its people from such accumulations, let me remind you of the present state of the tax laws: If our wealthy citizen makes a very large income, half of it goes immediately to the Government as income taxes; and if in spite of that levy he accumulates a very large estate, half of that, at his death, goes to the Government as death taxes. In other words, the kind of earner and accumulator that I am describing is, in the end, working on the basis of 25 cents on the dollar, 25 cents for himself and 75 cents for the Government. And meanwhile, in addition to all of the employment and the volumes of business that he creates or handles when in full activity, he is paying a lot of taxes that the rest of us would have a hard time paying. So there's no occasion for worrying further about the rich man in America."

How long are the New Dealers going to permit such heresy? Or is it heresy? The Business Advisory and Planning Council, which is Secretary of Commerce Roper's show, is said to be preparing to take a much more active role from now on. The Administration has invited it to register its views on pending legislation and other Government problems. The council is composed of some 50 big shots in the business world. Secretary Roper started it at the time NRA began. He thought it would become the superboard which would guide NRA, but Gen. Johnson had other ideas. Secretary Roper's group was elbowed out of the big tent and has had to be content with a sideshow. They are nosing back under the big canvas now.

Some time ago Dr. Elwood Mead, United States Commissioner of Reclamation and in charge of the Grand Coulee Dam project, became concerned over the impression in the East that there was no economic justification for this gigantic structure out in the middle of the desert in Washington State. He wrote to his publicity director on the scene asking if there was not some way of "educating" the East as to the merits of this dam.

Well, the hint took effect. In comes by mail a batch of publicity material with a big red heading: "News Flashes About the Grand Coulee Dam, Issued by the Spokane Chamber of Commerce News Bureau From the Seat of Activities at Spokane, Wash." The first item reports that the first steel piling for the coffer dam was driven on New Year's Day. The second item says there is a special postoffice at Grand Coulee which has to be moved around dodging the steam shovels—a postoffice on skids. The third item says the Government is building a railroad through a famous fossil bed to carry machinery and steel for the dam. That leaves a number of persons in the East still to be educated as to the merits of the project.

It is getting to the point where there will be news when Secretary Ickes does not have a fight with somebody. Now he and David Lilienthal, of TVA, are at odds over the power set-up for the Administration's power development program. Lilienthal, who has made a study of power development in the British Isles, is for the "grid" system, a network of interconnecting power lines which throws all power into a common pool. Ickes prefers, so it is reported, to develop the most favorable areas independently. The argument against the grid system is that long distances and varying degrees of consumption developed in different areas; the attempt to link them together should wait until a later day.

"Thrift" to Continue, Campaigners Decide

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Thrift is still among the virtues, depression or no, it was decided today by the National Thrift Committee. Its executive chairman, J. Robert Stout, said the thrift campaign will continue this year despite suggestions that spending had more economic advocates than saving.

"We reached the decision that Benjamin Franklin knew what he was talking about," said Stout, "when he said 'A penny saved is a penny earned.'"

Mrs. Vanderbilt Granted $48,000 For Her Upkeep

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Surrogate James A. Foley today renewed the $48,000 annual allowance to Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt for the maintenance of her home and herself, the amount to be paid out of the estate of her 10-year-old daughter, Gloria.

The order, substantially the same as the surrogate's order of a year ago, directs that the child's mother receive $9,000 for personal expenses, that $3,000 be paid as an allowance to the maternal grandmother, Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan; $1,500 be allowed for medical expenses, and the balance of $34,500 be paid by the guardians of the child's estate for the maintenance of her mother's home.

Mrs. Vanderbilt recently was denied sole custody of her heiress daughter who had been living with her maternal aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Now a ward of the court, little Gloria stays with Mrs. Whitney five days a week and with her mother on week-ends.

8 Members Added To Recreation Body

Appointment of eight new members of the Advisory Council on Playgrounds and Recreation was made yesterday by the District Commissioners on the recommendation of the council.

New members are: Morris Cafritz, of the Jewish Social Agencies; Leonard de Gast, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Charles M. Fyfe, managing director of the District Boys Clubs; Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Civic Association; Dr. L. J. Sheehan, of Catholic Charities, and Fred S. Walker, of the Columbia Typographical Union.

30-Hour Week Seen Increasing Coal Bill

Imposition of the 30-hour week on the mining industry would add $100,000,000 a year to the Nation's coal bill, the National Coal Association declared yesterday. It added that such legislation would operate to increase rather than decrease the percentage of idle time of the mine workers and aggravate rather than relieve irregularity of employment in the industry.

Board Awaits Capitol's Move On War Profits

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The report of President Roosevelt's committee on wartime mobilization and profit-limiting, it was reliably indicated today, is being held up to allow Congress full opportunity to prepare its own legislation.

The committee, an inquiry disclosed, has held no meetings. So far as could be learned, none was contemplated in the immediate future.

The situation approximated this: The desire of the White House for an all-encompassing wartime plan has not lessened.

Ready to Draft Program.

The members of the committee are prepared to draft, on short notice, a program of iron-clad economic control for use in wartime. But since the appointment of the committee, activities on Capitol Hill furthering wartime legislation have greatly increased. The word went out to hold up any report by the President's committee.

The attention of the committee, at the moment, seemed centered on the public hearings next week of the House Military Affairs Committee, of which Representative J. J. McSwain is chairman.

Among those interested, the legislative hopes appeared to be twofold:

1. A preparedness that would serve also in the interests of peace; and

2. Minimizing, by strict control and limitation of profits, any agitation for war.

Crisis Abroad Discussed.

The unsettled international situation has weighed heavily in legislative discussions.

While the intent has been to avoid "jingoism" at every turn, the position of the President's committee virtually parallels that of a war-time advisory council.

The Cabinet members on the committee would control the vital phases of national life. The chairman, Bernard M. Baruch, led the work of the War Industries Board in the World War. George B. Eastman represents transportation, and George N. Peek, war-time trade. Hugh S. Johnson, aside from Baruch the only non-Government official on the commission, is an expert on the draft.

Plea Entered By Col. Cooper

Former Bank Head Denies Misapplying Funds of Commercial.

Col. Wade H. Cooper, former head of the Commercial National Bank, Continental Trust Co. and United States Savings Bank, yesterday pleaded not guilty when arraigned in District Supreme Court on an indictment charging misappropriation of funds of the Commercial.

Benedict M. McNeil, a former teller at the Park Savings Bank, who was called upon to face arraignment on a charge of conspiring with two others, now dead, to embezzle funds of the Park Savings Bank, also pleaded not guilty.

Col. Cooper was indicted several months ago. He told reporters he was ready and anxious to stand trial.

The indictment against McNeil alleges that he, his father, Alexander McNeil, and Robert S. Stunz, former executive officer of the Park Savings Bank, conspired to steal the institution's funds. Stunz committed suicide when the bank closed, and the elder McNeil died several months ago.

New 'Hot Oil' Curb Speeded in Senate

The Senate Mines Committee yesterday agreed on new legislation to prohibit transportation of "hot oil" in interstate commerce and Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, promptly introduced it in the Senate, the Associated Press reports.

The measure combines features of bills by Connally and Senator Gore (Democrat), Oklahoma. It is intended to meet the decision of the Supreme Court holding section 9 (c) of the recovery act unconstitutional because it delegated unlimited powers to the Executive to regulate the oil industry.

Trappers War Is Laid To Cut-Throat Tactics

New Orleans, Jan. 18 (AP).—Cut-throat competition in the muskrat pelt market was assigned today as the underlying cause of the "trappers' war" which sent 35 Federal deputies into the fertile trapping territory in St. Barnard and Plaquemines Parishes to serve warrants.

Invasion by deputies in the swamplands, from which hundreds of families secure livings from their traps, increased the tension between rival factions and gave rise to fear of further bloodshed before the controversy is settled.

penditures for public works, more equitable distribution of wealth through high income and inheritance taxes, and a unification of the banking system. Centering around Glass, strong Senate opposition recently has developed against further centralization of bank control in Washington.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, said last night he will attend Tuesday's banking committee meeting, to urge immediate confirmation of Eccles.

The Federal Reserve Board, in connection with its new directorship policy announced yesterday, indicated the reserve banks should adopt a similar system of rotation in reference to the six directors appointed by their stockholders. Banks were urged to select directors not primarily interested in banking.

It was explained that the reason the action was taken now, almost a year before any present terms expire, was to establish in advance a rule, the operation of which could not be said to be aimed at any particular individual.

"Gradual changes in the personnel of these directorates," the board said, "would insure against possible crystallization at the banks of the influence of individuals or groups, which might not be in the public interest, as the Reserve banks must render uniform service to all the elements in their communities."

Mais, Legenza To Stay Caught, Is Hoover Vow

He Insists on Richmond's Word Pair Will Not Escape Again.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice, expressed his determination yesterday that there shall be no repetition of the jail break which returned Mais and Legenza to liberty last September 29.

He asked and received assurances from Richmond that the escape would not be duplicated.

Still fresh in his mind was the Dillinger fiasco at Crown Point, Ind., which nullified the efforts of Federal agents in recapturing the desperado and his gang and subsequently resulted in the slaying of three Federal men. Hoover declared that all six fugitives taken in the Tri-State gang round-up in New York Thursday and yesterday face Federal indictments.

Compares Chases.

Another comparison with the Dillinger chase, which Hoover brought out, is the fact that Robert Mais and Walter Legenza met their doom through stealing guns from the National Guard Armory at Hyattsville June 2, 1934. That's all the United States had against them, though the pair were known to be bank robbers, hijackers and murderers.

Dillinger aroused Federal ire because he transported a stolen auto from one State into another.

While willing to discuss every detail of the Tri-State coup, Hoover grimly replied "No comment" when asked whether Alvin Karpis might now be in custody. With Kate "Ma" Barker and her son, Fred, slain this week by agents' guns and another gangster son, Arthur (Doc), under arrest, Karpis becomes the most desirable prize yet to be taken.

"Doc" Barker was captured January 8 but no announcement was made until his mother and brother were cornered and shot in Florida.

"We could not take a chance on spoiling that raid by letting out the news that 'Doc' was under arrest," explained the director.

Pursuit of Pair.

The Government's relentless pursuit of Mais and Legenza was given impetus by the kidnaping of William Weiss, Philadelphia liquor manufacturer, on November 19, 1934. According to information obtained by the division's Philadelphia office, the two killers were implicated in that crime. Weiss still is missing and is believed to have been killed.

Mais' criminal record began in Philadelphia on June 21, 1924, when he was arrested for breaking, entering and larceny. He was discharged. During the next ten years he succeeded in beating charges ranging from operating an auto without a driver's license and failing to render aid after an accident, to holdup, deadly assault and suspicion of holdup.

Following a long series of depredations by the Tri-State gang—holdups, bank robberies and hijackings in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Richmond and elsewhere—Mais, Legenza and Marie McKeever, the "moll" who unwittingly led to the latest roundup, were seized June 4, 1934, in a gun battle near the Baltimore fair grounds. The former was wounded.

Extradited to Richmond.

The two leaders were extradited to Richmond, brought to trial for the murder of E. M. Huband, driver of a Federal Reserve Bank truck, and convicted. Sentenced to die in the electric chair, they engineered a daring jailbreak a few weeks before the dates of execution, killing a policeman, W. A. Toots. Their trail of blood grew with the suicide, several weeks later, of Jailer R. C. Duke, who had brooded over the fatal break.

William Davis, alias George Woods, alias George Dunn, alias James Donovan, alias Walter Legenza, has a record dating back to January 31, 1923, when he was arrested in Memphis on charges of postoffice and bank robbery and sentenced to three years in the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta.

He helped found the Tri-State gang after escaping from Lorton Reformatory on June 8, 1933, where he was serving a term for safe cracking.

Martin Farrell for several months has been suspected of joining in the criminal activities of Mais and Legenza. Agents were advised he knew something about the kidnaping of Weiss.

Charges of Harboring.

Both Farrell and Roy Willey were named in a complaint filed before the United States commissioner in Philadelphia on January 8 charging that they harbored Mais and Legenza.

Marie McKeever consistently has evaded imprisonment, although she has had a police record for more than eight years. It began in Philadelphia December 16, 1934, when she was charged with being an inmate of a disorderly house. Adjudged guilty, her sentence was suspended and she was placed on probation two years.

Captured with Mais and Legenza in the Baltimore gun battle in June, the woman was released after being held on a charge of investigation. Less than a week later she was rearrested here but again released. On September 27, 1934, two days before the Richmond jailbreak, she was taken into custody there on a charge of being a person not of good character and later released on condition that she leave the city.

Leaves for New York.

Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott, Washington policeman who was given a large share of the credit for ending, at least temporarily, the depredations of the Tri-State gang last year, left the Capital yesterday for New York on orders of Inspector Frank S. W. Burke.

At the same time it was revealed that a month ago Washington police received a tip Legenza was a patient in a New York hospital. An extensive canvass resulted but failed to uncover the gangster, who was registered under the name of Walter Stewart.

—Fay said he was "morally certain" they were connected with the abduction last November in Philadelphia of William Weiss. Although an $8,000 ransom was paid, Weiss has not been seen since.

This kidnaping was followed by a $48,000 hold-up of the Philadelphia Electric Co. office, in which 50 employes were lined up. The gang was sought also in connection with this case.

Police also sought Mais in the mysterious wounding of Mrs. Leonora Gosslyn Fontaine, of Washington, at Upper Darby, Pa., in August, 1934. She was said to have been shot because she knew "too much."

Mais' mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, of Philadelphia, was arrested, taken to Richmond, and indicted as an accessory to her son's escape. The State contended she smuggled the "canned chicken" guns into the jail. She was released, however, without being tried.

Virginia Will Speed Plans for Execution

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Virginia authorities moved swiftly today to bring Robert Mais and Walter Legenza to a postponed end in the electric chair with a minimum of delay.

Richmond police expressed a determination to take no chances in handling the gangsters who shot their way out of the city jail, where they were held awaiting electrocution for the murder of a mail truck driver. The toll of the jail break was one policeman shot to death, two guards wounded and the suicide shortly afterward of another guard.

Immediately upon hearing that Federal agents, assisted by New York and Philadelphia police, had arrested Mais and Legenza, with Marie McKeever and two other gangsters in New York, Richmond police sought information about procedure required to bring the condemned men back to Virginia.

Extradition Papers Ready.

Even before a reply to their query was received, Commonwealth's Attorney T. Gray Haddon called Gov. Peery and secured extradition papers.

Tonight Mr. Haddon said he had talked by telephone with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the bureau of investigation, Department of Justice, Washington, and was told that Federal authorities wanted assurance that the gangsters would be closely guarded and placed immediately in the Virginia Penitentiary when brought to this State.

Mr. Haddon said he gave this assurance and was told that Mr. Hoover would communicate with him in the morning, letting him know then what procedure would be followed and whether extradition would be necessary or whether Mais and Legenza could be brought here on Federal authority.

Meanwhile, Chief of Police R. B. Jordan announced that he was prepared to head a picked squad of nine officers who would guard the prisoners on the trip from New York to Virginia.

By breaking jail and remaining fugitives beyond the 90-day limit in which an appeal could have been taken, Mais and Legenza lost any opportunity to escape the death sentence by legal procedure and all that now is necessary is to set a new date for their execution, it was pointed out.

New World Bank Head May Again Be American

Basil, Switzerland, Jan. 18 (AP).—Leon Fraser, who will retire as president of the Bank for International Settlements when his term expires this spring, may be succeeded by another American.

Directors of the bank, in disclosing today that Fraser had declined reelection at their last meeting Monday, indicated they generally favor an American to head the bank as being more neutral and better able to harmonize conflicting European interests.

Nice Indorses Prince Georges Gaming Drive

But Declines to Take Part in Move Until County Authorities Fail.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18. (Spl.). A further blow at illegal gambling in Prince Georges County was struck today when Gov. Harry W. Nice informed a delegation of county clergymen that he fully commended the efforts of the Prince Georges Board of Commissioners in their anti-gambling drive.

Gov. Nice also praised the stand of the county clergymen in the gambling situation, brought to a climax several weeks ago by the closing of the La Fontaine establishment on Bladensburg road. He promised full cooperation of constituted State authorities in maintaining law and order in the county.

The Rev. Walter P. Plumley, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Mount Rainier, was chairman and spokesman for the visiting delegation. The group also included the Rev. J. G. Lambrides, pastor of the Laurel First Baptist Church; the Rev. R. K. Nevitt, pastor of the Mount Rainier Methodist Church; the Rev. William Keith Custis, pastor of the Riverdale Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Fred L. Miller, pastor of the Mount Rainier Christian Church.

Following the conference, members of the delegation expressed themselves as fully satisfied with the Governor's stand and believed the county commissioners would be further strengthened in their efforts to break up the "gambling ring."

The delegation failed, however, to obtain the Governor's support in its plea for an investigation of county government to determine why illegal gambling has been permitted to "operate unmolested for nearly 15 years."

"The Prince Georges authorities appear to be making every effort to enforce gambling laws in the county and I wish them all success in the movement. Until it is proven that they are not capable of breaking up illegal gambling, I feel that it is not within my jurisdiction to act," the Governor said.

Egbert F. Tingley, of Hyattsville, member from Prince Georges County in the House of Delegates, joined the delegation in its conference with the Governor and expressed the belief that the county commissioners and police force were making every possible effort to stop illegal gambling.

The resolution adopted unanimously recently by a group of 19 Prince Georges clergymen, representing as many churches, and presented yesterday to Gov. Nice, read as follows:

"We do hereby commend his Excellency, Harry W. Nice, Governor of Maryland, for his courageous opposition to gambling in the State of Maryland, as publicly announced prior to his election.

"We do hereby urge his Excellency to give his earnest support to the commissioners of Prince Georges County in their attempt to rid the county of illegal gambling.

"We do, furthermore, urge his Excellency, in harmony with his preelection assurances, to institute a probe of county officials to determine why illegal gambling has been allowed to operate unmolested for nearly 15 years."

Newspaper Ads Cost $490,000,000 in 1934

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Advertisers spent approximately $490,000,000 for space in the daily newspapers of the country in 1934, according to estimates tonight by the magazine Editor and Publisher.

The year's lineage was 10.6 per cent ahead of 1933, and 1.2 per cent ahead of 1932, although 37.9 per cent below the peak year of 1929. This was the first time in the depression that a year had exceeded the preceding year in daily newspaper advertising. For 15 consecutive months now, each month's lineage has been greater than that of the corresponding month a year earlier.

Graft Charges In D. C. Heard By Crime Body

House Sub-Committee Set to Call Figures Close to Underworld.

be heard in executive sessions, under oath, with only committee members and newspaper representatives present. Some of their testimony will not be made public immediately. Representative William T. Schulte, of Indiana, sponsored this plan.

There was a flurry of joshing when a committee member jumped from his chair out of range of camera lenses when photographers sought to get pictures of the full committee.

"You're not afraid some of these gangsters will put you on the spot, are you?" laughed Representative Schulte.

A sharply contrasting picture of conditions in Washington was verbally painted on the floor of the House by Representative Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, chairman of the House District appropriations sub-committee, and Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas.

Their praise of the efficiency of the present police force and their declarations that Washington suffered very little from crime were voiced in a successful battle to defeat a proposal by Representative Randolph to add 35 policemen to the present authorized strength of the department. The force was reduced by 35 men in 1933 and 1934.

"Our committee," Representative Cannon insisted, "made an exhaustive investigation both as to crime conditions in Washington and elsewhere and the number of policemen in Washington and other cities.

"There is vastly less crime in Washington than in the average American city. There are vastly more police per capita in Washington than in other cities. The wages paid police here are much in excess of those paid elsewhere."

Transient Problem Cited.

"Did the committee take into consideration the 100,000 to 200,000 transients who crowd Washington each average day?" Representative Gerald J. Boileau, of Wisconsin, asked. Mr. Cannon admitted it had not. Installation of traffic lights and radios in police automobiles had made 65 policemen available for patrol duty, Cannon and Blanton agreed. The Texan said the metropolitan force was supplemented by others. He mentioned the Park, White House, Department of Agriculture, Capitol and House and Senate Office Building forces.

Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, declared that traffic conditions and the large number of accidents demanded more policemen. Turning to Representative Cannon, he said:

"Why, following the logic of the gentleman from Missouri we should reduce and further reduce the number of police to insure better and better conditions and fewer deaths."

The Randolph amendment was beaten, 40 to 43.

The crime committee is to meet in executive session at 7 o'clock Monday. It is not planned to hear any witnesses at that meeting, Representative Randolph said, but to go over in greater detail the program to be followed.

French to Use Passion Isle, Weird Realm of Mad 'King'

Cruiser Leaves Los Angeles Monday to Occupy Coral Reef; Its Lagoon Held Ideal Landing Place for Navy Planes in Pacific.

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP).—The French cruiser Jeanne D'Arc will leave here Monday to take formal possession of the tropical Isle of Passion, 1,300 miles west of the Panama Canal, as a naval landing field in the Pacific.

This desolate, coral-ringed formation, about 1 mile square, has in its center a lagoon ideal for use by seaplanes.

Called Clipperton Island on the maps, it was the locale years ago of a weird tale from which it derived its name, "the Isle of Passion."

A mad Negro reputedly proclaimed himself king of the island after all the other male inhabitants had perished. He decried that all women on the island become inmates of his harem. One night one of the women crushed his skull with a hammer.

The United States gunboat Yorktown stopped there in 1917 and discovered the tragedy. The body of the "king" remained unburied. Twenty rude crosses marked the graves of other inhabitants.

For 35 years the island's ownership was disputed between France and Mexico, the King of Italy, acting as mediator, finally ending the dispute by awarding the island to France in 1931.

Shipmasters have been giving the island a wide berth ever since Cortez discovered it in 1523, it being one of the most dangerous coral reefs in its region of the Pacific. It resembles a white sail from the distance, its highest point being only 60 feet and most of it only 12 feet above high water.

D. C. Policeman to Face Charge of Intoxication

Policeman John C. Baum, attached to the Sixth Precinct, was ordered yesterday to face Trial Board action on intoxication charges.

He was suspended Thursday by Capt. Joseph Pierson after allegedly failing to report through patrol-box system. Scheduled to report at 3 p. m., Baum reputedly missed the "call" and was suspended when he appeared at the station house at 4 p. m.

Takoma Park Seller Asks Court to Make Board Renew Permit.

Action to compel the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board to renew his beer and light wine permit was begun in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Harry M. Ballos, 317 Cedar street, Takoma Park.

Ballos complained that his permit expired January 10, and although a majority of the property owners within a radius of 600 feet offered no objection to his application for a renewal, it was rejected.

He charged that the board, composed of three members, had split on his case, two of the members voting against his license and the third voting in his favor. The two who voted against the renewal, Chairman George W. Offutt and Isaac M. Gans, said they acknowledged the property owners were not hostile, but that others outside the 600-foot limit were. Mrs. Agnes Mason, the third member, asked that the license be renewed.

Justice Joseph W. Cox ordered the board to show cause by January 24 why the license should not be granted.

Hauptmann's Trial Retraces Ransom Trail

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP).—The accusing dollar signs of the Lindbergh ransom money studded the court record today, as Bruno Richard Hauptmann entered the thirteenth day of the murder trial.

Q. Where do you say your map indicates Dr. Condon's residence? A. On the east side of Decatur avenue.

Dr. Condon's residence was about 4½ miles from St. Raymond's Cemetery, Eichin said.

Reilly asked him what routes could be used to go from the Hauptmann house to Woodlawn of St. Raymond's Cemeteries.

Q. There are a half a dozen different streets could be used? A. Yes.

On redirect Attorney General David T. Wilentz asked a few questions.

Q. With particular reference to Woodlawn Cemetery, the territory surrounding it, is it thickly populated and dense, or is it quiet, sort of country appearing? A. It is quiet, sort of country appearing.

Q. Are there any residents north, south, east or west in the vicinity? A. Not in the immediate vicinity.

Q. How many hundred feet away would the first house be?—A. Approximately 1,000 feet.

Q. Northeast of the cemetery, how many residences?—A. In that particular block, one residence.

Q. Is that also a country area?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Is it a quiet place at night?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Now tell me how far it is from Mr. Hauptmann's to Woodlawn Cemetery, and to St. Raymond's Cemetery as a man would go by auto?—A. From Hauptmann's home to Woodlawn Cemetery is 2.7 miles. To St. Raymond's, 4.3.

Calls Arresting Officer.

Wilentz then called Sergt. John Wallace, of the State police.

Q. On September 18, 1934, tell us what you did?—A. With New York police and Department of Justice agents, we went to the vicinity of Hauptmann's home in the Bronx and remained there until 2 a. m., when we were relieved. We returned at 7 a. m. on the 19th. The officers split into three groups.

Q. What happened about 9 o'clock with reference to Hauptmann?—A. The defendant left the residence at 1279 East 222d street about 9 o'clock.

Q. Did he leave to take his wife to work?—A. Not as far as I know.

Q. What did you do next?—A. We saw the defendant again. He came out of the driveway in a Dodge.

The detective told how the police followed Hauptmann and arrested him.

He was searched, Wallace continued, and a wallet was found in his left hip pocket. There was $29 in it, including a $20 bill, which when checked, the witness added, was found to be a "Lindbergh ransom bill."

"The Last of $300."

Q. Did he make any explanation of the $20 gold certificate?—A. He stated the bill was the last of $300 in gold certificates he had had in his possession during the past few years.

Q. Was he asked if he had any more?—A. He said he did not have more, but he had $120 in gold pieces at home in a strong box."

Q. Now when you got back to the Hauptmann home, what happened then?—A. Hauptmann was brought into the Hauptmann bedroom and a search was made of the room and a strong box was found containing the gold coins.

Q. Did the papers in the box occupy all the space?—A. It was pretty well crowded.

The party then went to the Second Precinct Police Station and a statement was written by Hauptmann, Wallace said.

Q. Do you know whether those words were dictated or spelled?—A. I never heard any words spelled to the defendant.

Q. Well, what did you hear?—A. I heard the words dictated and Hauptmann wrote them on a piece of paper.

Q. Was Mrs. Hauptmann in and about the premises at the time of the arrest?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. Did you find a wooden plane?—A. Yes, in the garage.

Wilentz brought out that the plane had been initialed by the police officers but otherwise was in the condition as found. It was offered in evidence.

Finds Gold Certificates.

Q. What else did you find at the house?—A. With Mrs. Hauptmann and the police officers, I found two packages in the south wall of the garage.

Q. What was in the two packages?—A. In the two packages there were 100 gold certificates in one package and 83 gold certificates in the other.

Q. Ten dollar certificates? A. Yes, $10 certificates.

Q. What did you do?—A. The money was counted in the presence of Mrs. Hauptmann. We took one of the bills and checked with the ransom money serial numbers.

Q. Now the New York police officers continued to search in and about the garage after that?—A. They did.

Q. What did they find?—A. A gallon shellac can buried under a work-bench.

Q. What was found in the can?—A. Two cloths were in the top of the can and two packages wrapped in newspaper.

Q. These are the two towels (Wilentz displayed the cloths)?—A. Yes.

Found Money in Can.

Q. I understand you found some money in the shellac can.—A. Yes.

Q. How much money?—A. $11,930.

Q. What kind of money?—A. Lindbergh ransom money gold certificates.

Q. Are these bills in the packages just as they were found?—A. Yes.

Q. So that there in that can were the bills as found?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. As you walked into the garage was the can concealed? A. Yes. It was underneath the work bench near the south wall of the garage. There were two uprights, which concealed the can from view.

Q. So it was under the bench, between the uprights, in a compartment concealed by a wide board?—A. Yes.

The detective then recounted how he returned to the police station and confronted Hauptmann with the money found.

Q. Did you ask if he had any more money?—A. I did. He said no.

Q. Any more gold certificates?—A. He said no.

Q. Any more of Col. Lindbergh's money?—A. He said no.

Hauptmann said the money had been in a shoe box and was wet, Wallace related.

Neighbor Takes Stand.

Mrs. Ella Achenbach followed Wallace. She said she lived six or seven blocks from Hauptmann's home.

Q. Did you see Mr. Bruno Richard Hauptmann after the kidnaping?—A. One or two days after the kidnaping I saw Mrs. Hauptmann and she said they had just come back from a trip.

Then came Mrs. Hauptmann's outburst.

Q. Did you observe Hauptmann that morning?—A. When he went down my front steps he kind of supported himself on the side of the stoop.

Attorney Reilly took the witness.

Q. After Anna Hauptmann came back from Europe in 1928 with your children did she present you with a bill?—A. Yes.

Q. And you refused to pay it?—A. I guess that's right.

Detective James Petrosino, of the New York City police, took the witness stand to tell how he searched Hauptmann's home September 20, the day after the arrest.

James M. Cashman, New York detective, came next to tell of finding the plane in a chest of tools in Hauptmann's garage.

Charles F. W. Enkler, a New York police department carpenter, was called to tell of demolishing the Hauptmann garage, after the arrest.

Stock Dealings Reviewed.

William Mulligan, customer's man for Steiner, Rouse & Co., New York brokerage firm, took the stand and told of Hauptmann's stock dealings through the firm.

Hauptmann, he said, carried on an account in his own name for a time and later transferred it to his wife, in her maiden name, Anna Schoeffler. Mrs. Hauptmann, he added, never appeared to use the account and all transactions through it were made by her husband.

The customer's man, on cross-examination, said Hauptmann came to the brokerage house frequently.

Q. Did he come with anyone else?—A. I think alone.

Q. Do you know a man named Fisch?—A. Yes.

Q. Was Fisch a customer of yours?—A. No.

Q. You saw him there with Hauptmann a number of times?—A. Five or six.

Q. When?—A. In the spring of 1933, late spring or summer.

Q. Did Hauptmann tell you he was in business?—A. Yes. He said he was in the fur business.

Q. Did he say with whom he was in business?—A. Yes, Isador Fisch.

Q. Have you any independent knowledge Fisch traded through Hauptmann's account?—A. He couldn't.

Q. He could give Hauptmann the money and ask him "Buy five, buy ten?"—A. Yes.

Q. Do you know where Hauptmann got the money?—A. No.

Judge Accepts Student Bonds For Speeding

U. of M. Boys Promise to Preach Gospel of Careful Driving.

Assured that they would return to the campus and preach the "gospel" of careful driving, Judge Isaac R. Hitt, sitting in Traffic Court, yesterday accepted the personal bond of three University of Maryland students, who were charged with speeding in the District.

The students, Louis F. Slagg, Herbert Goldstein and Hugh A. Ferry, gathered together in the hallway immediately after accepting the judge's proposal and discussed ways and means of carrying out his orders.

The police drive against traffic violators was aided by yesterday's snow, and only 53 persons were arraigned on 61 charges. Five persons were locked up overnight for their appearance in court yesterday.

Only 16 speeders were on the docket, and 22 persons faced charges of violating parking regulations, three for passing stop signs and one each for passing a red light and failing to give a hand signal. But $1,090 was collected in fines and forfeitures.

Meanwhile, charging that the Commissioners have no authority under the traffic laws to declare a "snow removal emergency," Attorneys Michael J. Colbert and F. Joseph Donohue filed a motion before Judge Hitt to quash information filed against Attorney Charles E. Ford, charged with parking between 2 and 8 a. m., in violation of new regulations.

Policeman J. W. Musselman, the defense said, placed traffic tickets on Ford's car Tuesday and Wednesday nights as it stood on Sixteenth street. Even if the Commissioners have the authority to declare such an emergency, the motion charges that on Tuesday night there was no emergency and, therefore, Ford violated no law.

The defense further claimed that such a regulation is "restrictive legislation," since it does not apply to all people on all streets and the Constitution prohibits "class legislation."

Leimbach Funeral To Be Held Today

He Was National Park Seminary Official.

Funeral services for George Matthew Leimbach, secretary-treasurer of the National Park Seminary, Forest Glen, Md., for the last 31 years, who died of pneumonia at his residence, 102 West Underwood street, Chevy Chase, Md., Thursday, will be held at Chambers Funeral Chapel today at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Born in Washington 65 years ago, Mr. Leimbach had lived here all his life, and was well known in musical circles in his youth as a master of the violin and viola.

He and three associates at the seminary appeared frequently in programs of chamber music until about 15 years ago. For many years he directed the seminary's musical activities, supervising many Gilbert and Sullivan operettas.

School Contract Awarded.

The contract for construction of the addition of ten rooms and a gymnasium to the Alice Deal Junior High School, at Davenport and Howard streets northwest, was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to Birchett & Atkins, Inc., of Washington. The low bid was $135,983. Completion of the addition is expected within seven months.

State to Stress Money Motive In Kidnaping

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP).—The State of New Jersey proposes to weave $50,000 of unexplained, increased wealth into the financial worth of Bruno Richard Hauptmann next week in its effort to prove him the Lindbergh baby killer with money as his motive.

"Money, money, lots of money," said Attorney General David T. Wilentz, in his opening address to the Hauptmann murder trial jury. And money will be the topic of courtroom discussion when the session resumes Monday.

The then unknown German carpenter, and his wife, Anna, the State will seek to show, went on a spending spree that began about April 2, 1932, when the ransom was paid, and continued until his arrest last September.

Enjoyed Luxuries.

The silent artisan and his wife practiced a pinching frugality before Col. Charles A. Lindbergh paid the ransom through an intermediary to shadowy "John," the State contends. His net worth just before the crime was committed was approximately $5,000, the records allegedly show.

His net worth, the same records indicate, when he was arrested last September, was exactly $19,119.12.

In the intervening two and one-half years, the attorney general and his staff said they would show next week, the Hauptmanns enjoyed an ease of living they never before experienced.

U. S. Expert to Testify.

They stopped working, the State says. The evidence will show a new $400 radio, trips to Florida, hunting excursions to Maine, a tour across the country, the wife's visit to Germany and a "surprising" amount of stock market speculation by the husband.

William Frank, of the U. S. Internal Revenue Bureau, has spent many days since the arrest tracing Hauptmann's financial transactions. He will come to court Monday.

The State attorneys expect him to tell in detail, using Hauptmann's own accounts to some extent, how the defendant had in his possession since April 2, 1932, the unearned sum of $49,960.

J. T. Arrington Is Dead at 70

Funeral Today for Retired Official of Sewing Machine Firm.

J. T. Arrington, 70, former superintendent of the stores of the Singer Sewing Machine Co. in Virginia, Delaware and Maryland, died yesterday at his home, 16 Girard street northeast.

Born in Franklin County, Va., Mr. Arrington was educated in the public schools there. He taught for a while in the county schools, then joined the sewing machine firm, with which he was associated for many years. He retired January 1.

While he was in Roanoke, Va., as district manager, Mr. Arrington was chairman of the Republican committee, serving for several years. He was nominated for the Virginia House of Delegates, but refused to accept the nomination because of business interests.

He is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Audrey V. Kenyon and Mrs. Harriet B. Fennell, and two sons, J. Guy and G. Fuller L. Arrington, all of Washington.

Funeral services will be held at his home at 1 p. m. today. Burial will be in Monocacy Cemetery, Beallsville, Md.

Walter Hayward Named Bank Head

Other Officers Chosen by Seat Pleasant Office.

Walter J. Hayward yesterday was elected president of the Seat Pleasant (Md.) Bank at its annual stockholders' meeting. Seven other officers and 13 directors were selected.

Frederick L. Wight, jr., was given the office of first vice president; W. Clinton Brown, second vice president, and Daniel G. Joseph, third vice president.

Leo J. Naughton was reelected cashier, while Margaret S. Gwyer was selected as his assistant. Walter L. Green, Hyattsville attorney, was named counsel, and George N. Wells was elected chairman of the board of directors.

The directors selected include, in addition to Hayward, Wight Brown, Joseph Wells, Naughton and Green, Reginald L. Nalley, J. C. A. Cameron, Mendel Behrend, B. E. Behrend and F. L. Watkins.

Additional Road Funds Needed, Shirley Says

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Additional revenue will have to be forthcoming from some source before much progress can be made on building the primary road system of Virginia, H. G. Shirley, chairman of the State highway commission, told the Roanoke Lions Club last night.

The taking over of the secondary road system by the State was pictured by Mr. Shirley as having imposed a severe financial drain on the highway department. The use of convict labor also was seen by Mr. Shirley as contributing to increased cost of road building because of "the inefficiency" of such labor.

ogy to the court for Mrs. Hauptmann's outburst and for Hauptmann's action of yesterday. It was accepted.

Then it occurred to everybody that sitting over in the witness chair was Mrs. Achenbach glaring through her spectacles at Anna Hauptmann. Mrs. Achenbach was not through yet. She had a bigger blow to deliver against the Hauptmanns.

"Now, Mrs. Achenbach," Wilentz said, "what else happened that day Mrs. Hauptmann came over to your house?"

"She was there a while," Mrs. Achenbach replied, "and then Richard came over. He was walking with a limp. He said he had sprained his ankle and he sat in my parlor and massaged his leg."

With those words Mrs. Achenbach built another brick wall of circumstantial evidence against Hauptmann, for it is the State's contention that the Lindbergh baby was killed when the ladder down which the kidnaper was carrying it broke. The State further believes that the baby died instantly when its head struck the ground, causing a skull fracture 2 inches in diameter.

Defense Unprepared.

Now, if the baby was killed in this fall, the State argues, the man who was carrying it must have been injured, too.

Among the people in the courtroom who were not prepared for such testimony were the counsel for the defense. Reilly started cross-examination, striding toward the witness chair as though he intended to tear Mrs. Achenbach to pieces.

He forced from her an admission that several years ago Mrs. Hauptmann took one of the Achenbach children to Europe. When they got back from the trip, Mrs. Hauptmann presented an expense bill to Mrs. Achenbach.

"And you never have paid that bill to this day, have you?" Reilly thundered.

"Oh, my, is that what Anna Hauptmann said?" yelled Mrs. Achenbach angrily. "I paid that bill to her and I will ask my husband to prove it for me."

Reilly pounded away at her for half an hour, but when he got through all he had achieved was:

He made Mrs. Achenbach admit that she didn't smell any liniment or arnica on the day Hauptmann visited her.

He made her admit that Hauptmann did not come into her house on a cane or crutches.

Hauptmann Rebukes Wife.

During a lull in the session Hauptmann leaned across to his wife and rebuked her for interrupting the court proceedings.

"What did you do that for?" he asked her. "You'll only hurt our case."

"I just couldn't help it," Mrs. Hauptmann replied meekly.

Late in the day the State carried into court a board from Hauptmann's own home to add to the charge that he is the kidnaper and murderer.

On it was written:

"2974 Decatur ave."

That is the home of Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" who was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's emissary in the ransom negotiations.

Below that was written:

That was Jafsie's telephone number at the time he was negotiating with the kidnaper—a man whom he identified as Hauptmann.

Hauptmann has told many stories about those scribblings on the board. At first he said he put them there because he had been reading about the Lindbergh case in the newspapers and was interested enough to write down the address and telephone number of "Jafsie."

Then he changed his story and said Isidor Fisch had written them.

The State brought Inspector Henry Bruckman of the New York Police Department to the witness stand today. He swore that Hauptmann had confessed to New York authorities that he wrote the figures on the board in the closet.

Minor witnesses today included police officers who told of finding the $14,600 ransom money on the premises of Hauptmann's home. They also identified the carpenter's kit and tools which were admitted as evidence.

The trial will resume Monday morning.

Roosevelt Likes 'Alphabet' Bill, Sirovich Says

Declares President Favors Civil Service Rating for Agencies.

Representative William I. Sirovich (Democrat), of New York, yesterday declared that President Roosevelt has approved the "principle" of everything in his bill to bring employes of New Deal agencies into the civil service.

As chairman of a special subcommittee handling the measure, Sirovich went over his bill, point by point, with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday. It would affect drastically almost all of the 100,000 employes of the emergency agencies.

The bill, introduced Wednesday in the House, would require a non-competitive examination of these employes, given by the Civil Service Commission, to determine their fitness for their jobs. The examinations must be taken within one year.

Only positions exempted would be those filled by election or those exempted by special Executive orders of the President, acting on recommendations of department heads. No temporary appointment in the Executive branch of the Government or the District of Columbia may exceed six months in any two-year period unless by Presidential order, it is specified.

The Sirovich bill also sets up a collective bargaining system for Government workers, in that those who have been discharged could appeal to a special board consisting of a representative of the Civil Service Commission, a department representative and a labor delegate named by employes.

The bill also provides for optional retirement after 30 years' service, and it would reclassify Federal workers to prevent one employe from receiving $6,000 a year for doing the same work for which another gets $1,200.

Second Roosevelt Ball Planned at Shoreham

Plans yesterday were nearing completion for the second President Roosevelt birthday ball, at the Shoreham Hotel, January 30, at 10 p. m. Proceeds from the affair will be used to combat infantile paralysis.

Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson and Mrs. John R. Williams are in charge of arrangements. Assisting are Raymond T. Baker, Admiral Mark Bristol and Mrs. Reeve Lewis.

A reception committee is being chosen by Mrs. Williams. The floor committee will be headed by Capt. Edwin M. Watson, U. S. N., and Miss Audrey Campbell will be in charge of the music.

Payne, Suffering Cold, Is Taken to Hospital

Judge John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, was in George Washington University Hospital last night suffering from a severe cold and bronchitis.

Dr. Walter Bloedorn and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Judge Payne's physicians, ordered him to the hospital from his home, 1601 H street northwest, where he has been ill for several days.

Last night they described the condition of Judge Payne, who is 79 years old, as "quite satisfactory."

Moffett Gains Confirmation; Long Protests

Huey Will Ask Senate on Monday to Reconsider Appointment.

Appointment of James A. Moffett, of New York, as Federal housing administrator yesterday was confirmed by the Senate, but Senator Huey P. (Kingfish) Long, of Louisiana, served formal notice he will ask the chamber to reconsider its action Monday.

Long, who was not in the Senate when Moffett's name was called up, indicated he would oppose Moffett because of his former Standard Oil connections. The "Kingfish" has been in bitter controversy with Standard Oil interests in Louisiana, growing out of his recent State oil tax.

"I am tired of the Government reaching into the Standard Oil Co. for officials to take its front row seats," Long told reporters.

Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, who objected to Moffett's immediate confirmation when the question came up in the Senate recently, was not present yesterday. It was said he has withdrawn objections. Reports have been widely circulated that Moffett may resign in a few weeks.

The Senate also confirmed yesterday the nomination of George Fried, hero of many famous sea rescues, while captain of the liner George Washington, as supervising inspector for the Bureau of Navigation of the Steamboat Inspection Service.

The Senate Finance Committee unanimously approved the appointment of Miss Josephine Roche, of Colorado, as Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

Mrs. L. A. Dashiell Heads Scout Board

Prince Georges Council Elects 1935 Officers.

Mrs. Louis A. Dashiell, of Hyattsville, has been elected commissioner of the newly organized Girl Scout Council of Prince Georges County, Md. Other officers of the council are Mrs. George M. Harris, of Decatur Heights, deputy commissioner; Mrs. Laura Purdum, of Hyattsville, secretary, and Mrs. Harry A. Boswell, of Hyattsville, treasurer. A constitution and by-laws were adopted.

A leaders' association to function under the council will be organized next Thursday at 8 p. m., at the First Methodist Episcopal Church South, of Hyattsville.

With the organization of the county council, District No. 7 of the District of Columbia Council ceased to exist and the county group has become the governing body of Girl Scouts in the county.

Laundry Wins Error Writ.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—A writ of error was granted today by the Supreme Court of Appeals to the Standard Laundry Service which complained of a judgment of the circuit court of Arlington County awarding Louis Pastelnich $1,000 on an agreement for employment.

Reilly Attacks Rumor He Aims To Quit Defense

Serious Disagreement of Hauptmann's Lawyers Is Admitted.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP).—Defense counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann admitted tonight that there had been serious disagreement between lawyers for the defense, but insisted there "is no dissension."

"You couldn't get three lawyers in a room together without finding a disagreement on some matters," Edward J. Reilly declared.

"However, you may say that none of the counsel plans to withdraw from the case, and that we're going to stick to the end."

Reilly expected the prosecution to end its case either late Monday or Tuesday afternoon.

"We will be ready to start on Wednesday," he said, "and the first witness to be called will be the defendant. I expect to have him on the stand, under direct and cross-examination, for perhaps an entire day.

"Hauptmann Not Cracking."

"He will be followed by Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, and then I have 50 more witnesses I would like to bring.

"Hauptmann is not cracking, the defense is not cracking, and the report that I was planning to withdraw from the case is now three days old and getting older every day."

Hauptmann, on the stand, will speak in English and refuse the services of an interpreter.

C. Lloyd Fisher, defense counsel associate, will make the opening address for the defense. A motion will be made for a directed verdict, on the grounds that the State has not proved any connection with the crime.

Promises Surprises.

"Have you cautioned the Hauptmanns against any such outbursts as they have made?" Reilly was asked. He smiled.

"Officially—yes," he said.

Regarding the panel of wood taken from Hauptmann's closet in the Bronx, Reilly inferred the New York police asked him a "lot of trick questions" which made it look as though Hauptmann admitted writing the telephone number and address of Dr. John F. Condon on the board.

"We will be able to prove he never wrote it," Reilly declared.

"Is it still your theory that a gang committed the crime?" he was asked.

"It certainly is," he replied. "We have a theory that will hold water, too. There are going to be some surprises when we present our case."

Staunton Reports $85,000 in Loans

Staunton, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The Staunton Production Credit Association wound up the first year of its existence this week, reports of J. Waller Callison, secretary-treasurer, showing that loans totaling approximately $85,000 had been made to 175 borrowers.

The board of directors in the ensuing year will be G. K. Foster, John H. Hoover, P. B. Day, S. H. Moore and J. M. McLaughlin. Foster was reelected president, Hoover, vice president, and Callison, secretary-treasurer.

The association, which is affiliated with Federal farm lending agencies, covers a half-dozen counties in this section of the State. About 75 men attended the annual meeting held here.

Textile Union Plans Strike In the Spring

Organizers Now Active; Labor Alliance Sought in Five Industries.

(Associated Press.)

Labor sources who declined to be quoted by name disclosed yesterday that the textile workers already are laying careful plans for another Nation-wide strike in the spring—a walkout they predict will rival the strike which raged for four weeks last September.

While textile leaders decline to discuss it publicly, they have confided privately that elaborate strike preparations are under way. Francis J. Gorman, vice president of the textile union, for several weeks has devoted each week end to addresses at union rallies, alternating between North and South.

Leaders Active Here.

The personnel of the Washington headquarters of the United Textile Workers has been enlarged. Organizers are busy. On Monday President McMahon and the various regional vice presidents will go over the entire situation.

The textile workers say they are particularly incensed at what they say is inability of the National Textile Labor Relations Board to enforce its ruling, although loud in their praise of its decisions. They claim discrimination against union members continues to be rampant, stretch-out abuses continuing, and in some sections increasing, and wage levels still unsatisfactory.

Worker Alliance Sought.

Meanwhile, claiming they have information that some employers are joining in a move against unionization of workers, labor leaders yesterday disclosed plans for an alliance among employes of five great industries.

The unions were named as those of the textile, oil, steel, automobile and tobacco industries. They have an aggregate membership of almost 4,000,000. Gorman launched the move.

The plan is to decide definitely what course to follow at a meeting here January 29 of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor.

Sloan Denies Charges Of Move Against Unions

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—George A. Sloan, chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority, said tonight he knew nothing of employers joining in a move against unionization of workers in any of the five great industries mentioned in Washington by Francis A. Gorman, textile workers leader.

"I am sure," he said, "the report is without foundation."

Comdr. E. R. Eberle Dies at Age of 45

Son of Former Chief of Naval Operations.

Lieut. Comdr. Edward Randolph Eberle, United States Navy, retired, son of the late Admiral Edward W. Eberle, former chief of naval operations, died yesterday in Providence, R. I.

The Navy Department learned that Lieut. Comdr. Eberle was ill only a short time. He had served here aboard the Presidential yacht Mayflower, and also at the Navy Department.

He was born in San Francisco in 1890, and commissioned in the regular Navy in January, 1916, as an assistant paymaster. He was retired for physical disability in September, 1930.

Surviving is his widow, Mrs. Mildred North Eberle. Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Robinette Services Will Be Held Today

Coast Guard Veteran Was Electrotype Expert.

Funeral services for Fred G. Robinette, 54, mechanical superintendent of the United States Coast Guard and Geodetic Survey, who died Wednesday night at his home in Lanham, Md., will be held at Whitfield M. E. Church, Lanham, today at 2 p. m.

Mr. Robinette was born in Reading, Pa., and came to Washington as a young man, attending Bliss Electrical School and George Washington University.

Entering the service of the Coast Guard and Geodetic Survey in 1903, Mr. Robinette became interested particularly in the electrotyping process and contributed many improvements to that line.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lillian Robinette, and three children, Mrs. Dorothy R. Smith, Mrs. Marjorie R. Stromme and Fred G. Robinette, jr.

Dr. Ruhland Weighs Health Job Offer

A reply from Dr. George C. Ruhland, health commissioner of Syracuse, N. Y., who yesterday was offered the position of District health officer, is being awaited by the District Commissioners.

Dr. Ruhland said he would weigh the offer for a rew days and might not decide until he returns to Syracuse. "There is a possibility," he said, "that I may become a citizen of the District."

Directly after his arrival here he went into a conference with the Commissioners, who asked him to take the job. Before making known his decision, he said he would like to study the present health organization.

Dr. Ruhland then held a prolonged discussion with Dr. Edward J. Schwartz, acting health officer, who explained the present health organization and the problems in public health peculiar to the District.

Justice Denies Beard Protest At Indictment

Second Gambling Charge Not Voided by First, Proctor Holds.

Justice James M. Proctor, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday overruled a second attack by Sam R. Beard on an indictment charging Beard with gambling.

Beard had contended that a second indictment charging himself and 12 codefendants with conspiring to violate the gaming laws and with actually violating them, was invalid because the first indictment charging the same offenses was valid by a ruling of the District Supreme Court.

John J. Sirica, Maurice McInerney and Martin F. O'Donoghue, attorneys for Beard, attacked the first indictment because of the presence on the grand jury of a woman they claimed ineligible for such service. That move went against Beard.

To make certain of the validity of the indictment, Roger Robb and John W. Fihelly, assistant United States attorneys, obtained a new one, with the disputed juror replaced by another. The attorneys then asserted that if the first indictment was valid, the second one couldn't be because of the replaced juror. The argument met with slight consideration from Justice Proctor.

The attorneys were allowed until Wednesday to file demurrers to the indictment charging that even if the indictments are good, they do not cite acts sufficient to constitute a crime.

Business Men Drive to Better Street Lights

Clarendon Committee to Complete Estimates for County.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Having adopted as a slogan, "Better Street Lights," the Clarendon Business Men's Association last night instructed a special committee to complete estimates of cost of installation and present them to the county board.

President George M. Yeatman said the project has the indorsement of County Manager Roy S. Braden. In fact, Yeatman said, the county manager is planning a county-wide lighting system.

"There is nothing more badly needed in Arlington County today than modern street lights," Yeatman said, "and the association will not stop its fight for them until there is positive assurance given by the county authorities that there will be some improvement."

The president announced the appointment of a special committee, consisting of I. B. Warner, H. W. Beattie, T. E. McDough, Herbert Galliher and Samuel Cohen to plan for a get-together supper. The committee was instructed to make a report with a complete program at the February meeting.

A letter was read from Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintedent of public welfare in Arlington County, expressing the thanks of the welfare board for the cooperation of the association in making the Christmas season a happy one for the less fortunate.

Resolutions have been adopted by the association approving the plan for the widening of the Lee highway in the vicinity of the Old Dominion Bank Building. Copies have been sent to members of the county board.

Meeting last night at the home of Mrs. Joseph McDonnell, Mrs. Lillian Edwards, president of Arlington Legion Auxiliary Unit, No. 139, announced the appointment of Mrs. DeLana Robertson as department legislative chairman for Virginia. The appointment was made by Mrs. Felix K. Parker, department president of Virginia.

The organization voted to join with other units of the State and Nation in sending delegations to the Tenth Woman's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, which meets in Washington January 30 and 31 and February 1.

Services at the Clarendon Baptist Church will be conducted tomorrow by the pastor, the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell. At the morning service his subject will be "Poor Thinking About God." In the evening he will speak on "Jephtha's Daughter." This will be the second of a series of sermons in which tableaux will aid in the presentation of the subject matter.

Fred Moten, colored, of Halls Hill, Arlington County, charged with "hit and run" and operating an automobile without a permit, was given a 60-day jail sentence on the hit-and-run charge. For operating without a permit Judge B. M. Hedrick fined him $5 and costs totaling $15.35.

The honor roll for the month at the James Monroe School at Aurora Heights, as announced by Supt. Fletcher Kemp, includes the following list of pupils by grades:

Donahey Answers Pension Warning

Threat on Townsend Bill Sent by Constitutent.

A letter from a constituent saying that if he did not vote for the Townsend old-age pension plan he would be retired "the way Fess went" drew a reply yesterday from Senator Donahey (Democrat), Ohio, that "you have no right to threaten" members of Congress, the Associated Press says.

"Replying to your letter," Donahey wrote, "will say it is your duty to watch your Representatives in Congress, but you have no right to threaten them. You would not threaten people in private life."

Long All for Norris In Nearly Everything

Senator Huey Long has discovered a colleague he agrees with almost 100 per cent, even if the reverse is not true, the Associated Press reports.

Asked by reporters yesterday whether he agreed with Senator Norris (Republican), of Nebraska, on a matter, Long slapped his desk in his most dramatic manner, and said:

"I'm for anything and everything Senator Norris is for"—then he laughed and as an afterthought added "except the St. Lawrence treaty."

League Resists Move to Return Danzig to Reich

Italy-Ethiopia Controversy, Greek-Albanian Row Also Weighed.

Geneva, Jan. 18 (AP).—International problems descended on the League of Nations today from points as widely separated as the Free City of Danzig, Ethiopia, Albania, Hungary and Poland.

Nazi activities in Danzig, former German territory now under league control, presented an outstanding cause for concern, particularly since they came to Geneva's attention so soon after Germany's overwhelming victory in recovering the Saar Basin territory.

The dispute between Italy and Ethiopia arising out of a series of border incidents along the Italian Somaliland-Ethiopian frontier was projected into the league limelight by Ethiopia's formal request that the league act to halt Italian "aggression."

Hungary contributed an echo of last month's controversy with Yugoslavia in a report definitely disclaiming official responsibility for the plot which resulted in the assassination of King Alexander and Louis Barthou, the French foreign minister.

A Greek protest against the treatment of Greek minorities in Albania was turned over to the World Court. The league requested an advisory opinion on whether Albania's closing of private schools attended by Greeks violates its pledges of protection for nonnationals.

The league council, determined to oppose any agitation for restoration of the Free City of Danzig to the Reich, heard the district boldly termed "the smallest German state in Europe."

The reference came from Arthur Greiser, president of the Danzig Senate, a few minutes after he had raised his hand to the council in a Nazi salute.

Col. Lindbergh Plans to Fly Pacific When Trial Is Finished

transport service to link California, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, and other American possessions in the Pacific and the Orient. Other islands tentatively included in the route are Midway, Wake, Guam, and probably Yap.

Col. Lindbergh was engaged with plans for this service when Hauptmann was arrested, and as a result of this arrest, the Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh returned to the East from California four months ago.

It is not expected that Mrs. Lindbergh will make the Pacific flight, as she did the two trips over the Atlantic with the colonel last year.

The flying colonel, who has played an important part in the pioneering of the present Pan-American routes that link the United States with 33 countries of the West Indies, Central and South America and are also established in Alaska and China, has conducted a large share of the actual field research looking toward the early establishment of an American air service across both the Pacific and the Atlantic.

The company's actual plans for operations from the Pacific Coast are not known, but it is certain that Los Angeles will be a terminal and that San Francisco will figure as an operating base since the company's program is known to contemplate serving both Los Angeles and San Francisco in the transpacific service.

Col. Clarence M. Young, former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics and who now is identified with Pan-American's projected transpacific operations, is in New York at present for conferences with company officials in connection with this development program.

A giant transocean training plane, the Clipper Pioneer, sister ship of the record holding Brazilian Clipper, has been delivered to Pan-American's marine operating base at Miami, and now is engaged in a series of training flights by which pilots and other marine personnel are being made expert in over-water operations up to 3,000 miles, the nonstop range of the four-engined flying boat.

The plane, which is fitted with all the latest instruments for long distance flying, will be flown to California following the completion of its Caribbean training schedule, probably in about three weeks.

Then, if the Hauptmann trial is ended, Col. Lindbergh probably will join the pioneering crew in California.

He has devoted much of his time during the last two years to plans for spanning the Pacific and Atlantic by air transport. Recently the Postoffice Department stated that Pan-American was planning the early inauguration of an experimental service across the Pacific by way of the United States islands to the Far East, a project in which Postmaster General Farley said the Government was keenly interested.

The increasing importance of the Orient as an outlet for American trade and the rapid convergence of nationalized European airlines upon that strategic area have, it is known, caused Pan-American to speed its plans for the Pacific service.

American traders in that area are faced with planned and actual air competition by the British, the Netherlanders, the Germans, the French, the Italians and the Japanese.

European nations have rushed the development of their international airlines to tap the important world markets of the East with high-speed transport lines. Lufthansa of Germany, Air France, the French national air system, Imperial Airways of Great Britain and the Royal Dutch airlines, all have extended lines from their own countries into the Far East.

The recent London-to-Melbourne Air Derby was planned by British aviation interests as a method of developing the Imperial Airways service to the Orient. All these countries, in addition, are advancing plans for transatlantic airlines to the North American continent as well, while both France and Germany now have an all-air service between Europe and South America. And now the Japanese have announced their plans to develop their own commercial flying system on the western waters of the Pacific.

Senate Committee Sets Out to Learn What Led to Slump

A Senate committee set out yesterday to determine what really caused the depression, according to the Associated Press.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), North Carolina, chairman of the committee and author of the inquiry, explained that its purpose was to "bring about some clarity in place of the general confusion of minds" about what sent the Nation into the slump.

The inquiry was ordered by the Senate Commerce Committee on a motion by Bailey that a sub-committee be appointed to "investigate the causes of the depression and frame a fair statement of the existent consequences and suggest appropriate legislation."

Bill Backed to Check 'Fleecing' of Veterans

The House Veterans Committee yesterday approved a bill to protect payments to and property of incompetent veterans and to stop "fleecing" by their guardians.

Introduced by Chairman Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, the bill would impose a heavy fine and prison sentence or both on guardains who embezzle or "in any manner misappropriate" money or property.

The measure was supported by Frank T. Hines, the veterans' administrator, and spokesmen for the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Ex-French Marquis Asks 'Stigma Divorce'

Denver, Jan. 18 (AP).—Pedro J. Ch De Flores, former French marquis, filed suit for divorce today to lift what he said was a stigma on his family because of his marriage to Mrs. Milo Magdalene Abercrombie Flores, 37-year-old San Francisco beauty.

Flores, now a naturalized American citizen, asserted the brunette had failed to inform him before their marriage of her two divorces, one from a German baron and the other from Lieut. Comdr. Lyman W. Swensen, U. S. N.

Sale of Stock Assures Bank At Herndon, Va.

Organization Meeting Set Tuesday; Directors to Be Chosen.

Organization of a new bank in Herndon, Va., at an early date was assured last night when a committee formed to solicit stock met with citizens of the town. Stock subscriptions totaling $23,000 were reported with many of the committee not yet reporting.

It was said at the meeting that ten persons had subscribed $1,000 each, making them eligible to become directors.

Mayor Allen H. Kirk, chairman of the committee, announced that a meeting of the potential stockholders will be held in the Old Eastern Star Hall next Tuesday night to organize the bank and elect directors. At that time the committee expects the necessary $50,000 in stock to be subscribed.

In the meantime, the Herndon Chamber of Commerce wrote the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation yesterday asking that body to accept deposits and honor checks of depositors on the old bank until the new one has received its charter in order that the business of the town and surrounding sections will not be forced to go elsewhere.

Woman Convicted Of Hitting Lawyer

Mrs. Arden Found Guilty of Assaulting Calhoun.

Mrs. Grace Arden, 1700 block New Hampshire avenue northwest, yesterday was found guilty in Police Court of assault on Capt. Clarence C. Calhoun, a lawyer with offices in the National Press Building.

Capt. Calhoun testified he called on Mrs. Arden January 9 about a business matter. As the door opened, he said, Mrs. Arden struck him in the face with her fists. He seized her wrists, he said, and called James Howard, colored, to help him.

Mrs. Arden, denying the charge, testified that as she opened the door Capt. Calhoun grasped her wrists. Police Court Judge Gus A. Schuldt withheld sentence until January 25.

Tokyo to Fight Chinese Raids In Manchukuo

(Copyright, 1935, the Associated Press).

Hsinking, Manchukuo, Jan. 18. The might of the Japanese army in Manchukuo was mustered today to expel Chinese irregulars, assertedly raiding Jehol Province.

A communique issued at the headquarters of Gen. Jiro Minami, Japanese ambassador to Manchukuo and commander of Japanese military forces here, said the army was determined to move forcibly against troops commanded by Sung Che-Huan, Chinese governor of Chahar.

Insisting that Japanese forces, already stationed along the borders of Jehol in anticipation of the campaign, would not "cross the great wall," the communique listed Chinese provocation obliging the Japanese to undertake the operations.

(At the time Gen. Minami, famed for his hard-fisted dealing in Sino-Japanese conflicts, was sent to Manchukuo, foreign observers predicted Japanese pressure against China's northern provinces would continue, if not increase. The possibility of Japan's extending her sway into Chahar, easternmost province of inner Mongolia, also was foreseen).

Climax of the Chinese provocations in Jehol, the communique said, came January 15 when a squadron of Sung's cavalry raided a Manchukuan outpost near Tatan, not far from the Chahar border, and carried off 40 Manchukuans.

The announcement of the campaign plans further charged that Sung's cavalry frequently penetrated into the Tatan region, soldiers dressed in plain clothes having advanced as far as Fengning, creating disorders and upsetting the Japanese administration.

Sung had promised to withdraw all his subordinates from Jehol before December 31, the communique said, but failed to carry out his pledge.

The punitive force to be sent against him, it was revealed, will consist of a portion of the division garrisoned at Jehol City reinforced by air squadrons.

Japanese infantry is concentrated at Takochen and Tatan, in northwest Jehol, and scouting and combing planes are being held in readiness.

Agnes Repplier Honored.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Agnes Repplier, of Philadelphia, was unanimously selected for the gold medal in belles-lettres of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, it was announced today. Previous winners were John Burroughs in 1916 and William C. Brownell in 1925.

Reynolds Lived With First Wife Only Two Weeks, Court Is Told

Her Effort to Prove Divorce From Tobacco Heir Illegal Is Attacked by Representative of Libby Holman's Infant Son.

Winston-Salem, N. C., Jan. 18 (AP). An allegation that Smith Reynolds lived with his first wife only two weeks was put into the record of Forsyth Superior Court today as R. C. Vaughn, "next friend" of infant Christopher Smith Reynolds, filed an answer to her effort to bar the child and his mother, Libby Holman, from sharing in Reynolds' $30,000,000 trust estate.

Questioning Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith's good faith in asserting that her Reno, Nev., divorce from Reynolds was illegal and that she was his lawful widow, Vaughn said she herself had admitted the divorce was valid.

To her statements that she consented to the divorce while ill and although she loved Reynolds and carried it through without knowing then that it was illegal, Vaughn replied with what he said was the marital situation between her and the young tobacco fortune heir.

Two weeks after they were married in York, S. C., at 2 a. m., after a trip from her home at Concord, N. C., accompanied by her father, J. F. Cannon, Vaughn said, Reynolds separated from her and refused to live with her or contribute to her support.

When her daughter, Anne Cannon Reynolds 2d, was born, he continued, Reynolds refused to contribute to the child's support.

Vaughn asked the court to overrule Mrs. Smith's contention that Reynolds' second marriage, to the torch-singing Miss Holman, Broadway musical comedy favorite, was void and Christopher not a lawful heir, and to distribute the estate in accordance with a proposal advanced by Reynolds' brother and sisters.

This proposal would give Christopher 25 per cent of the fortune after deduction of $750,000 for Miss Holman. A 37½ per cent share would go to Anne Cannon Reynolds 2d, and a like share jointly to the broher and sisters, R. J. Reynolds, jr., Mrs. Henry W. Bagley and Mrs. Charles Babcock, to be used for a charitable foundation.

'Gag' to Speed House's Action On Works Bill

By Leon Dure, Jr.

As Democratic House leaders mapped plans to force through a huge $4,880,000,000 public works and relief bill early next week, the Roosevelt Administration yesterday cast about to find new projects on which to spend it.

Not even Chairman James P. Buchanan, the lanky Texan, who will introduce the largest peacetime appropriations bill in history, nor yet President Roosevelt, who would administer it by executive order, were able to say what the money will be spent for.

In an advance effort to get the program under way as soon as possible, however, Secretary Ickes, the hard-pawed PWA administrator, called upon State and municipal authorities, planning boards and others who might help, to submit new works projects.

"The purpose of the inventory," the PWA declared, "is to obtain before March 1 up-to-date information as to available projects which might be useful in connection with the President's program for work relief and the development of natural resources."

The fact that Mr. Roosevelt insists the $4,880,000,000 works fund not be earmarked did not deter Speaker Bryns and other leaders from going ahead with plans to devote only the first two days of next week to House consideration of the measure.

Confident of their huge Democratic majority they intend to bring it up as a special order of business on Tuesday, invoking a "gag" rule limiting debate. Speaker Byrns declared debate would be liberal, "but we want to dispose of this bill without undue delay."

Message Next Week.

All but $880,000,000 of the works fund is to go for various forms of public works, which are left to the President's discretion. The old figure of $880,000,000 is for use of the Hopkins relief administration in tapering off direct relief while the new program is getting started.

While unable to specify, in advance, what allocations should be made from the fund, Mr. Roosevelt will send to Congress next week a short message transmitting reports of the National Resources Board, the Mississippi Valley Board and other agencies which have been planning America's future.

These, he explained at his press conference yesterday, will be for the information of Congress, and no action will be requested. Rather, they offer outlines of the Administration's course of action, not only for the $4,000,000,000 works fund, but also for the $300,000,000 so-called "regular" public works program.

Secretary Ickes' call for data on projects asked local public bodies to return their questionnaires to PWA State engineers by February 11. Significant among the list of projects to be included in the inventory were public utility systems, including power, gas and water plants.

As these letters were going out an executive order by the President, issued December 26, came to light showing that he had delegated to Mr. Ickes all but supreme powers over the PWA.

Order Unexplained.

The Secretary on that date was authorized to "alter, amend, or waive" all regulations of certain prior orders of the President and was empowered to make other rules. The new order went unexplained at Mr. Roosevelt's press conference.

Meantime, the President received from Robert M. Fechner, director of the CCC, plans for extension and perhaps doubling of that branch of relief work, and from Dexter P. Cooper, PWA consulting engineer, a report on the $47,000,000 Passamaquoddy Bay tidal power plant project.

Mr. Cooper is the originator of the Passamaquoddy project, which is located on the Maine coast opposite the President's summer camp at Campobello, New Brunswick. The PWA rejected as unfeasible the idea of harnessing the huge tides in this bay last year, but another survey was ordered later.

This evidence of renewed interest in the tidal plan came as Speaker Byrns disclosed that the TVA is to get $61,000,000 in new funds out of the $300,000,000 "regular" public works appropriation. The Tennessee Valley experiment thus far has received $75,000,000, about half of which has been spent.

Rankin Urges TVA Extended To Other Areas

New $200,000,000 Project Would Slash Power Rates, He Holds.

Extension of the TVA power development program to other major river basins at a possible cost of $200,000,000 was demanded yesterday by Representative Rankin (Democrat), Mississippi.

Such a program, the joint author of the Norris-Rankin TVA legislation said, would drive down light and power rates to the consumer by at least 50 per cent and would be of immense value in flood control, irrigation, reforestation and control of soil erosion.

"We're just in the beginning of the development of a national power policy," Rankin told reporters.

"The wonderful success of TVA has been such as to justify consideration of the creation of additional authorities on the major streams where power development is now under way or contemplated.

"A power authority on the Colorado River would guarantee to the people of the six States affected equitable treatment in the distribution of the power created as well as the water necessary for irrigation. A similar authority on the Columbia River would have the same effect in that valley. The same is true of the Missouri, Mississippi and St. Lawrence Rivers."

Rankin stressed accomplishments of the TVA.

"The power rate reduction at Tupelo, Miss., the first town to sign a contract with TVA," he added, "averaged 68 per cent. For instance, the maximum domestic rate was reduced from 10 to 3 cents per kilowatt hour.

"The farm electrification projects double the value of farms by making them more attractive, more profitable and by lightening their burdens in a hundred ways. This is the greatest back-to-the-farm movement ever instituted in this country."

Dr. James Whitehill, Guides' Chief, Dies

Funeral for Pan-American Veteran to Be Monday.

Dr. James Whitehill, 75, of Edmonston, Md., chief of guides at the Pan-American Union, died early yesterday at Mount Alto Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in Cohoes, N. Y., Capt. Whitehill spent a number of years in Cuba, Mexico and Panama, having been connected with the Commissary Department during the construction of the Panama Canal. He had occupied his position at the Union for the past 22 years.

He was a member of Camp Lawton, Spanish Veterans, and the Presbyterian Church.

Surviving Capt. Whitehill are his wife, one son, Dr. Nelson Whitehill, of Baltimore; two daughters, Mrs. Elliott Ready and Mrs. Ila Helphlenstine, both of Baltimore; three sisters and nine grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Monday, with burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Million Loss Cited In Grain 'Corner'

Howell Called 'Benefactor' in 1931 Corn Coup.

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Thomas M. Howell may have "cornered" the corn market back in 1931 and sent prices rocketing 15 cents a bushel in 11 days, but he let it be known today that he lost $1,000,000 in the effort.

The grain trader's attorney endeavored to picture Howell today as a public benefactor in buying 8,000,000 bushels of corn when the market was depressed.

Howell, shunning the hearing personally, is being tried by a Grain Futures Administration examiner for alleged concealment of his big transactions in the July, 1931, coup, executed by Howell under a dozen different names.

Ford Plants to Resume.

Detroit, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. announced today that assembly operation would be resumed within the near future in the branch plants at St. Paul, Minn., and Memphis, Tenn.

The announcement said that 2,400 men would be employed in the St. Paul plant and 1,800 in the Memphis plant.

C. H. Thomas' Funeral Today At Baltimore

Former Executive of a Western Railroad Dies in Hospital.

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Clarence Hood Thomas, who for several years was an executive of a Western railroad and active in the development of Government land grants. Mr. Thomas died Wednesday night at Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Born 72 years ago at De la Brooke, he was the son of the late Dr. James and Clare Mackubin Thomas. Educated at Charlotte Hall, he later studied law and was admitted to the bar, although he never practiced. He had been a trustee of Charlotte Hall Academy and was a member of the Patuxent Club.

Mr. Thomas is survived by a son, James Thomas; a daughter, Miss Martha Garretson Thomas, and six grandchildren.

Wheeling Man Dies.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Frederick Behrens, 65, member of the Republican State committee since 1912, died late yesterday of pneumonia.

Behrens was president of Sterling Products, Inc.; the Bayer Co., Inc., and the Charles H. Phillips Co. He was trustee of Washington and Jefferson college for 10 years.

He became associated with the Neuralgine Co. in 1901. This firm later was merged to form Sterling Products, Inc.

Rites Held for Leesburg Woman.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Mrs. Kate Beavers Fleming, wife of Robert Fleming, who died at her home near Leesburg Wednesday after an illness of a year, were held at her home today.

Mrs. Fleming was 66 and a native of the Bluemont community. She is survived by her husband and three sons, Wallace, Jack and James.

Former Policeman Buried.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Funeral services for Herman A. Koegal, 74, were held today with Masonic rites.

Mr. Koegal was employed in early life as a car builder by the Georges Creek and Cumberland Railway and later the Western Maryland Railway. At one time he was a member of the Cumberland Police Department. He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

Fall Fatal to Woman.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Mrs. Elizabeth Sheets, 71, native of Ireland, and widow of Jacob Sheets, will be buried tomorrow. Mrs. Sheets died yesterday of complications resulting from a broken hip sustained in a fall in front of her home two weeks ago.

She was the daughter of the late John and Johanna Moore and came to Martinsburg from Ireland with her parents when 3 years old. Surviving are two sisters, the Misses Anna and Evelyn Moore, and a brother, James Moore.

Mrs. Kline's Funeral Held.

Boonsboro, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The funeral of Mrs. Virginia Lee Kline, 29, wife of C. Edwin Kline, was held today. Mrs. Kline died Wednesday at the Garfield Memorial Hospital, Washington, of pneumonia.

Born in Fort Worth, Tex., she was educated at Notre Dame, Baltimore; Penn Hall, Chambersburg, and Fort Hays State College, Hays, Kans. She lived in Washington with her husband.

Martinsburg Man Buried.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Harry J. Keedy, 75, who died Wednesday in University Hospital, Baltimore, were held today.

He was born in Sharpsburg, Md., but spent most of his life in Martinsburg, having come here from Maryland when quite young.

Capital Society Expected Anna Dall's Wedding to Journalist.

companied by the former reporter, who yesterday became her husband, in the roof gardens and supper clubs of the city.

John Boettiger also is well known in Washington, having come here for the Chicago Tribune, where he had been a reporter, at the beginning of the present Administration. In Chicago he was credited with having solved the murder of "Jake" Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter. He has written a book about Chicago crime. On the day that President Roosevelt made his nomination acceptance speech at the Chicago convention, Boettiger was assigned to "cover" Roosevelt, and followed him to Washington. The newspaper whose assignment led him to marrying into the Presidential family has been notably hostile to the New Deal. Boettiger is the stepfather of two children. A short time ago he quit newspaper work and is now employed by the Motion Picture Producers of America.

Met On Campaign Trip.

The Dall-Boettiger romance began when each was married. They met on a Presidential campaign trip in September, 1932, where Mrs. Dall seemed fascinated by the tall and handsome newspaper man. Later they were often seen cantering together on the Roosevelt horses at Fort Myer in the early morning, or dancing together at Washington clubs and hotels.

The romance was freely talked about in Washington and even found its way into newspaper gossip columns, but drew only silence or denials from those most interested. Then Mrs. Dall filed her suit for divorce from Curtis Dall, New York broker, to whom she had become engaged in 1926 when she was studying agriculture at Cornell. They had met in New York, shortly after her debut, and their marriage took place in June, 1926. It was performed by the Rev. Endicott Peabody, headmaster of Groton School, at St. James Episcopal Church, Hyde Park, N. Y. Her brother, Elliott, whose own divorce and remarriage have since taken place, was one of the ushers.

The Dall divorce was granted in ten minutes at Reno, Nev., behind closed doors in the same courthouse where the Elliott Roosevelt decree had been granted a year previously. Mrs. Dall charged "extreme cruelty" and was awarded the custody of "Sistie" and "Buzzie."

Mrs. Dall lived at the White House practically the entire time of the Roosevelt Administration. Her tall figure and her pretty face are well known and her wit and rapidity at repartee are as well developed as her father's.

Looked Like "Sistie."

But long before she came to the White House with her father she was known in the Capital. Washington remembers Mrs. Boettiger when she was little older than her small daughter, "Sistie." She looked very much as Sistie does today when she used to go to the Navy Department to see her father, then Assistant Secretary of the Navy. She was often seen as a child in the center of a laughing group of girls being piloted from the Misses Eastman's school to the Roosevelt home on R street. But her light hair was long and flowing, while Sistie's is cut in a modern short bob.

Years ago Mrs. Boettiger, with many of the present younger matrons of Washington, attended a fashionable dancing school here, and ever since she has had a reputation as a remarkable dancer. In those days she was "the little Roosevelt girl," working hard for the Junior Red Cross. She left Washington with her family at the end of the Wilson administration, but kept up her contacts with Washington society, inviting many from this city to the larger parties at the Hyde Park home.

When she returned to Washington her old friends opened their arms to her. But soon after the beginning of the present Administration she appeared more and more without her former husband, Curtis Dall. While Washington society soon expected that her friendship with Boettiger was ripening into a love affair it was not certain that a marriage was impending until it became known that the former reporter was among those present at the "strictly family" Christmas dinner at the White House.

Although the marriage was expected, the suddenness and secretiveness with which it was carried out did surprise Capital society. Only last week Mrs. Boettiger accepted an active chairmanship of the nursery school which her young son has been attending for a year and a half, and only the day before the wedding, Thursday, she presided as a board meeting of the school.

Her presence here until Thursday afternoon and Mrs. Roosevelt's attendance at the White House reception to the judiciary until nearly midnight hardly prepared Washington for the sudden wedding at 9:30 o'clock yesterday morning in New York.

Not since the marriage of President Wilson, while still occupant of the White House, has a wedding in the first family been preceded by so much interest. It was recalled by those with an antiquarian interest as well as a love for tea-table gossip that Mrs. Boettiger was the eighth daughter of an American President to be married while her father still was in office.

Previous daughters of Presidents who became brides were Marie Monroe, Elizabeth Tyler, Letitia Christian Tyler, Nellie Grant, Alice Lee Roosevelt, Jessie Woodrow Wilson and Eleanor Wilson.

Although the Boettigers will live in New York, it is expected that her social interests in the Capital will make her a frequent commuter between the two cities.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—A brief, simple and secret wedding today united the President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, and a newspaperman—John Boettiger, former White House correspondent of the Chicago Tribune.

The Capital had watched their romance eagerly, had speculated on their possible engagement, but so unexpected was the wedding it became known only when Stephen Early, a secretary to the President, announced it at Washington.

The ceremony was performed in the spacious, high-ceilinged library of the Roosevelt town house on East Sixty-fifth street by General Sessions Judge Frederic Kernochan, a friend of the family. The President did not come from Washington for the event.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt gave her daughter in marriage. There were no attendants, flowers or wedding breakfast. Only members of the family were present. Mrs. Dall was married in a traveling costume and Boettiger in a brown business suit.

"I've no more idea than the man in the moon," said Mrs. Roosevelt, laughing, when she was asked afterward where they had gone. "But John has a job here and I expect they will be back Monday or Tuesday."

Boettiger since December has been assistant to Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Previously, he had "covered" the President since his nomination acceptance speech in Chicago and met the President's daughter during that campaign.

Criticised "Brain Trust."

Boettiger's dispatches to the Tribune frequently took vigorous thrusts at the Roosevelt Administration and were particularly critical of the "Brain Trust."

It was the second marriage for both Mrs. Dall and Boettiger. Her marriage to Curtis B. Dall ended in a divorce last July 30 at Minden, Nev., after she charged "extreme cruelty." There are two children, Anna Eleanor ("Sistie") and Curtis Roosevelt ("Buzzie") Dall, aged respectively 8 and 4. Boettiger's first marriage ended in Illinois last November 7.

Tall, attractive, witty and a good dancer, Mrs. Dall has lived at the White House since her father became President. Recently she and Boettiger were seen together a great deal, but reports that they were to be married were roundly denied.

Even last night Mrs. Roosevelt, as gracious hostess at a reception to the judiciary at the White House, gave no inkling that a family event of importance was only a few hours away. She took a midnight train to New York and was here for the 9 a. m. wedding ceremony.

An hour earlier, Deputy City Clerk Philip J. Hines was summoned to the Roosevelt home and issued the license. The bride gave her age as 28 and her occupation as a writer. Boettiger said he was 34.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, came from her house next door for the wedding. Others present were Mrs. James Roosevelt, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, John Roosevelt, and Harry Hooker, an intimate friend of the family.

"It was the usual ceremony performed by the city clerk," Judge Kernochan said afterward. "As you know, the word 'obey' is not included in the clerk's reading."

Supreme Court Ruling on Gold Likely Monday

against the Northern Securities Co. involving stock transactions in the Northern Pacific and Great Northern Railroads.

The case was argued Wednesday and Thursday, March 1 and 2, 1905. On Friday the court heard arguments in other cases and on Saturday attended the inauguration of President Theodore Roosevelt and held a conference.

On Monday, March 6, the regular opinion day, the court issued an order announcing it had affirmed the decision of the lower court, adding "opinion to be filed hereafter." On April 3, almost a month later, Chief Justice Fuller filed the opinion of the court.

In the days of Chief Justice Marshall, when communication was slow, it was common for the court to announce its judgment promptly after reaching a decision, and file its opinion later, some times taking six months or more to do so.

More than one decision may be necessary to dispose of the questions of the four gold clause cases. It has been suggested the court may dispose of the Baltimore & Ohio and the Missouri Pacific cases, involving the rights of holders of private gold clause obligations, in one decision, and the two other cases, involving the obligations of the Federal Government to holders of gold certificates and gold clause Government bonds, in another.

There also is a possibility the court will deliver a separate opinion in each of the four separate questions, one each in the Baltimore & Ohio, the Missouri Pacific, the gold certificates and the United States gold bond cases.

Seaman Commended For Rescue of Shipmate

Secretary of the Navy Swanson yesterday commended McKinley Miles Moore, signalman, second class, U. S. N., for heroism in rescuing a shipmate, Francis Marion Turner, seaman, second class, from drowning in San Diego Bay. Both men were attached to the U. S. S. Pinola on June 8, when Turner suddenly became ill and fell from the deck into the sea. Moore plunged into the water and rescued him.

Sewer Contract Awarded.

A contract for the construction of a service sewer system on Brandywine street, between Forty-fourth and Forty-sixth streets northwest, was awarded yesterday by the District Commissioners to the Peter D'Adamo Construction Co., of Baltimore, which submitted a low bid of $4,205.

Four Tax Bills For D. C. Given To Congress

Mapes Offers Measures Providing Income and Inheritance Levies.

By James D. Secrest.

The way was paved yesterday for Congress to impose new taxes on the nonvoting residents of Washington when Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, reintroduced four tax bills and a measure to repeal the inoperative 60-40 law that passed the House in 1931.

Introduction of the bills was coincident with passage by the House of the 1936 District supply bill carrying the record low United States lump sum payment of $5,700,000.

While Congress has been reducing the Federal payments almost yearly, it has never bothered to repeal a statute passed in 1922 that the United States should pay 40 per cent and the District 60 per cent of the city's operating expenses.

The existence of this act is admitted in the Mapes bill in that it repeats the 60-40 provision in asking for its repeal. The act of July 1, 1922, states:

"That annually, from and after July 1, 1922, 60 per cent of such expenses of the District of Columbia as Congress appropriates for shall be paid out of revenues of the District of Columbia derived from taxation and privileges, and the remaining 40 per cent by the United States, except such items of expense as Congress may direct shall be paid on another basis."

The $5,700,000 payment in the current bill is about 15 per cent of the $39,308,404 total.

Four Tax Sources Cited.

The four tax bills, which like the 60-40 repeal measure passed the House only to be blocked in the Senate, would do the following:

Raise the gasoline tax from 2 to 4 cents on the gallon.

Establish an inheritance tax.

While these bills have been pending on Capitol Hill for the last four years without action beyond House approval in 1931, Congress this year has shown an inclination to favor the latter two at least.

Action Depends on Report.

Whether the income and inheritance tax bills come to a vote depends largely on the District tax report which President Roosevelt is to submit to Congress before very long.

Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Representatives Cannon and Blanton, of the District Appropriations Committee in the House, have announced their support of the added tax proposals.

An increase in the gasoline tax has been urged upon Congress for several years by gasoline dealers in nearby Maryland and Virginia because of the higher taxes in those States. Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, has sponsored similar bills.

Under the vehicle weight tax, ordinary pleasure cars would be taxed at the rate of 50 cents a hundred pounds instead of $1.50 a $100 valuation.

Motor vehicles for hire would be charged on a scale ranging from 75 cents to $2.50 a hundred pounds.

Income Tax Set Out.

The income tax bill sets up a scale of taxes for all residents whose incomes are above $1,000, if single, or $2,500, if married. The range in the taxation rate is from 1 per cent on net incomes in excess of $2,000 a year to 5 per cent on incomes in excess of $50,000 annually.

A new schedule of taxes on the incomes of corporations and common carriers is set forth in the bill.

The inheritance tax proposed would range from 1 per cent on estates up to $50,000 to 15 per cent for estates over $5,000,000.

The gross estate would comprise all real property owned by a resident in the District, all tangible property in the District, all intangible personal property or real property owned by a nonresident but situated in the District, and tangible property owned by a nonresident but which has an actual status in the District.

West Virginia Speeds Action In Committees

Four Chairmen Respond to Hodges Demand for Meetings.

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Four Senate committee chairmen today answered President Hodges' demand for action by calling meetings of their committees for Monday and Tuesday.

Hodges yesterday told them he wanted "every committee chairman who has bills referred to his committee to convene his committee before Tuesday afternoon and get to work on the bills."

Chairman Paull (Democrat), Brooke, will convene the judiciary committee at 11 a. m. Monday to consider seven bills, three of which deal with old-age pensions.

Immediately after adjournment Monday the mines and mining committee will meet at the call of Chairman Sandridge (Democrat), Barbour.

The finance committee has a blank calendar, but will meet at 11 a. m., Tuesday at the call of Chairman Jones (Democrat), Boone.

A bill providing for an extension of time for forfeiture of lands where Home Owners Loan Corporation loans have been requested will be considered by the forfeiture, delinquent and unappropriated lands committee called by Chairman Elbin (Democrat), Marshall.

Six other committees have bills referred to them and notices of meetings are expected to be posted Monday.

Nearly every member of the Legislature took advantage of the week-end recess to go home. Speaker John Pelter remained in the city to complete assignments of attaches.

Both houses will reconvene at 2 p. m. Monday.

Out Of Thin Air.

The Townsend plan granting a pension of $200 per month to all persons over 60 years of age has been introduced into the House and referred to the Ways and Means Committee. It calls for an initial Treasury grant of $2,000,000,000 to pay benefits during the first month of operation. Thereafter, a sales tax of 2 per cent would be imposed to keep it in operation. In other words, the workers of the United States would be expected to provide $24,000,000,000 yearly to maintain the aged members of society in idleness.

Out of what reservoir of riches, hitherto unsuspected, is this $24,000,000,000 to come? Investigators for the Brookings Institution estimated that in 1929 each person in the United States would have received goods and services valued at about $665, if current national income had been distributed equally among the entire population. If all our productive equipment had been operated then at full capacity, they conclude that the income of each person in the country might have been raised to about $800.

Today our total income is much smaller than it was in 1929, when national income from current production amounted to an estimated $81,000,000,000. Yet Dr. Townsend wants to reduce it still further by giving pensions to numerous still active individuals and using $24,000,000,000 of the current income of the community annually to finance his plan.

The proposal is so patently absurd that it is difficult to believe that it has secured serious attention. Unfortunately the facts speak otherwise. The plan endeavors to make us richer by depriving the community of resources needed to finance an expansion of industry, and by impoverishing producers called upon to pay a cumulative sales tax of an excessively burdensome character, and the objective of all this is to effect a transfer of income from those who work to those who are pledged to consume all that they receive, and give nothing in return.

Compulsory Obsolescence.

One hundred and fifty miles from the airport, a cracked oil tank throws out one motor of a heavily-loaded plane. Yet the pilot has no cause for anxiety, nonchalantly turns back and lands safely under the power of the ship's second propeller.

The incident befell one of the latest planes on the recent maiden trip of the Washington-New Orleans service. It further demonstrates the validity of the argument for compulsory twin-motor design in commercial aircraft. Without double-engining the flight might well have ended less conveniently, to say the least.

Such an enforced regulation would doubtless result in a boom for the aeronautic industry and with equally little doubt there would be cries against government subsidy requirements resulting in exaggerated profits. Such outcry would be subject to heavy discount. In the case of an invention still in the experimental stage, it is socially desirable that today's achievement should be outmoded tomorrow. With improved safety design a sine qua non of aviation progress, outlay resulting from compulsory obsolescence is money well invested.

Anonymous But Revealing.

Anonymous spokesmen are generally interesting. They so often reveal a psychology, and a purpose, which are carefully modulated when the spokesman realizes that he will be quoted by name. So it appears in the case of the unidentified New Dealer who last week-end discussed the desirability of legislation designed to force the development of trade union organization.

"What Congress meant to do by section 7(a)," he is quoted as saying, "was to foster collective bargaining by organizations. But it took the back-door route to do that. It prohibited interference with collective bargaining, but it took no steps to get collective bargaining by organizations—the only real collective bargaining—started."

The explanation of "what Congress meant to do" is an amusing indication of the present Administration's patronizing attitude toward the legislative arm of government. But more important than the revelation of this complex is the frank intimation that industrial peace should be sought through legislative coercion.

If industry does not possess the ability or desire to organize itself for collective bargaining purposes, it is highly doubtful whether that end can be achieved by governmental fiat. Certainly it can only be achieved at the expense of imposing something very similar to a fascist dictatorship over both capital and labor.

With all due deference to the viewpoint of the anonymous spokesman, "the back-door route" was the appropriate route for Congress to take in seeking to further the development of industrial peace. Congress sought to remove obstacles to the development of collective bargaining procedure by industry itself. The legislature is certainly not to be blamed if industry is failing to work out its share of the problem.

Then And Now.

The 52 leading industrialists who constitute the Business Advisory Planning Council for the Department of Commerce have been designated to act as the agency for transmitting the views of business men on legislative proposals affecting their interests. Secretary Roper in announcing the plan stated that "any business man or organization desiring to be heard on any piece of pending or proposed legislation may get a hearing through the council. Information and suggestions communicated to it will be passed along to sub-committees for consideration and later communicated to different members of the Cabinet."

This readiness to seek the advice and solicit the cooperation of the business interests of the country indicates that the Administration has learned some salutary lessons during the past few months. No later than last August President Roosevelt, in the speech delivered at Green Bay, Wis., expressed an ill-concealed distrust of the motives of those representatives of "big business" who demanded assurances that would give them confidence to go forward.

At that time the President said that "those who would measure confidence in this country in the future must look first to the average citizen." This address was permeated by a spirit of optimism, and unshaken belief in the perfectibility of the recovery program. It conveyed the impression that the Administration would not welcome and did not particularly value the suggestions of those who were expected to provide employment for the "average citizen."

Since then, apparently, there has been a growing perception that industrial expansion, upon which economic recovery depends, can not be furthered without the active assistance of the business men who are responsible for the conduct of operations. Support for Administration policies can not be compelled by threats or persuasion, because the conditions for the successful functioning of business enterprise are not afforded by mere willingness to cooperate. There must be a material foundation upon which to build a cooperative structure, and expert advice is needed in order to build.

The rapprochement between the Administration and the bankers marked a turning point in the relation of the Government to business, and to the financial interests allied with business, with mutual distrust and often open hostility replaced by a desire to work together for the common good. It also signalized the advent of a new and more liberal spirit on the part of business leaders, who sought more determinedly to establish friendly relations with the Administration.

The best way to cement these still unstable ties is to assure a ready and frank interchange of views through such an agency as that now established. To the Administration it offers an opportunity for allaying unfounded distrust of its motives and purposes, and to business men it offers assurance that those who determine regulatory policies are receptive to expert advice so long as it is not divorced from social consciousness.

Arbitrary Economics.

The recently organized Securities and Exchange Commission asked originally for an appropriation of $4,000,000 for the fiscal year 1936. The Budget Bureau reduced the total to around $2,300,000 and the House Appropriations Committee made another cut which brought the allowance below $1,700,000.

As a result of protests from Chairman Kennedy, of the SEC, the House subsequently increased this figure to approximately $2,000,000, but refused to restore the budget estimate. The Senate Appropriations Committee, however, has obligingly approved a proposal to raise the House total to the amount originally recommended by the Budget Bureau and there is good reason to suppose that this figure will be permitted to stand.

This congressional habit of altering the amounts requested by spending agencies has survived the establishment of the Budget Bureau, which took over the task of initial revision. If the executive budget were the authoritative and final plan that it purports to be, and actually is in many countries, Congress would not concern itself with relatively minor adjustments of the spending program. So long as the present system of divided responsibility exists, however, appropriations will necessarily be subjected to scrutiny by the legislative branch of the Government.

The pruning zeal of the House would have seemed more laudable if there had been any evidence that it was based upon a careful preliminary appraisal of the amounts that the SEC required for the efficient discharge of its important regulatory duties. The partial restoration of the cut made by the Appropriations Committee strongly suggests that the reduction was arbitrary, made largely for the sake of cutting, on the assumption that Government agencies always demand more than they expect to get. That impression is strengthened by the readiness with which the Senate Appropriations Committee restored the $300,000 stricken from the independent offices bill by the House, after questioning Chairman Kennedy about his spending program.

Since the Senate has confirmed the appointment of all members of the SEC without debate, it evidently approves of the work already done by the commission and presumably does not desire to handicap its regulatory activities by depriving it of the funds needed to make it efficient. If the work of the commission is undesirable, there should be revision of its mandate. It is a ridiculous procedure for Congress to indorse its program while denying funds which the Budget Bureau deems essential to make that program effective.

No Need For Haste.

While the former head of the recovery administration is asserting that the great experiment which he launched so enthusiastically is moribund, the chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board, S. Clay Williams, is advocating an extension of the much criticized recovery act for another year or two. Speaking before the convention of the Retail Dry Goods Association, he said: "I don't think we are ready to attempt permanent legislation in the field without more experience and study."

The complexities of the problems that confront those called upon to administer the recovery legislation are sufficient justification for a policy of delay, since the law as it now stands permits of great latitude in completing the experiments that should precede formulation of a permanent program. There is not a single one of the controversial issues that have arisen in efforts to enforce codes and give effect to the labor provisions of the recovery act that can be regarded as settled. During the first hectic months of the NRA, consistency was sacrificed to the necessity of obtaining results and the later changes made in response to criticism were as hasty and often as lacking in deliberation as are many of Gen. Johnson's present strictures.

The endless arguments that arise over the problems of price fixing, for example, illustrate the nature of the difficulties that confront the new recovery administration. Codes of fair practice necessarily impose restrictions upon competition, which merge insensibly into price control systems of a greater or lesser degree of rigidity. There is no unanimity of opinion regarding the merits of administered prices as opposed to competitively determined prices, and there has been insufficient time in which to determine how far it is feasible to attempt to limit prices under the codes.

In other words, both the desirability and the practicability of many of the policies under investigation are still highly debatable. Consequently, if Congress were to undertake a complete and radical revision of the present act, at this time, it would be committing the country prematurely to a plan of action that we undoubtedly would have occasion deeply to regret in the light of better-rounded experience.

The Daring Young Woman.

Florie and Margie, identical twins and successors to Jimmie and Johnny, were exhibited recently at an annual meeting of the Normal Child Development Clinic of a New York hospital. This is the second set of twins to spend the first two years of their life under the daily training of Dr. Myrtle B. McGraw, child psychologist. Jimmie and Johnny have been returned to their home. Florie and Margie still have nine months in which to be instructed and observed.

Fifteen-month-old Florie is now able to drop unaided from a 4½-foot stand, roller skate on canvas, jump confidently into outstretched arms from a 5-foot bookcase and climb a 7-foot incline. Sister Margie, who has been left entirely to her own devices, is unable to do any of these things. She is still in the toddling and gurgling stage. In other words, she is just a 15-month-old infant and not a highly trained combination of high diver, mountain climber and figure skater.

Dr. McGraw is attempting to prove that too much freedom and the elimination of discipline is not only worthless but may prove harmful to a child. In attempting to make clear certain controversial theories which she declares have "gotten parents into a state of pandemonium," one wonders if she is not defeating her own purpose in exhibitions of the kind held yesterday. There are few parents who would care to follow Dr. McGraw's instructions if the inevitable result were to be a three-ring circus like Florie. It is hard enough on the average young mother and housekeeper when baby stays on the ground. But to have a 15-month-old infant climbing bookcases and swinging through the air "with the greatest of ease" is something else again.

One wonders what the baby thinks about giving "the best years of his life" to an experiment which is apt to make him feel, when he reaches home at the age of 2, that he has "problem parents" on his hands who do not understand him. In all probability, though, he will be only too glad to return to normalcy and confused parents. Breaking training for the first time in 24 months is enough to make any baby feel that, actually, life begins at 2.

A girl in advertising for a husband specifies that he must be "rich, handsome, sober, entertaining, educated and highly moral!" She should wait until the millennium and reinsert the ad.

A Columbia professor says a vocabulary of at least 10,000 words is needed to understand the news of today. Those with vocabularies of 10,000 and over have our sympathy.

Skillet Vs. Typewriter.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the past few years the panacea peddlers have been advancing innumerable schemes to end unemployment. Some have been meritorious, many have been "crackpot," but nearly all have begun with the premise that the depression is the root of all unemployment evil. New Dealers and Old Dealers alike are in agreement on one thing—end depression and you end unemployment.

Had we taken out of their positions all the women who were not the sole support of some one besides themselves and put unemployed men in their stead in 1929 the number of unemployed men would have been negligible. This would probably have caused some suffering, but the cases of not many women would have been irreparable. There would have been as a remedy the marriage market. Thousands of those supplanted women would have taken unto themselves husbands from among their supplanters who could not before afford to have the nuptial knot tied. This would have meant two and usually more individuals living on incomes and jobs that had previously supported but one.

If we are ever to revert to "the good old days" when unemployment was not such an enigma we must also pattern our domestic affairs after those days when the woman's chief implement was the skillet and not the typewriter.

New Deal Challenge.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That last fall's election was nothing short of a referendum on Administration policies can't be controverted, nor that the verdict was decisive and emphatic and set a new high mark of national approval. Further, it is a logical assumption, the result at the polls having been largely discounted, that but for party regularity, this vote of confidence would have registered much higher still!

No more convincing test of the reaction of the minds of the people en masse could have been asked, devised or accomplished. It was cloture by the masses on a quiet, orderly debate.

Proponents and the Congress they chose should go to work and vindicate their polled judgment. Having indorsed the New Deal, merits and demerits, the electorate have made it their fight. They didn't expect a miracle—that perfection could be brought to a near-superhuman task in so short a space.

Meanwhile, should not the conscientious objectors, certainly the introverts and self-analysts among them, who may be wondering how so many can be wrong, take stock anew of their own tenets and complexes, and in fairness, convince themselves that this isn't a political campaign for self-succession, but a grim, national struggle for recovery?

PWA Suggestions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest an article appearing in your edition of Sunday, January 6, written by Herbert G. Moulton, concerning pollution of water supplies.

This subject has been of considerable interest to me for a number of years. I have visited a number of cities in connection with municipal financing of sewage disposal plants and also have had general conferences in regard to stream pollution.

I hope it will be possible for you to publish in your paper further articles on this subject, so that it may be forcibly brought to the attention of the Federal authorities in that definite plans for the financing of sewage disposal plants by the municipalities may be included in the new public works program.

In my opinion, it is only going to be a period of years before almost every town will have to solve this problem, and I trust you will continue to urge a solution of this matter in your paper.

Paltry $40?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to the "old-age pension" plan much can be said. Two extreme propositions have been made. One is that of the paltry monthly sum of $30 to $40. The other extreme is the Townsend plan, which is preposterous, absurd! Why not a living mean, say, $50 to $55 a month for single persons?

A pension should not be denied on account of a small bank account (which can be quickly spent, but should be held intact for burial purposes). Many persons having adult children (four or five employed) should depend on them. Fifty-five dollars a month (age 62) is about sufficient. One would nevertheless, have to depend on charity for necessaries—for shoes, clothing, etc., which one could not obtain with the above sum.

It is to be hoped that some reasonable compromise will be made.

Dismissed, Not Pending.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the issue of your paper of January 11 there was an article with reference to the claim of one Reuben Ragland for tobacco seized by Union soldiers in 1865. The article closed with the statement—

> The case has been pending before the Court of Claims since August 17, 1887.

A statement of that kind, if true, would be a reflection upon the court, but the statement is utterly incorrect. This claim was referred to the Court of Claims by Congress in 1888. After repeated efforts to get the claimant to take action with reference to it, on December 11, 1893, it was dismissed for want of prosecution, no petition ever having been filed.

On Preservation Of Landmarks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The idea for Congress to establish a fund to preserve the old "landmarks" is worthy of consideration. The project might easily be launched. The President and his Congress must regard millions as inconsequential sums, in view of the spending spree.

Already almost incalculable sums have been disbursed to build roads "that go nowhere," impermanent housing projects, etc., not to mention other innumerable schemes which have proven unworkable. The amounts actually wasted by the Alphabetical Soup Organizations would resuscitate and save ancient Washington.

Now Mr. Ickes comes forward with another pet project; to establish a Negro colony of some 500 acres, including a hotel, athletic fields, tennis courts, etc. Evidently Mr. Ickes has overlooked the fact that the modern colored man seeks recognition, not segregation.

Those of us who still cherish tradition, believe the fine old homes and gardens of former prominent Washingtonians should be spared the humiliation of "the ax" and the "wrecking crew," followed by the inevitable "parking space."

M. C. G.
Washington, Jan. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: E. K. Goldsborough, writing to The Post in the issue of January 17, shows more sentimental interest in Washington's historical spots than he does knowledge of Government institutions and the limitations of Congress.

Mr. Goldsborough states that W. W. Corcoran's historical home, facing Lafayette Square, was supplanted by a Government structure. When did the Chamber of Commerce of the United States become a Government organization? Certainly not since the Town Hall episode. Mr. Goldsborough further suggests that Congress appropriate money to preserve some of the fine old homes and gardens in the Nation's Capital. Has he overlooked the fact that Washington is not the only city that has fine old homes and gardens as well as historical places? If Congress were to attempt such an undertaking there would be a thousand cities, towns and hamlets throughout the country clamoring for a similar fund.

Incidentally, I have not been deeply impressed with a number of letters recently contributed to The Post lamenting the demolishing of old landmarks. From what I gather from some of your correspondents, they would prefer Pennsylvania avenue as a mud thoroughfare as of the 60's, Center Market with its unsightly sheds and unsanitary surroundings, and possibly horse-drawn trolley cars. I notice that these sentimental oldtimers are riding in modern automobiles, wearing modern clothes instead of the 1890 varieties, including bustles and hair "rats" for women. "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

PROGRESSIVE.

The Post Impressionist

Good News For Neurotics

Post Office, Saturday.

DON'T cry any more, dear, even if your candid friend has called you a neurotic.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning—you know who she was: she was the woman Norma Shearer made famous—well, she was a neurotic.

So was Queen Elizabeth—the one in "Elizabeth and Essex."

So was another screen-heroine: Catherine of Russia.

* * *

And don't left-hook the family doctor, old man, should he say you're neurotic.

Alexander the Great was, Caesar and Napoleon, Poe and Whitman—if they're any consolation. If they're not, why, Michelangelo was neurotic, too.

* * *

And there are other compensations:

"I'm a neurotic—and glad of it!"

An M. D. says that: Dr. Louis E. Bisch—an M. D. who is both neurologist and psychiatrist — lately professor of neuropsychiatry in the New York Polyclinic Medical School. He says those neurotics who "can find something smart to do about it . . . create most of the world's marvels."

* * *

Something smart: not suicide, or even getting drunk. The latter is too temporary, we take it—the former far too final. Such escapes—if you can call them escapes—are those of the hopeless instances.

By "something smart" Dr. Bisch seems to mean something constructive, or at least harmless. He means, we take it, things that can be done by neurotics who are "smart" to begin with and who aren't too neurotic to go on with or end with.

* * *

However, most the neurotics known to the Post-Impressionist (except, of course, himself) at least think they're smart: it's one of the symptoms not a bit incompatible with an inferiority complex. Most, also, are amenable to smart suggestions of smartness. And most aren't too neurotic.

So, says Dr. Bisch: "There is great hope for the common or garden variety of neurotics who are forever feeling inferior, self-conscious, oversensitive, ineffectual: those made unhappy by quirks of temperament that unduly worry or depress them at work, in the home or at play."

* * *

He says it in an article in the current Reader's Digest: an article apparently written therefor—not, like most of its equally excellent fellows, merely carefully culled thereby. Even if you would guess his profession from the heavy turn of that last quoted sentence, there is something consolatory in the mediocrity of its music. Only a man who was sure of his subject would be so careless of his style.

* * *

He believes that, whereas such geniuses as are neurotic make their escapes through writing poems or novels—which accounts for a lot of novels—or through painting pictures, generaling armies military or industrial, the less gifted sufferer merely broods upon his sad case. He thinks he is lower than anybody else for the unreasonable reason that he appears, to himself, to be different from everybody else.

* * *

Well, this won't do, according to the doctor. It won't do at all.

The patient, says Bisch, M. D., "must banish shame, guilt and self-accusation"—only, we trust, when undeserved! "He must be shown that there are thousands of others like him"—which is to say, we feel, that his opinion of mankind must be considerably lowered. And he must be convinced "that he is not hopelessly out of kilter—that his fellow neurotics have to their credit more of life's honors than those regarded as normal." Some of them may even be eminent psychiatrists!

* * *

And then what?

"Next must be found ways of directing the neurotic's extra imagination and energies toward satisfying ends. His individual differences must be put to work and not left dangling idly to trip him."

Dr. Bisch confesses that, for his part, he has put his own neurosis to writing. We can't say we hope he will direct all of his patients toward this field of artistic endeavor. We note with approval his suggested substitutes of "philanthropy or some constructive hobby," and we hold, ourselves, that philanthropy ought to be encouraged. If there is any lavish neurotic who wants a subject for his philanthropy, we will provide him with one upon receipt of taxi or plane fare.

* * *

Anyhow, if you are a neurotic, you ought not to feel depressed about it:

"You owe it to yourself to turn your neurotic handicaps into assets. You owe it also to your family and friends, those who think you are merely displaying a lack of willpower and who do not understand you."

In short, you ought to give yourself reason for being glad that you are a neurotic, like Poe and Caesar, Alexander and Michelangelo, in however small degree. Like Napoleon and Whitman: isn't this a comforting thought?

If you have a neurosis, all you have to do about it is to stop being neurotic.

* * *

Exoneration Revives Kresel-Steuer Feud

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)
New York City.

WHEN the inevitable biography of Isidor J. Kresel is written under the equally inevitable title of "The Ferret" it will weave together two of the most dramatic themes in recent New York history. One is the closing of the Bank of United States, which warned those who can read figures that the market crash of 1929 was not a financial panic but an economic collapse. The other is the bitter feud between Kresel, the relentless prosecutor, and Max Steuer, resourceful defender of rich men in trouble.

Mr. Kresel is not dead yet. But for more than a year he has been almost dead, convicted of a crime of which the Apellate Division of the Supreme Court this week pronounced him innocent, disbarred as an attorney, reduced in fortune, and sick at heart. How can the State ever repay him for that agonizing interval?

Kresel and Steuer are both unusual men. As children they both came to the United States from the old Austro-Hungarian Empire. As young men they both rose in the law, where they displayed extraordinary talents. Kresel, small, mild, disarming, became a famous investigator and prosecutor a quarter of a century ago, a terror to criminals and evil-doers in office alike, and the Nemesis of the shyster lawyer. Steuer, vigorous and adroit, developed into a kind of public defender and his reputation was such that to have Steuer for one's attorney was almost a guarantee of freedom. His most celebrated recent client was Charles Mitchell, the banker.

The two were often opposed, Kresel being the chief assistant of District Attorney William Travers Jerome and Steuer appearing frequently for the defendant. In politics, too, they were opposed, Kresel an Independent Democrat and a foe of Tammany, and Steuer a good organization man. Finally Kresel appeared in proceedings to disbar Steuer. They failed but that's where the story begins.

• • • •

KRESEL earned his title of "The Ferret" under Jerome, who trained so many ardent young men to trail down criminals. He moved continually upward. He was the chief aide to Charles Evans Hughes, now Chief Justice of the United States, when the latter began his career by exposing the evils of the insurance business. As counsel for New York State Kresel obtained the impeachment of Gov. Sulzer. Twice he served as Assistant United States Attorney General, once against the "Packer's Trust," which was dissolved, and once against the "Cement Trust," many members of which were indicted.

Kresel, at the behest of the Bar Association, cleaned the ambulance chasers out of New York and brought about wholesale disbarments of chiseling lawyers. His public services were so notable that when the appellate division appointed Judge Samuel Seabury to conduct an inquiry into the magistrates' courts, Kresel was the natural selection for chief investigator. This was the first phase of the movement which resulted in the ousting of Jimmy Walker and the downfall of Tammany, which at that time seemed impregnable.

The evidence gathered by Kresel against the magistrates' courts was startling and sickening. The police vice squad, he showed, had a regular system of framing unfortunate women and the magistrates assisted in the process of shaking money out of them. Pitiful women paraded through the courtroom and the public was aroused as it had not been in years. Those were the days of Chile Mapocha Acuna, the police informer with the extraordinary memory, who framed so many victims in his time and, in turn, sent so many policemen to disgrace and prison.

• • • •

IT WAS in the midst of these proceedings that the Bank of United States failed. It was supposed to be one of the most flourishing institutions in the city but it wasn't. Kresel was attorney for the bank. He promptly resigned as chief counsel of the Seabury forces. It was then that Max Steuer stepped forward with an offer to act as special district attorney in an investigation of the affairs of the bank. It was accepted. Mr. Steuer at that time was a member of the Tammany board of strategy.

Steuer's work was as thorough and relentless as that of Kresel himself. He secured the conviction of Bernard K. Marcus and Saul Singer, president and vice president of the bank, for misapplication of funds. They are now in Sing Sing. Nine indictments were brought against Kresel.

One of them was for perjury. He was tried and acquitted on that. His second trial was in connection with the transfer of $2,000,000 by the bank to one of its affiliates. He was convicted of advising the transfer as legal. Steuer did not appear in court against him and the case was prosecuted by Assistant Attorney James Garrett Wallace, who was notified a few minutes before Mr. Kresel's conviction was reversed that Gov. Lehman had appointed him as judge of General Sessions to fill the term of the late Judge Corrigan, another of William Travers Jerome's brilliant assistants.

Kresel was sentenced to from 18 to 30 months imprisonment. He repeated at that time that he was innocent. He has been allowed to remain at liberty on $10,000 bail but, always frail, his health is broken. Now that the appellate division has exonerated him, with sharp words for the prosecutor and the court, he seems dazed.

Judge Wallace, who prosecuted him, says he is glad Kresel is cleared. Max Steuer declined to comment. His secretary, however, declared: "Mr. Steuer has nothing to say and doesn't want to hear about the case."

A good many observers feel that there may be several more chapters in the Kresel biography.

IT is a little difficult to tell whether the resort of the economic nostrum venders to the radio and the other views means that they are slipping or expanding. EPIC, now resuscitated in California, has a lot of brisk ritual, some of which it spills on the air. The Townsend plan has a grand radio song entitled: "When My Old Age Pension Check Comes Rolling In." And the senior Senator from Louisiana, after whom Long Island has been renamed, recently came to New York for the express purpose of spreading his graceful lyric, "Every Man a King," to the cosmic breeze.

When it's sunny June or December, too,
Or in the winter time or spring,
There'll be peace without end,
Ev'ry neighbor a friend,
With ev'ry man a king.

Over the radio the song is thus far merely a recitatif. But Huey says there is music for it, too, played right off on a piano by a fellow down in Louisiana. He has the notes all copied down and if he can scratch up a publisher in Tin Pan Alley the result ought to be a riot. One might expect the creation to be dedicated, as a kindly act of courtesy, to Joe Robinson, leader of Huey's party in the Senate. But it isn't.

THIS sound microscope which scientists at New York University have devised has some terrifying possibilities. A grain of weevily wheat was placed under the microphone and disturbed an adjoining classroom. When you can hear a weevil chuckle over his chow it is time to watch your step.

If some prankish sophomore happened to expose the microscope to the New York traffic the entire population of the city would be instantly deafened and the gigantic noise would continue to roll ten times around the earth. Meanwhile every building on the island would be blown sky-high, like the walls of Jericho. The word "hush," uttered in a whisper, would smack down 1,000,000 people. If every home were equipped with a sound microscope no husband could creep upstairs in his stocking feet after a poker game without rousing the neighbors for miles around and bringing the fire departments from nearby towns. Every snore would be a cyclone and no wife would dare to sneeze in the presence of her husband. The grass would grow uproariously and the silence of the grave would be ear-splitting.

Heaven alone knows what would happen if the instrument were ever carried into the United States Senate.

Salisbury Plants Will Employ 425

Shirt Factories Prepare to Increase Output.

Salisbury, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Four hundred and twenty-five additional employes, mostly women, will be added to the pay rolls of private industry here before the end of January.

Employment of a maximum of 350 is planned by the shirt manufacturing concern of S. Liebovitz & Sons, it was announced today by S. Cassic, manager. The company is installing machinery to a capacity to give employment to a capacity force by January 28, the official stated.

An additional 75 employes will be added to the pay roll of the Manhattan Shirt Co. this week, A. H. Silverman, the local plant manager, announced. The company, which now employs approximately 400 men and women, is installing new machinery to increase its output.

Why The Timidity?

LOVERS of newspaper photographs throughout the country will no doubt wonder why in the picture of the guests leaving Vice President Garner's dinner Wednesday night that Miss Perkins covered her face. That is, they will wonder this if they do not mistake the picture altogether. Because of the lady's timidity it would fit perfectly under the caption, "Fashionably attired people seized in raid."

BARGERON.

It is not known, of course, just what ran through Miss Perkins' mind when the flashlight bulbs broke. There was no intention of placing a charge against her. At most, she could only have been held as a material witness.

There are cases, though, when one does not want to appear even in this capacity. Questions arise as to why one was at a particular place. Is it possible that Miss Perkins felt she had suddenly been caught where she should not have been?

• • • •

There seems to be general agreement among those who are concerned about such things that one picture is equal to 10,000 words in telling a tale. Well, one would like to know just what tale it is this picture tells. All of the other guests appear not the slightest bit ill at ease. They are looking gayly into the camera. It is only Miss Perkins who does not wish to be seen.

It is a fact, of course, that the Vice President's annual dinner to the President has come to be much more fun than these affairs used to be. It's funny, too, that Mr. Garner was not formerly looked upon as a good party-thrower. Now he has Will Rogers and there is said to be nothing staid about the dinners at all.

But no one ever suggested that the proper dignity and decorum did not obtain. Certainly there is no reason for one to feel ashamed at having attended.

• • • •

Maybe, though, Miss Perkins' embarrassment did not turn upon this score at all. It may be she does not think it wise for the people to see the members of a proletarian government dressed fashionably or attending fashionable dinners. It might make them restless and may-hap cause them to come to the belief that their leaders are not real proletarian leaders after all.

The people would not be justified in any such narrow-minded view, however, since it has been definitely settled that the profit motive is to be retained. Apparently there was some indecision about this at first. And if it has been abandoned there is no denying our right to insist that our leaders not have fashionable gowns and that they not attend fashionable dinners. Overalls, the symbol of the farmer and the honest workingman, would have been our national dress.

• • • •

But the profit motive is to be held onto. There is to be a change from the old profit motive. The new one must have a regard for one's fellow beings. This is to say, the right to a living is to be preferred to vast riches. No one knows just what this means, so it is something we can all heartily subscribe to. Certainly, it is broad enough to permit a leader to wear an evening gown and go to the Vice President's dinner.

The more one thinks of this picture the more one is perplexed about Miss Perkins' reason for hiding. It is true that Mr. Garner was never looked upon as being a young liberal or of being so social-minded, although he did spend a lot of time hammering at Andy Mellon.

But there can be no question as to where he stands now. His heart beats with the New Deal.

There is no reason why one should not attend his dinners and cmoe out with his head up. There are some dinners around here that the discreet girl will avoid, but they are not his. He has been approved by both Miss Hagner and Miss Haworth.

Widow Loses $300 Verdict In Bank's Suit

$2,000 Had Been Asked on Basis of Promissory Note Claim.

Frederick, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—After deliberating three hours in a suit brought by the Myersville Savings Bank against Mrs. Susie Summers, of Myersville, to recover $2,000 on a promissory note, a jury in the Circuit Court yesterday returned a verdict of $300 for the plaintiff. Seven witnesses, five for the plaintiff and two for the defendant, testified.

Some months ago the bank obtained a judgment against Charles W. Summers and Mrs. Susie Summers, his wife, and William H. Summers and Mrs. Mary L. Summers, his wife, parents of Charles W. Summers, whose name appeared on a promissory note in favor of the bank for $2,000. Mrs. Susie Summers denied that she signed the note or authorized anyone to sign it for her and asked that the judgment be stricken out. Judge Arthur D. Willard ordered that the judgment as affecting Mrs. Summers be tried in court on its merits.

The testimony revealed that some years ago Charles W. Summers borrowed $2,000 from the bank on a promissory note signed by himself and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Summers. Charles W. Summers then made his father the beneficiary in two insurance policies to the amount of about $8,700. Later Charles W. Summers married and changed the beneficiary in the insurance policies to his wife, Mrs. Susie Summers. Later Charles W. Summers died and his wife collected the insurance, which, after some expenses mostly incidental to the illness of her husband left approximately $2,000, which she deposited in a local bank. The Myersville bank then attached the $2,000 for payment on the promissory note.

Two witnesses for the plaintiff, Carl Snook, of the Fredericktown Savings Institution, and William Wachtell, of the Myersville Bank, testifying as handwriting experts, said the signature of Mrs. Susie Summers on the promissory note was her own handwriting. Mrs. Summers held to her original testimony that she did not sign the note or authorize anyone to sign it for her.

The jurors, it is said, were divided in their opinion as to whether the defendant signed note. They finally agreed on a compromise verdict, $300 for the plaintiff. The verdict in effect releases the attachment on the deposit of $2,000 and also releases the defendant from any further liability on the promissory note. The case occupied the entire day.

Seal Sale Nets $476 At Waynesboro, Pa.

Sales in Waynesboro netted $476.43. Individual honors went to Kathleen Martin, of the North Street School, who sold 1,247 stamps. The North Street School sold the largest number, 14,909 stamps.

Lee's Birthday

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE birthday of Robert E. Lee, January 19, is a legal holiday in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

A new biography of him bids fair to supplant all previous ones. The author is D. S. Freeman, of Richmond, Va., scholar and journalist. Although it is an expensive work of which only the first two volumes have appeared, it is already having a very large sale, and the publishers tell me its sale is by no means confined to the South, but is distributed all over the country.

• • • •

Robert Edward Lee was born in Virginia on January 19, 1807, and died October 12, 1870.

At West Point he was not only one of the finest students so far as the curriculum was concerned, graduating second in his class, and without a demerit, but showed remarkable ability in military exercises.

After graduation his rise was both steady and rapid; in every position he took, he showed brilliance of mind and conscientious devotion to duty.

• • • •

Even Lee's greatness as a soldier and his genius as a strategist do not fully account for the reverence in which he is held by so many millions of people. There have been other great generals, other great commanders in chief, who have had the devotion of their subordinates, and, indeed, of the masses; but Lee is in a class by himself. He has received what is usually reserved only for saints. The explanation of this is in his character. His integrity was so evident—though always unassuming—that every one knew that whatever course of action he took, he took it for only one reason—because he believed it to be right.

In the Dictionary of American Biography, Mr. Freeman says: "In him the South still sees the embodiment of all its best ideals. While Lee was distinguished as an educator, his place in American history is that of a notable Christian gentleman and a great soldier. He was confirmed in the Episcopal Church in 1853, and the fundamentals of the Christian religion—humility, prayer, faith and kindness—were his code of daily conduct."

Marylander Charged With Murdering Wife

Pocomoke City, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Charles Bacon, 30, colored, was arrested late last night and charged with the murder of his wife, Lena Bacon, 28.

She was found stabbed to death on the road about 5 miles from the city late yesterday. Bacon is held in the county jail in Snow Hill, pending action of the grand jury.

Harrisonburg Girl, 7, Year's First Auto Victim

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Aleen Rigleman, 7, was the victim of the first fatal accident in Harrisonburg this year. She died today from injuries suffered last night when struck by an automobile.

Witnesses said the child ran in front of the automobile driven by Paul Phillippy, garageman. Philippy was exonerated at a coroner's inquest today.

Appeals Court Orders Retrial In Damage Suit

Salisbury, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—For the second time within the year, the Maryland Court of Appeals has sent back for a new trial in the Wicomico County Circuit Court a case brought to establish financial responsibility of a parent for the operation of an automobile by a minor son. It is the first time either court has been called upon to pass on legal action involving the principle of parental liability in an automobile accident.

In each instance the case went to the Appellate Court from the Circuit Court here as the result of action in which Mrs. Laura D. Rounds sought $25,000 damages from Mr. and Mrs. William H. Phillips for the death on April 13, 1933, of her son, Robert Lee Rounds. William H. Phillips, jr., minor son of the defendants, was also killed when his car was in collision with a truck driven by young Rounds near this city.

After the original trial, counsel for Mrs. Rounds appealed an adverse Circuit Court decision and the Appellate Court then held a new trial should be granted and added the injunction that if the facts alleged in the suit "were proved to the satisfaction of a jury, the defendants herein are guilty."

A second trial was held last fall at the conclusion of which the Circuit Court granted pleas of defense counsel and directed a jury verdict against Mrs. Rounds.

The appellate court yesterday held that "it is inferable that the defendants from the facts known to them, should have become apprised of the 'unreasonable risk of bodily harm to himself and others' involved in their son's use of an automobile without restraint."

"As decided in the former appeal," the opinion written by Appellate Court Justice Hammond Urner continued, "the principle of the approved rule of liability applies not only to the owner of an automobile but also anyone who has the right to permit and power to prohibit its use. The defendants certainly had the right and power with respect to the car which their minor son used with such unfortunate results."

Gold Scare Needless, Prof. Sprague Holds

Constitutional Amendment Could Be Put Through In 30 Days, He Declares.

By Elliott Thurston.

OUT OF THE fastnesses of the Harvard Business School comes the banished but unterrified voice of Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, one-time New Deal adviser, to decry the perturbation which has been inspired—chiefly inspired—over what might happen if the Supreme Court rules adversely to the Government on the pending gold cases. The veteran professor believes that a constitutional amendment could be put through in 30 days, if need be, to counteract the consequences assuming they could not be met by other means. He notes that Congress and enough State legislatures are in session to effect an amendment in record time, if necessary. Hence he sees no reason why securities or commodities should be sacrificed for fear of an adverse ruling.

Presumably neither the lore of lawyer nor economist will put down altogether the alarms sounded through the financial areas, chiefly, it is to be suspected, by those who see a chance to cash in on general gullibility. Without venturing to get into the current guessing game over what the court will do, it is presumably within the bounds of reportorial propriety to state that the majority of those who listened to the over-long legal and extra-legal arguments presented before the court came away persuaded that the decision will not be adverse to the Government.

Gold Clauses a Problem.

This deduction did not arise from the attitude of the bench, or from the untenable though widely prevalent notion that the court can be coerced, but from hearing the legal debate. It seemed to laymen and lawyers that the counsel for the railroads, and vicariously for all the corporations which blithely put gold clauses in their bonds, had the better of the law. They were arguing the Government cases for it. And it seemed also from a study of the Attorney General's brief, if not from his oral argument, that the law was on the side of the Government and the corporations which had promised to pay in gold. This may be a grave mistake. The court may find otherwise.

• • • •

IN any case, it is true, as Dr. Sprague ventures to say, that there is no occasion for all the pointing with alarm that has ensued. "The future course of business," wrote the professor to a Bay State banker, "will be subject to many uncertainties, but I can see no reason whatever why any one should sacrifice either securities or commodities on account of the pending decision."

Since most of those who have been trying to guess what the court will do have concentrated on the economic consequences, especially on the profits to be made out of speculation on the side, not much thought has been given to certain philosophical aspects of the situation.

However, some invidious persons have reflected upon what they think would be a kind of retributive justice that would be visited upon the gold-clause makers if the decision turns out to be adverse. If it does, they will stand to pay $1.69 for every dollar of their promises to pay in gold. This would be very expensive. It would cost the Government an estimated $17,000,000,000. It would cost States, cities and private corporations some $50,000,000,000. That is, it would unless by amendment of the Constitution or other means the costs were avoided, as they would have to be.

Reckless Promises Made.

However, the point which some perhaps unpleasant persons make is that it would be only cruelly just if those who lightly promised to pay in gold were made to pay something for their folly. For, according to this line of reflection, both public and private issuers had become altogether too reckless with their promises to pay in gold. Together they promised to pay upwards of $100,000,000,000 of gold when there was not much more than one-tenth of that amount of gold in the entire world.

• • • •

IN a sense the promises to pay in gold were a fiction, if not a fraud. They could only be kept in case the payees did not ask for the gold, or in case not enough of the payees asked for it simultaneously to exhaust the supply or jeopardize the cover behind the Nation's currency. The British, among others, made no such commitments. The mania for promises to pay in gold was peculiarly an American obsession.

If the court holds that under the Constitution as it now stands Congress could not do away with the gold clauses both in public and private obligations, then steps will undoubtedly be taken to change the Constitution if necessary to arrive at the same result. Had other nations gone in as the United States did for promises to pay in gold, a grotesque pyramid of unredeemable pledges would have been erected and the same dilemma that now confronts the United States would be a world problem instead of a domestic phenomenon.

The United States is bound, one way or another, to extricate itself from the dilemma which other nations avoided. There is now no other way to get back to the international gold standard to which all the orthodox aspire. Whatever the court's verdict may be, the same result will follow in the end. The vast commotion stirred up notably in the financial markets and exchanges is reckoning only with the immediate present—with the chance to pick up some easy money from easily frightened people. It fails to consider the inevitable future.

Once Overs

Personal Items Under the Income Publicity Law.

Hemingway Pitts was a visitor at the local tax bureau this morning. He spent some time examining income tax returns to see what his neighbors paid last year.

Several citizens were injured in a crush outside the Federal Building yesterday when the income tax facts were first thrown open to public inspection.

Cy Potter, who had planned a fishing trip over the week-end, has postponed it in favor of a few days' sport going over the income tax returns of people he knows. "It's heaps more fun," says Cy.

Hank Conkby, prop of our local newspaper, says his circulation picked up 40 per cent since he began throwing out other news and just airing the financial affairs of local residents. "I'm thinking of using photographs," said Hank today.

One of the features of the Firemen's Carnival on the Green Saturday night will be magic lantern slides showing what our leading citizens claimed to have given to charity last year. Much excitement is anticipated and no end of guffaws.

Even since she found that the income tax returns were open to inspection, Mrs. Sallie Hassentotter has practically cut out bridge parties and sewing circles. She spends all her time at the income tax office, where she says she can find out lots more.

The town is agog over the discovery that Jason Whiffer, the pumping station man, admits making $25,000 last year. He had been telling everybody business was terrible.

The village gossip reported this noon that Caleb Whatziss, the local coal and ice merchant, filed a return showing an income of only $5,200 last year. He made that much giving short weight ice alone, say the boys at the barber shop.

"Hoss" Willoughboy, proprietor of the Palace Tonsorial Emporium, announces that facsimiles of all tax returns will be on exhibition at his place from now on. He expects a big business.

The Real Gold Claus. Question.

The question seems to be not merely which way the Supreme Court justices will jump but whether they will do a pole vault.

There will be a supper and dance for the handwriting experts in the Hauptmann case tomorrow night at the Yankee Stadium with the overflow at Madison Square Garden.

A mother, aged 55, slain with her son by Federal agents fought beside him with a machine gun to the end. We have always contended that the tendency of modern mothers to become as sophisticated as their children would lead to trouble.

"Mr. Reilly said he would show that the old gentleman had been discharged from a theater as senile."—News item. Baloney! It's senility that keeps one in the American theater.

John D. Rockefeller, jr., holds two hundred million dollars in oil shares. At present levels you can appreciate the hole he is in.

Excusable Confusion.

Hi: On the screen was one of those newsreels showing a burning ship, a horse race, airplane races, etc., in rapid unrelated succession. Suddenly a little boy piped up, "Momer, when is that picture coming; I wanna see it.

Prayer Octave Begun; Church Unity Is Sought

Catholic Conference Will Hold Nightly Services for Eight Days.

The "Octave of Prayer for Church Unity," annually sponsored by the the Catholic University Conference of the Crusade, began Friday evening with benediction and a sermon by the founder of the octave movement, Father Paul James Francis, superior of the Society of the Atonement, in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University.

Services will be held nightly at 7:15 o'clock for the eight days, and will consist of benediction, the octave prayers and a 10-minute sermon by a noteworthy preacher. On Friday evening, January 25, the concluding ceremony will take place with his excellency the apostolic delegate officiating.

The Octave of Prayer for Church Unity has for its purpose the reclaiming of those Christians who have in the course of centuries withdrawn from the Roman Catholic Church and given their allegiance to schismatical creeds.

A. P. RENN

Nationally Famous Baptist Evangelist in Six Soul-Inspiring Sermons.

Opening Meeting, Sunday, Jan. 20, 3 P. M.

Subject—Why is Christianity True?
Wed., Jan. 23rd—8 P. M. The Unanswered Question.
Thurs., Jan. 24th—8 P. M. Your Greatest Question.

Hear these questions answered:

1. What is the human soul?
2. What is the Will of God and how does it operate?
3. Does God create disease, poverty and war?

What did Jesus mean when He said (John 14:12) "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on Me, the works that I do shall he do also"

Rev. Renn will present the world's greatest religious teacher who will interpret the Gospel messages in the light of Science and Philosophy, explaining how the teachings of Jesus Christ can be demonstrated through the power of the Holy Spirit.

Special old time Gospel hymns and singing directed by Washington's well-known leaders: Professor Wm. R. Schmucker, song leader; Professor Stephen M. Wright, pianist.

Bal Boheme Brings Lure Of East Here

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Capital society, like any other, enjoys a pageant, and a brilliant pageant is what they will see when they attend the Bal Boheme of the Arts Club which is to be held at the Willard Hotel on Monday night, February 4. The Bal Boheme is an annual event in Washington, and is to the Capital what the Beaux Arts balls are to New York and Paris.

The romantic enchantment of the East, the land of the Arabian Nights, of Marco Polo, and Kubla Khan; that land which is somewhere east of Suez and west of the Golden Gate, will lure great numbers of people to the Bal Boheme.

The title of this season's "bal" is "In the Orient," with gorgeous nabobs, shoguns, mandarins and grand lamas, to enchant the imagination even as the stunning and colorful scheme of decoration will fill the eye. For Hugo Inden has designed the decorations. The assemblage of diplomats, officials of the Government, renowned artists, and countless citizens of this city of ours will bear witness of the error of Kipling when he said that "The East is East, and the West is West, but never the twain shall meet."

Already a distinguished list of patronesses is announced by the Arts Club, through the chairman of the patronesses committee, Mrs. Fulton Lewis, whose daily mail is filled with acceptances from the leaders in the Capital City's social life who have been invited to serve in this honorary capacity, and many of whom will attend the Bal Boheme.

Diplomatic Guest List.

There are Mme. Saito, Senora de Calderon, Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, Mme. Peter, Mrs. Michael MacWhite, Senora de Arcaya, Mme. Wadsted, Mrs. William Duncan Herridge, Senora de Alfaro, Mme. Sze, Princess Damras, Mme. Djalal, Mme. de Morganstierne, and Mme. Ratib.

Mrs. George H. Dern, Mrs. Claude Swanson, Mrs. Harold Ickes, and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, are among the ladies of the Cabinet who will attend. Mrs. Warren R. Austin, Mrs. William Warren Barbour, Mrs. William J. Bulow, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. Henry W. Keyes, Mrs. Charles McNary, Mrs. Key Pittman, Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler are likewise included among the more prominent patronesses.

Also are Senora de Bayle, Mme. de Yrujo, Baroness Beck-Friis, Senora de Munilla, Mrs. Tsi Ming Chow, Mme. Ales Broz, Mme. Offerdahl, Mrs. Edward E. Gann, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, Miss Janet Richards. There are many others also who will be included in the list of those who will attend the 1935 Bal Boheme of the Arts Club as patronesses, and already the list of prominent women who will be box holders and entertain parties is larger than ever before in the history of the club.

Mrs. Lewis is chairman of boxes, which may be ordered from her or from the club.

Noted Writers To Attend Fete

Program Being Arranged for Celebrity Breakfast February 2.

A program is being arranged by Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, national president, League of American Pen Women, for the celebrity breakfast to be given in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel, February 2.

Among the many noted authors who will attend are Mr. Harold Donaldson Eberlein and Mr. Alfred S. Dashiell, managing editor of Scribner's Magazine. Mr. Dashiell's subject will be "The Contemporary American Short Story." His latest book, "Editor's Choice," is considered not only an authoritative and valuable work on the short story, but an anthology of the best contemporary fiction.

Baroness Violet Beatrice Wenner, well-known portrait painter and lecturer, who recently held an exhibition of portraits and paintings at the Arts Club, also will be seated at the speakers' table. The literary program will be interspersed with musical selections by outstanding musicians.

Town Chatter

Who's Where—and Why, Around the Capital.

The quartet at Tree Tops has recently been broken up by Jack Koehler, late of the Department of Justice, who has gone to Baltimore, where he has a grand job.

Betty Smith is faced with a constant problem. Her husband, Emmons, never wants to go to a party, but once there, wild horses can not drag him away from it. She'll have to find an antidote for inertia.

• • • •

We Washingtonians have a way of leaving the enjoyment of our public buildings to visitors from out of town. Frances Rust, however, proved the exception, and, after two unsuccessful attempts, finally kept an appointment to visit the Freer Gallery, that treasury of Oriental art and Whistler genius. There were exactly four other people there.

• • • •

Unwittingly, Mr. Robert Jackson worked a good system. He asked an attractive young matron to have luncheon with him, and only after she had agreed to join him did he learn that she had already had luncheon. Thus he had his cake and ate it.

Mrs. Fred Britten has a telephone number which is often confused with that of the National Electric Co., so she has to disconnect hers in the morning. Otherwise, you can imagine the interruptions.

At her last "at home," some of Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark's guests commented upon the unusual display of silver which graced the sideboards instead of the familiar tea service. It seems that the copious bowls and quaint jugs were prizes won by Mrs. Clark's father, the late Wilbur Marsh, with his pure-bred Guernsey cattle. Appropriately enough the jugs are facsimiles of those used for milking in the Channel Islands.

• • • •

A picture of hunger and despair was Lady Lewis as she sat in a hotel suite nibbling a roll while a group of her friends were lunching. Her role was due to the fact that Helen Marie Thomas was delayed in meeting her. Mrs. Thomas already is dreaming of the countless servants she will be able to have when she joins her husband in China. One wonders whether the No. 1 boy, who handles all the other domestics, will insist upon having a "boy" for each of her 14 dogs.

• • • •

An appreciative chuckle arose from among their friends as Representative Florence Kahn bestowed an affectionate greeting upon Mr. Edward Bruce in the cocktail room of the Mayflower. He had just arrived from Chicago where he had been judging an exhibition of paintings. Mr. Bruce possesses a rare combination of qualities, for he is both artistic and practical.

• • • •

Bars to the left, bars to the right, bars fore and aft—but here is an innovation which Washingtonians may wish to emulate. According to Mrs. Alexander Weddell, Mr. Robert Daniels recently gave a dance in Richmond at which he had installed a milk bar and the young things took to it like ducks to water. Quarts and quarts of the liquid were consumed. Where are the flasks of yesteryear?

• • • •

Even the mighty may occasionally have to sing "Brother, Can You Spare a Dime?" The night of the Vice President's dinner, the Secretary of War and Mrs. Dern were enjoying themselves so much, what with Will Rogers being there, that they were late in fetching their daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter, who was attending another dinner. The latter, therefore, begged a lift from Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins. All went well until the taxi reached the bottom of the hill near the Derns' home, whereupon it stuck in the drifts; only with the help of another cab did they make the grade. After everyone had recovered from the huffing and puffing, Mr. Hopkins' last words to Mrs. Baxter were "Can you lend me a dollar?"

Frontier Nursing Service To Hold Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Frontier Nursing Service will be held February 12 at 4:30 o'clock at the Textile Museum in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers at 2330 S street.

Invitations will be issued later by Mrs. Lawrence Groner, chairman; Mrs. Cary T. Grayson and Mrs. Chester C. Bolton, vice chairmen.

Mrs. MacWhite To Be Sponsor Of Art Exhibit

Work of Americans Will Be Shown at Shoreham January 29.

Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, will be one of the patronesses for the exhibition of the National Society of American Art which will open at the Shoreham January 29.

Mrs. MacWhite is an artist of distinction. She passed last summer in her native country, working on several landscapes. She had an exhibit at the Roerich Museum in New York last season. A number of her paintings were made in Rock Creek Park.

Additional patronesses, as announced by Mr. W. Garrett Conant, one of the officials of the National Society of American Art, are Frau Lietner, wife of the Counselor of the German Embassy, and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson.

Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the Undersecretary of State, and Mrs. Wilbur John Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, are among those who have reserved tables for the luncheon to be held at the Shoreham in connection with the opening. Others who will have tables are Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Brandish J. Carroll and Mrs. Forest S. Rutherford.

Dixie Singers To Give Special Recital Tonight

Program Will Be Held at the Home of Mrs. Eustis.

The Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation announces a special performance by the Charleston Singers at the home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, 1500 Rhode Island avenue, at 8:45 o'clock tonight.

The response to invitations for the afternoon recital was so enthusiastic that all available tickets have been taken, and Mrs. Eustis consented to lend her home for a second recital.

Mrs. Roosevelt's interest in the Charleston Singers and their coming engagement at the White House make their appearance a notable event. This group, known formally as "The Society for the Preservation of Spirituals," was organized 15 years ago, and now consists of about 50 members, most of whom are direct lineal descendants of the owners of the great coastal plantations of South Carolina. The list of members contains many names famous in Southern history and literature. They have collected and preserved the genuine and seldom heard religious folk songs and present them as they were sung years ago on the plantations. It is seldom that the members can leave home for an extended trip.

New Fashions in Footwear Are Designed to Combine Comfort and Beauty

Men Cautioned To Test Shoes Before Buying

Style Trend Conservative; Brown Buck Popular; Cordovan Gains.

By M. A. Weiss.

SOONER or later all fashion trends revert to old sources for new impetus. It is fortunate that this condition is now the dominant note in men's footwear. Smart manufacturers realized that in biblical days, foot troubles were virtually unknown. The sandal allowed a certain amount of toe freedom, and jars of water and ointment for visitor's feet were part of the equipment of every well-regulated household. Ventilation, freedom and ease were the keynote that produced the perfect feet of the ancients. Consequently, manufacturers are trying to produce good-looking shoes that brace the metatarsal arch, allow toe comfort and promote foot health.

The aim of the modern shoe, made for mass production, is to help recalitrant arches as well as impart beauty to the foot. Between the outer sole and the inner sole is a steel shank, covered by a leather shank cover. This acts as an invisible brace, supporting nature's bony structure, and is useful until the arch can support itself.

Diversity of Foot Forms.

Due to the mixed lineage of the average American, there is no such thing as a definite foot form. Some of our ancestors wore sabots, others moccasins, some went barefoot and others wore boots. The results of intermingling these acquired characteristics is a diversity of foot forms. Each of these needs a special last to promote health and comfort. These can be obtained if one is astute enough to consult an expert. This does not necessarily mean an orthopedic scientist, but those men who have been educated and have had vast experience in retail shoe selling.

In buying shoes, never try them on while sitting down. Stand up so that the arch is flattened by your weight, and the toes spread as far as necessary. Wiggle your toes. If you can't do this without feeling a pinch don't buy the shoes. No matter what the salesman tells you, they will not break in to your foot. Try on both shoes and give them the same test. Check for width. Make sure the ball of your foot coincides with the ball of the shoe. You should not feel constriction anywhere, although your shoe should not be loose enough to slide up and down at the heel.

Foot hygiene is important. Bathe your feet daily with hot water and then massage them with an antiseptic oil. Make it a rule never to wear the same pair of shoes two days in succession.

Keeps Shoes on Trees.

Care of the shoes is important, too. Keep your shoes on shoe trees at all times except when they are on your feet. Never dry wet shoes on a radiator or before a fire. Keep your shoes polished. Use a good creme which imparts a soft burnish to the leather and preserves it. Never use a polish that has a hard base. Use one that has an oil or creme base, since leather is simply skin—with countless pores. Boots should be boned, and buck or suede shoes polished or rather brushed with a stiff, semiflexible wire brush.

The trend in footwear leans toward conservatism. Brown buck is the high fashion sports leather and in many instances is being used for daytime wear. Buck in any shape is not correct for formal wear. Oxblood leather is a new high color note. Cordovan gains many admirers, with Norwegian grain leathers and Scotch grains a university favorite.

Five Absolute Necessities.

The followng five shoes are absolute necessities and embrace all occasions except active sports.

For business a conservative oxford with spade trim sole, plain English toe-cap. Its simplicity of detail fits it for wear with any type of business suit and it is in keeping with dignified office environment. Since it will not get rough usage it should be of light construction.

For daytime wear, the classic fully brouged oxford. Of grain leather or cordovan, this shoe with its spade sole trim and rich perforations fits in the tweed scheme of things. It should be of heavier construction.

For country, campus and spectator sportswear, the brown, buck, blucher oxford with heavy, red crepe-rubber sole is favored. This may be dressed up for wear with knickers (which, by the way, are coming back stronger than ever) with the use of an extended Scotch tongue of self leather.

Patent Leather Oxford.

For formal wear, the patent leather oxford with hollow heels, with side stitching omitted is favored. Worn with wide Winsdor laces this shoe combines the formal beauty of a pump with the ease of an oxford.

Formal daytime calls for cloth-top patent leathers, or oxfords with spats that match the waistcoat.

A parting admonition . . . you can get plenty of stylish shoes that fit your feet perfectly . . . don't get those that don't fit, regardless of their other virtues. Don't "bargain shop" for shoes . . . buy them, you'll feel better, they'll look better and in the long run they'll cost you less. And finally resolve that you, yourself, will give your feet the care they deserve. Doctors say this will add years of health to your life.

Nuts Good Winter Food.

Nuts make an excellent food in winter because they are heavy in calories and protein, says the New York State College of Forestry. The college points out that nut sales always increase in the colder months.

There's important doings afoot, with a very pertinent reminder that no matter how smart the style, how expensive the leather, how fine the workmanship nor how great the value, if the shoe does not fit properly . . . it's worthless. The above sketches show a basic wardrobe. This is by no means an imperative ensemble, since individual items may vary; however, it's all-embracing for all occasions.

Educator Discovers Tendency in U. S. To Encourage Snobbery in Children

By Elizabeth Young.

OUT OF HIS experience as an American educator, Dr. William Allan Neilson, Scotchman president of Smith College for Women, has discovered in the American parent a tendency to breed standards of advantageous snobbery into his children.

The result, too often, is premature gray hair for the naturally democratic, socially liberal educator; and complete failure to grasp the real meaning and opportunity of college education, on the part of youth.

The potential snob reveals his intentions and his training when, as a campus newcomer, he begins selecting friends. Now, Dr. Neilson, along with other enlightened educators and persons generally, believes congeniality, not profit, should be the basis of friendship. But American youth, alas, frequently acts on quite another principle.

"In women, such snobbery takes the form of using acquaintances for social advantage," Dr. Neilson said. "They make 'friendship' a stepping stone to social entree into certain sets or circles calculated to yield a 'good match.' The man snob is even more material minded. He makes friends with an eye to business advantage. He cultivates another man because his father is in a position to give him a job later on, or for similar reasons that fall short of the fundamental concept of friendship. But that distorted ideal is never possessed by the individual unless it exists in his background. It has prevailed in the home which sent him to school."

College Battles Snobbery.

Since 1880 Smith College has been working to overcome this superficial standard of snobbery. Its most direct move has been elimination of "gold coast" residential districts for students on or adjoining the campus. The past year, for the first time in the institution's history, the entire student body was domiciled in campus dormitory rooms.

With rooms allocated by a lottery system, and prices held approximately to one level, opportunities for display of wealth or privilege are held to a minimum.

Dr. Neilson, lounging in the depths of an enormous divan in the Carlton Hotel lobby, where he registered yesterday for the Smith College regional meeting in session today, smiled at a thought which occurred to him in connection with domiciling the students.

"Young America is panicked at the possibility of solitude," he said, peeling cellophane from a slim brown ciger he drew from an inside pocket.

Lose Capacity for Solitude.

"We build them single rooms and immediately they arrange to study in pairs. Even in pairs, they demand a radio as an accompaniment to thought. They come to us in college having lost the capacity for solitude. The better off they are, financially speaking, the worse it is.

"But isn't that the trend in nursery school education today: Socializing the individual? Teaching him to live with his fellows?" Dr. Neilson was asked.

"Yes, I know," said Dr. Neilson. "But I fear the balance is tipped too heavily in the direction of socialization. Opportunity for solitude should be increased and prolonged, if youth is to be given a chance to develop its finer sensibilities."

Background of Culture Great Asset for School, He Asserts.

There is a refinement of fiber possible to the individual which is distinct and apart from, and quite as important as academic learning, Dr. Neilson explained. And this refinement, which yields dividends in the ability to make nice distinctions in values; in the possession of intrinsic good taste, may be developed in solitude. This, said Dr. Neilson, is what he means by development of the finer sensibilities.

"We find people with plenty of learning who don't possess that quality. Good schools are full of persons who are just learned," he said.

Background Emphasized.

Dr. Neilson believes there is no influence so civilizing as a tradition of gracious living. The greater the percentage of students and teachers from a background of tradition and culture in a given school, the greater can be that school's influence in educating the untutored individual."

"Such a person can be taught more in six months in the school offering a high percentage of cultured associates, than he can learn in six months where the greater percentage of his associates are persons like himself," Dr. Neilson said.

Moreover, more can be accomplished by giving the advantages of liberal education to women than to men, if a choice must be made, he added.

Mother Sets Tone of Home.

"Education of women is most effective because it has the greatest effect on posterity," he said. "It increases the number of cultivated homes. It is the mother who sets the tone in a home, in all its recreations and all its interests—never the father. Her influence is felt in the books, the pictures, the music, the way the family plays and works together."

The educated professional woman contributes less to humanity than the educated woman in the home, he thinks.

Dr. Neilson will be principal speaker at a dinner which concludes the program of the Smith College regional meeting at the Carlton Hotel tonight.

Strictly Speaking

Try These.

1. Why is the mandarin orange so called? How is mandarin pronounced?
2. Is this sentence correct? "I highly appreciate your kindness."
3. What was a hedge priest in Irish history.

Answers Here.

1. Because it is supposedly of Chinese origin. Called either MAN-da-rin or man-da-REEN.
2. No. Appreciate means to "estimate justly." Therefore, it can not be qualified by highly. The sentence should read, "I appreciate your kindness."
3. A priest who had been admitted to orders from a hedge school without theological training.

What's Puzzling You?

TO BE correctly dressed for the occasion without being foppish is the mark of the gentleman. There is a modern etiquette in dress as important as the etiquette governing conduct. The men's fashion editor of The Post is prepared to answer queries on the what, when and why of sartorial good taste. Put your questions to him.

Proper Shirt With Bow Tie.

* * * *

SIR: I prefer the dickey bosom or pleated front shirt for daytime wear, and the button-down collar oxford for sportswear. Do not wear tabs, etc.

Cap Comes Back for Sports.

MEN'S FASHION EDITOR: I have been told that the cap is coming back into fashion favor . . . or is it still the gunman's identifying headpiece? L. P. N.

* * * *

SIR: You'd scarcely class the Durants, the Whitneys, or Wales as gunmen. You're right in assuming that the English type cap is on the way back. Long Island sportsmen are responsible for sponsoring this smart sports headpiece.

Stitched Sports Hat Wanted.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Man Says He Can't Forget Girl He Hasn't Seen Since Youth.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: My question is this: Is it foolish and unprofitable for a man to continue to cherish for years, up to now, the memory of a beautiful girl whom he knew in his boyhood, but who has long since forgotten his existence, no doubt, if she was ever deeply conscious of it.

* * * *

I am a shy man, and the circumstances of my existence such that were it not for this day dream of what-might-have, there would be no beauty of any kind in my life to keep me from cynical bitterness.

* * * *

I know it must strike you as strange, but it is true that I draw more comfort from the though that this woman of whom I speak is alive and that I once knew her—even though I have not seen her for years—than from any living contact.

* * * *

Yet sometimes I wonder if there is something wrong in my doing this. I am free to marry, if I would; and if I could forget this idyll of my youth. What is your belief? PONDERER.

Arrested Development.

DEAR PONDERER: You seem to be something of a poet at heart, and possibly, like all poets, a little mad in a perfectly harmless, romantic way. However, I advise you to cultivate sanity insofar as possible, and the first necessary step toward that wholesome activity is to abandon wishy-washy traffic with maudlin day dreams.

* * * *

As a matter of fact, you are willfully encouraging a condition of arrested emotional development. Why don't you arrange a present meeting with the lady of the idyll, and get a new image of her as she is today firmly fixed in your mind? That might prove a speedy and complete cure-all for the bootless fixation. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

What TODAY Means

"Capricorn."

IF JANUARY 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. and from 10:30 p. m. until midnight.

There may be an irresistible desire to spend money for nonessential things on this January 19. If you are wise you will keep your purse strings tied tight, except for the purchase of worth-while things, or to afford pleasure in the way of entertainment for yourself and others. If contemplating a long trip it is advisable a careful recheck is made of the important things you require, as travelers on this date may be subjected to inconvenience due to the lack of preparedness.

You are likely on this date to be tempted to form a wrong impression of an acquaintance or friend you may meet, by misjudging an action on their part. It might be only fair as well as good judgment, if before forming an opinion you investigate what prompts the action which you are inclined to view with disfavor. Married and engaged couples, as well as those verging on bethrothal, will be using good judgment if they are very considerate for each other's feelings.

If a woman and January 19 is your birthday, you are probably inclined to be up in the clouds one minute and down in the depth of despair the next. Try staying in the clouds, it is much nicer. You may in a very unexpected manner discover yourself to be one of Dame Fortune's favorite children. Money is going to play an important part in bringing a great deal of happiness into your life. Public stenography, teaching, modeling or soliciting are good lines of activity from which to select a vocation.

The child born on January 19, when it passes adolescence, is inclined on all occasions to try to attract attention. Make it realize the error of this.

If a man and January 19 is your natal day, your versatility should enable you to make a success in any business or profession to which you give your undivided attention and enthusiasm. You may, however, try to have your finger in too many pies, and this is likely to prove a mistake. Journalism, printing, sculptoring, painting and legal profession offer unlimited chances of earning large remuneration.

New Officers to Be Chosen Today By the Parent-Teacher Magazine

Mrs. Hugh Bradford, Former President of National Congress, to Preside at Annual Meeting in Building of Education Association.

THE annual meeting of the directors of the National Parent-Teacher Magazine will be held today at the National Education Association Building. Mrs. Hugh Bradford, of Sacramento, Calif., president of the magazine and former president of the National Congress, will preside. Among those attending the session will be Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, Mrs. Simson, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Mason, J. W. Faust, Mrs. Frederick M. Hosmer, Newell W. Edson and Miss Frances Ullmann.

New officers and directors will be elected and plans and policies will be discussed. After the meeting a luncheon will be given at the Martinique Hotel in honor of Willard Earl Givens, newly appointed secretary of the association.

Peace to Be Topic.

LOCAL groups interested in the conference on the cause and cure for war will meet today at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, to discuss the "Evolving Foreign Policy of the United States."

After the session a buffet supper will be held at 6 o'clock. Miss Jeanette Rankin, formerly a member of Congress, will be the guest speaker. Mrs. Frank Edington and Mrs. George Hyman will report on important peace meetings held during the year in the city.

The Political Study Club will meet at 2:30 o'clock today at the Washington Club, with Mrs. Frank M. Shortall, presiding. George N. Peek will talk on "Foreign Trade."

Representative Lister Hill, of Alabama, will be the principal speaker at the joint celebration of the Sons and Daughters of the Confederacy in honor of the anniversaries of Gen. Robert E. Lee and Gen. Stonewall Jackson tonight at the Confederate Memorial Hall, 1322 Vermont avenue. Gen. W. L. Wilkerson will preside, and Dr. Forney Hutchinson will give the invocation.

Shirt Problem Made Simpler By Chemists

Specially Treated Collars Remain Fresh Under Trying Tests.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

A PSYCHOLOGIST of no mean note has said that the truest thermometer of a man's disposition is his shirt collar. He maintains that a man will as a usual thing be affable, smiling, pleasant, even bland, as long as his collar is smooth, neat and unruffled. On the other hand he is, prone to be morose, grouchy and irritable if the collar is wrinkled, creased and limp looking.

A manufacturing concern, motivated by the desire to give better and neater shirts to the world, arranged with a chemist to discover some way of treating collars which would give them a certain permanent smoothness. The result has been immensely successful. A local store displays these new shirts and has even tested them to see that they do all they are said to. They took an ordinary shirt and one of the new models, submerged them both in water and then hung them up to dry. The old shirt came out with a wrinkled, shriveled collar; the new one with a collar that looked freshly ironed.

The wonder is that these new shirts have no starch in the collars and are not held in place by mechanical aids. They are simply "processed" to hold their own under any conditions.

So—wives who want to insure themselves against their husband's irritability—should see to it that a batch of new shirts is ordered immediately. They cost only $1.95 a piece and will last for an indefinite length of time. They are available in all sizes and all colors. Don't miss them!

Cafe Changes Hands.

Those who remember the quaint little restaurant on K street where an Austrian chef provided onion soup par excellence and spaghetti with a truly Continental touch, may be interested to hear that it has changed hands.

While there is still onion soup, and still spaghetti, the rest of the menu boasts typically American food.

As the proprietor said yesterday, "We have tried to make this the type of place where you can drop in and order a meal just like one a good cook could prepare for you at home. We give nothing fancy, but we prepare our things well, and we try to balance them as they should be." In other words, food without furbelows!

The prices here are extremely reasonable. For 35 cents you can order a luncheon which consists of a soup, a meat, a vegetable, bread, beverage, and dessert. For 25 cents you can have a choice of a sandwich or a hot dish, plus bread and beverage.

Dinners begin at 50 cents and go as high as 75.

Scissors That Pink.

Women who are interested in sewing should give the new pinking shears a rousing welcome. These are heavy but handy scissors arranged so that you can pink as you cut. With their aid you can cut out and pink a dress pattern all at one time. Use of them automatically eliminates the necessity of under-sewing or French seaming.

Pinking, as any seamstress knows, prevents raveling and gives a smart finish to inside seams.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

WHEN a child gets poor marks in school, specialists urge us, and rightly, to submit him to a thorough physical and mental examination. Yet every teacher knows the type of boy who is healthy and normal, yet who makes appallingly slow progress in school. And his mother knows that the reason is that, in spite of modern methods making school far more interesting to the average child than it was 20 years ago, he is not interested in spelling, Latin, physiology and other scholastic requisites. They seem to have no relevance to the things he is interested in—playing in the brook, taking care of a rabbit and a dog and other pets, or collecting stamps, stones or celluloid buttons.

Yet those outside activities are the very things that some day will arouse him to interest in his school studies.

Take the boy who is setting up a museum in his room. In it is a section devoted to metals. He wants the labels to be correct, so he turns to the dictionery to discover whether "solder" is spelled "soddier" or "sotter." Teachers for years, have been trying futilely to get him to use the dictionary; and now, because of his hobby, he goes to it of his own volition.

Physiology held no interest for him, until he comes to the study of diet, and sees how it affects two white rats, one properly fed and the other subsisting for two months on a diet that is not properly balanced. Suddenly he sees this dull subject as one that has a practical application to the care of his own pets. It takes on personal interest.

There's no telling just what will arouse his interest; but if you study him closely, you may get a clue. Or go to his teacher and ask her for suggestions. You will not be able to force a hobby on him but if you are tactful, you may find the very thing that will stir him to interest.

New 'Home Maker' Frock Is Charming for Spring

Pattern No. 797.

THIS IS THE SORT of dress that always looks fresh and dainty for casual wear at home. In a cotton print, or gay-flowered voile with crisp white collar and tie, it is particularly charming for spring.

The loose capelet sleeves are comfortable and practical, permitting complete freedom of arm movement. And the cleverly seamed unbelted line in front is particularly flattering to the more mature figure. This pattern comes in sizes 36 to 48. In size 40, this dress requires 3⅞ yards of 39-inch material, with 1⅛ yards for collar and tie. The simple lines, and the large clear instruction chart which accompanies the pattern make it an easy dress to sew.

Mrs. Chapman Wins First Prize In Peanut Recipe Contest

Mrs. Pierce P. Smith Takes Second Place and Mrs. Robert D. Barrett Third in Post's Weekly Competition.

By Dorothea Duncan.

First prize, $3, is awarded Mrs. J. Thomas Chapman, 1628 Columbia road northwest, for her recipe for Old Virginia Peanut Pie. Second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. Pierce P. Smith, 525 Roxboro place northwest, for her recipe for New Orleans Mocha Squares, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. Robert D. Barrett, 1211 Ingraham street northwest, for her recipe for Goober Scrapple.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Edna Zemer, P. O. Box 655, Benjamin Franklin Station, for her recipe for Peanut Brittle Mousse; to Mrs. A. S. Rossen, 3304 Warder street northwest, for her recipe for Chocolate Peanut Fingers; to Miss Sarah C. Morgan, 1223 Vermont avenue, for her recipe for Peanut Snails, and to Mrs. Orville E. May, 214 Raymond street, Chevy Chase, Md., for her recipe for Plantation Sweet Potatoes.

Old Virginia Peanut Pie.

Bake a rich pie crust in pie pan.
1 cup milk
Yolks of 2 eggs
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ (scant) cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
Pinch of salt
½ cup shelled and skinned roasted peanuts, put through meat grinder (use coarse knife of grinder). Cook ingredients like any cream pie, add to baked crust. Make a meringue of 2 egg whites and 2 tablespoons sugar, put on top of pie and brown in oven.

New Orleans Mocha Squares.

2-3 cup shortening
1 1-3 cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup milk
3 cups flour
3½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon maple flavoring
Cream butter, add sugar gradually, creaming together, add beaten eggs. Sift and measure flour, add salt and baking powder. Sift again and add to creamed mixture alternately with the milk to which the flavoring is added. Pour batter into well greased 8x12 cake pan, bake at 350 degrees F. about 40 minutes.

Frosting.

2 egg whites
1¾ cups granulated sugar
6 tablespoons coffee
2 cups finely ground peanuts.
Put the unbeaten egg whites, sugar and coffee in the upper part of a double boiler, place over boiling water, beat with a rotary egg beater until mixture holds its shape about 7 or 8 minutes. When the cake is cool, cut it into two-inch squares, cover the top and sides with the frosting and then dip to cover well with the finely ground peanuts.

Goober Scrapple.

1 cup ground peanuts
2 cups milk
2 teaspoons salt
1 cup cornmeal
2½ cups boiling water.
Combine hot milk and boiling water and bring to boil, add salt, sift in cornmeal gradually, stirring constantly. Cook until mixture begins to thicken, then cook over boiling water one hour. Add finely ground peanuts, mix well, and pour into a bread pan, allowing to cool.
To serve, cut into slices and dip in flour. Fry in hot fat until nicely browned ad serve with sirup.

Peanut Brittle Mousse.

1½ cups crushed peanut brittle
1 teaspoon vanilla extract.
3 cups heavy whipping cream.
Roll the peanut brittle very fine with a rolling pin and combine it with the cream which has been whipped stiff. Add the flavoring and freeze.

Chocolate Peanut Fingers.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 squares chocolate
½ cup chopped peanuts
2 eggs
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon vanilla
Beat eggs, add sugar, melted butter and melted chocolate. Add flour and vanilla.
Spread very thin on a well greased, inverted pan. Sprinkle with chopped peanuts and press well into the dough.
Bake in a 350-degree F. oven for 20 minutes. Cut into fingers as soon as removed from pan.

Peanut Snails.

Prepare a rich baking powder biscuit dough and roll it one-half inch thick. Spread with two tablespoons plain butter creamed with 2 tablespoons peanut butter. Dust with granulated sugar, ¼ cup cleaned currants and ½ cup chopped roaster peanuts. Roll like jelly roll, cut in ½-inch slices, place cut side down on an oiled pan, and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.).

The ALLEGED GREAT AUNT

By HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER

Janet Ayer Fairbank and Margaret Ayer Barnes

"JANE!" cried Gilbert on a great sobbing breath, and sprang to meet her. As he did so he caught the thick, sweet reek of chloroform. Before he knew what he was doing he had her in his arms. "Jane, darling! Are you all right?"

"Oh, yes. Yes. Oh, let me feel you!" she cried, her hands running over his coat sleeve. "Let me realize I'm not dreaming. I was afraid they'd killed you. I heard the shots. Tell me, is old Lily dead?"

"No, she is not!" The domineering old voice rose triumphantly. "And how long, young lady, have you been calling me 'old Lily?'" A shaken tremor of tenderness belied the severity of the old lady's tone. "You look like a ghost," Lily went on competently. "Put her down on the cot, Gilbert."

Jane smiled weakly as Gilbert obeyed.

Jane Tells Story.

"I think so. I'm all right lying down. After you left me, Gilbert," she began her story, "I went back into the living room and I smelled that funny odor again. And then I saw a bottle on the table. I picked it up." I pulled the cork out and then—then I heard a step behind me——

"I thought it was you, and I turned and it was James Bradley. He didn't speak at first. He just stood staring at me and at the bottle in my hands in the strangest way. And then he asked me if I didn't want to motor back to Stanwix Falls with him. Of course, I said no, and we argued a little while, and then I heard a shot in the woods—very faint, but I knew what it was—and I thought they were killing you, Gilbert.

"I ran out to the doorstep and suddenly something hit me and knocked me down. Then I smelled chloroform. I thought he was trying to kill me. And then I grew faint. And then—then I didn't know anything more.

"I came to in the car," she went on after a little pause. "I was gagged and my hands were tied behind me and I was on the floor underneath a rug. I was awfully dopey, but finally I struggled and tried to throw the rug off.

Give More Chloroform.

"After a time he stopped the car, leaned over the seat and poured some more chloroform on the cloth tide over my mouth, and I choked and went under. When I came to again I felt very sick and weak and dizzy. Finally I realized I was alone and the car had been put in a garage and I'd better get out. I struggled for some time, trying to get the gag off, then I heard someone at the door, and I was terrified. But when the door opened, it was a woman. She looked scared to death. But when she saw me she seemed relieved. She came up and said, 'Don't scream. For Lord's sake, don't scream, if I untie you, will you?' She untied my hands and took the gag off. And ran away before I could thank her, and after a minute I followed her, staggering.

"I walked across the square," she continued, "and looked at the light in the study windows and wondered if the Bradleys were inside. I finally decided to chance it. You see, I had to know what had happened to you, Gilbert." Jane's voice died down at last, with the hint of tears in it. Her long story was finished.

Girl Was Captured.

Presently there was a sound of footsteps outside and the door swung open. Casey had Miss Swanson in tow.

"Oh!" Jane said and sat up shakily. "That's the girl who untied me!"

"I want to thank you," she said, "I think perhaps you saved my life."

Miss Swanson's vapid face was suddenly illumined by a flame of passion. "I didn't give a damn about your life," she said crisply.

"I've known for weeks how this business was bound to end. I knew as well as James Bradley did that his bank was bound to fail. I knew he needed that hundred thousand dollars and I knew how he let Charles get it for him from the Meades. I told Charles it was too risky. But he would do it. I nearly went out of my mind tonight before Miss De Long marched into this room and I saw Alberto hadn't killed her. Charles might have gone to the chair for it and he'd have gone for this girl, maybe, if James, the old fool, had murdered her." She swung on Jane. "I let you out to save Charles—not you. I saved him. You can't kill him now. You can't, can you?" She clung hysterically to the lieutenant's arm.

"Come along," said Casey. He caught her wrist firmly.

"Oh, officer, don't!" Jane cried, impulsively. "Let her get to him. You see, Gilbert, I know more exactly how she feels."

It was long before Gilbert fell asleep that night and he woke early. The nurse, who had been summoned, informed him that Miss De Long and Jane were still sleeping. As the nurse turned away Mr. Mixter came in at the garden door. He smiled, and after a few minutes of conversation he said: "While you are waiting for Miss Stanton to wake up I wish you would drive me over to the county seat and look at that marriage record which I saw yesterday."

The record clerk recognized Gilbert when he came in and brought them the record they were seeking.

Forgery Discovered.

When the book was spread before them Gilbert felt a little thrill of excitement. The expert handed him a magnifying glass. "Look at the paper," he directed.

"It's old and worn with handling, but it would be at the bottom of the page," Gilbert commented.

"See anything queer about the worn place?"

"I can see that the ink's run into them, but that's all."

"Look at the line above. Has the ink run there?"

"Why, no. That's funny, isn't it?" Then light danwed on Gilbert. "This writing must have been done after the paper was old. Wet ink ran into cracks already made."

"Certainly," said Mr. Mixter, beaming. "And that proves—this is another forgery!"

While they were getting into Gilbert's roadster, their names were called. Looking around they saw Lieut. Johnson come running out of the County Building.

"I heard you were here," he said. "I was going to send for you. Did you hear Mr. Meade? James Bradley has had a heart attack. Will you come and see him?"

"I suppose so," Gilbert said reluctantly.

He spent nearly half an hour with the old banker. It was about the $90,000 found in the brief case that he wanted to tell Gilbert.

"It belongs to your father," he said. "We never put the money Charles got from your father in the bank's accounts, although at the time he got it, we thought we needed it to avoid closing the bank and bringing to light—certain loans—made to Charles. I want you to see," he declared, "that your father gets the $90,000, which is what is left of the money he paid Charles."

A Roland Beats an Oliver.

A prettily played game gives satisfaction and pleasure to both sides, especially when the defense is as clever as the offense. In contracts made through mistakes by the enemy there is little glory. As in chess, where every aggressive move is met with clever blocking, so is the play of the following hand met with stubborn defense.

Today's Hand.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ K J 9 4 3 ♡ A J 8 6 4 ◇ 2 ♣ A 7
♠ 7 6 5 ♡ K Q 10 9 2 ◇ 8 3 ♣ K Q 8	N W E S	♠ A Q 10 8 ♡ 5 3 ◇ J 10 9 7 5 ♣ 6 2
	♠ 2 ♡ 7 ◇ A K Q 6 4 ♣ J 10 9 8 5 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	2◇(1)	Pass
2♡(2)	Pass	3♣(3)	Pass
3♡(4)	Pass	4♣(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—South shows his five-card before his six-card suit in order that he may show them both as cheaply as possible.
2—A little apprehensive.
3—South must play the hand at a minor suit.
4—Not a good bid.

The Play.

West, assured from South's bidding that the spade suit was full of holes, chose his spade seven as the opening lead. Dummy played the Jack, and East won with the Queen, shifting immediately to a trump to prevent declarer from ruffing out diamond losers in the dummy Declarer played low, and West decided not to split his honors.

Dummy won the second trick with the club seven and now declarer took the first step in an elaborate campaign to strip West's hand. The first lead had placed the spades. The trump return had marked the clubs as being in West's hand and the diamonds as being in East's, since otherwise he would not have made so dangerous a lead. Declarer concluded that West must have a long heart suit and, he hoped, both honors also.

After winning the first trump lead, a spade was led from dummy and ruffed, a trump returned to dummy's Ace and another spade ruffed. Now the top diamonds were cashed, on the last of which West discarded a heart. Declarer stuck West in with a trump. When the King of hearts was led, he let it hold and West was obliged to lead another heart from his Queen-Ten, permitting the dummy to make both the Ace and the Jack. Declarer thus fulfilled the contract by means of a delicate play.

Apple Recipes To Be Featured In Post's Contest

AN APPLE a day for everyone—how do you housewives manage to keep this ever-appearing fruit from becoming tiresome? Let us know your family's favorite apple dish. Enter the recipe in The Post's contest next week.

The recipe contest will be devoted exclusively to recipes including apples. If you can fry apples so they will keep the shape of a perfect ring instead of turning to mush, or do some of the other little tricks with apples that make your dishes a wonder to your friends, send in your recipe and method. You may win a prize.

All recipes should be sent to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Three prizes will be awarded, $3 for the best recipe, $2 for the second best and $1 for the third best.

Outlook for Jobs Dark For 231 Yale Graduates

Two hundred and thirty-one members of this year's graduating class at Yale are without prospects of jobs, a recent poll shows. Among others who answered queries were 83 who said they had not yet made plans for the future, 44 who are planning business careers, 47 who intend to become bankers and 37 who intend to practice law.

Fairchild Urges More Good-Stock Children

Birth control clinics should help families of good stock increase their numbers as well as aid those desiring to limit the number of their children, believes Henry Pratt Fairchild, professor of sociology at New York University.

"The birth control movement is designed to place the size of the family under the direction of reason and intelligence," Dr. Fairchild said.

Nice to Seek Cut in State Relief Costs

Democratic Leaders Will Join Governor in Economy Plea.

By Laurance F. Stants
(Staff Correspondent of The Post.)

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18.—Maryland's Republican Governor and leaders of the Democratic Legislature will join forces Monday in an attempt to have Federal authorities reduce the assessment on the State for relief purposes.

It was learned yesterday that Gov. Harry W. Nice will visit Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins on Monday. With him will be Senator J. Allan Coad (Democrat), St. Mary's, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and Representative Kent R. Mullikin (Democrat), Prince Georges, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

An agreement made several months ago between Federal and State authorities provided for $8,000,000 to be contributed by Maryland, with Federal funds supplying $10,000,000 more. Party leaders here believe that recent changes in the Federal plans may permit a reduction of the amount to be provided by the State.

Roads Chairman Named.

While these plans to solve Maryland's relief problem were being made, both the Legislature and the Governor were busy with routine business. Gov. Nice announced the appointment of Nathan L. Smith, associate engineer of the Baltimore Department of Public Works, as chairman of the State Roads Commission.

The General Assembly, meanwhile, received bills attacking the Elkton "Gretna Green," authorizing civil marriages, licensing airports in Montgomery County and urging immediate payment of the national soldiers' bonus.

The Montgomery bill was introduced in the House by Joseph A. Cantrel (Fusion), Montgomery. It provides that county commissioners shall inspect and license all airports in the county. The bonus measure was introduced in both the House and Senate. It is in the form of a joint resolution asking the national Congress to pay the balance of the bonus at once.

"Gretna Green" Attack.

The "Gretna Green" bill was offered in the Senate by Harold E. Cobourn (Democrat), Cecil. It forbids the issuance of marriage licenses, except between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., provides that marriages shall be solemnized only by ministers with established churches and forbids signs offering to perform marriages. All these are features of the Elkton situation. Senator Cobourn charged that the present arrangements are all part of a "shakedown" scheme.

The civil marriage bill is similar to a measure offered last session. It was introduced today by Speaker of the House Emanuel Gorfine. The present law provides that only a minister may perform a marriage. The bill would amend it to allow justices of the peace and mayors the same authority. This bill always is the basis of a fight in the House.

In appointing Mr. Smith to the roads commission, Gov. Nice said that he would only be a temporary chairman. He will be appointed later as chief engineer of the commission. Mr. Smith has served as engineer with the roads commission, and has had highway and paving experience in Baltimore. He will be sworn into office today, in order that he may sign debentures of the commission which already have been sold.

Names Allan Cleaveland.

Gov. Nice also sent to the Senate for confirmation yesterday the name of Allan Cleaveland as chief judge of the Juvenile Court of Baltimore. The Senate delayed action on the nomination until next week. The final action of the Democratic Senate on the name is considered important as showing how they will treat later nominations. Mr. Cleaveland is a Republican, and many more Republican appointments are expected to be made by the Governor.

Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Senate, announced yesterday that he would not call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Thurman C. Atkinson, of Baltimore City, on the day before the session opened. Senator Sasscer said he took this action after consulting with the Mayor of Baltimore and the city senators, and pointed out that the election would cost about $25,000.

The suggestion that a Democratic steering committee be formed, to map a unified tax program and deal with the Federal Government on relief matters, was made yesterday by Mr. Mullikin, the Democratic floor leader. He proposed that the committee consist of the president of the Senate, the speaker of the House and the majority floor leaders in both chambers.

The Assembly finished its first week of real work yesterday and adjourned until 8 p. m. Tuesday. By that time the printed copies of the bills will be ready and committees may begin to function.

Services Today to Commemorate Birthday Of Gen. R. E. Lee Throughout the Southland

Stars and Bars Again to Be Hoisted on Flagpoles of Confederacy.

Throughout the Southland services will be held today commemorating the birthday anniversary of Gen. Robert Edward Lee, Confederate leader and college president, and the Stars and Bars—emblem of the Southern union—again will be hoisted on the flagpole.

At Lexington, Va., where, during the last years of his life Lee occupied the presidency of Washington College, now Washington and Lee University, students of the school will hear a Founders' Day address by Dr. Edward Mims, of Vanderbilt University. The Lexington Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will hold a tea in the afternoon, but, unlike former years, the Lexington clubwomen will have no Confederate veterans as guests. Rockbridge County's last surviving Confederate veteran died last year.

In Raleigh, N. C., the Stars and Bars will fly over the State capitol and legislators will pause to hear a memorial address.

Throughout the South chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy have planned dinners in honor of surviving Confederate veterans.

Only Two Veterans Present.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl). Only two Confederate veterans—Col. R. M. Colvin and J. A. Hooks—were present today at the annual Lee-Jackson Day exercises held at the Harrisonburg High School under auspices of the Daughters and Sons of the Confederacy. Col. Colvin is honorary president of the Virginia Sons and Veterans and a former State commander.

A portrait of Gen. Lee, which hung for years in the now abandoned quarters of the S. B. Gibbons Camp of Confederate Veterans, was presented to the school by Miss Nelson Maxwell on behalf of the Turner Ashby Chapter, Daughters of Confederacy. Dr. D. L. Beard, of Bridgewater, spoke on "Lee—the Man, Soldier and Christian."

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Gen. Robert E. Lee will be the subject of an address at the meeting of the Kirkwood Otey Chapter, U. D. C., at the Hotel Carroll tomorrow evening by Judge Don P. Halsey, of the Lynchburg Corporation Court, speaker when the bust of Lee was unveiled last year in Statuary Hall in Washington.

Members of other Confederate organizations will be present by invitation of the chapter. Confederate veterans, of whom about 20 are able to attend camp sessions, will be guests of honor.

The fact that the day is the birthday of both Lee and Edgar Allan Poe and is near the birthdays of both Stonewall Jackson and Mathew Fontaine Maury will be brought out in some of the school programs.

Cleric to Address Banquet.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). The Rev. G. Peyton Craighill, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, Leesburg, will be the principal speaker at the annual banquet of Loudoun Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, in the Leesburg High School Auditorium tomorrow.

Loudoun County's two remaining Confederate veterans will be the guests of honor. They are Col. Magnus S. Thompson, 88, of Leesburg, and Dr. J. E. Copeland, 89, of Round Hill.

Work Is Begun By Health Unit

Valley District Is Formed to Aid Seven Counties in Virginia.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). The Valley Health District, designed by the State board of health to improve conditions in seven counties—Rockingham, Shenandoah, Warren, Page, Rappahannock, Madison and Greene—with a population of 100,000, has begun operations under Federal-State-local appropriations.

Headquarters of the unit, the first of its character in Virginia, will be opened in Harrisonburg next week under the supervision of the director, Dr. R. D. Hollowell, who came here after four years with the Tennessee public health service at Bristol. The branch State laboratory at Rockingham Memorial Hospital will be an adjunct of the organization.

The set-up includes the director, whose duties will be largely administrative, county nurses and sanitation officers. The workers will seek to curb disease in the counties and impress upon the residents the importance of pure water supplies.

The personnel includes:

Hospital Inmate Is Killed by Train

Victim Blinded by Storm While Crossing Bridge.

Staunton, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.). Forty-one years a patient at the Western State Hospital, John Collins, 52, was instantly killed Wednesday when struck by a Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad freight train on a bridge near the hospital.

Coroner T. M. Parkins returned a verdict of accidental death. Collins, it was indicated, was blinded by a snowstorm. He was epileptic and it is possible, the coroner commented, that a seizure came as the train approached.

Baltimore Harbor Yields Man's Body

Letter to Washingtonian Is Found in His Pocket.

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The body of a white man was found today in Baltimore Harbor by the crew of the fireboat cataract. The body was removed by police to the morgue. In a pocket was found a letter from the E. P. Murphy Coal Co., of Richmond, Va., addressed to William G. Garrett, of Washington.

Police said the man was about 30 years old, 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighed about 165 pounds, had red hair and was wearing army trousers, a blue shirt, red tie, brown sweater and low black shoes. They found no marks of violence on the body.

Federal Relief Cost Is $46,164

Winchester and Frederick County Handle Total of 520 Cases.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Federal relief expenditures in Winchester and Frederick County totaled $46,164 during 1934. Adding funds contributed by the city and county, the total is $51,970.34, according to the annual report of Miss Margaret Hurst, relief director, made public today.

Of the total, $32,597 was granted to the city of Winchester by the Federal relief authorities. To this the city added $3,055.02. The county received $13,567 from the Federal fund and added to this $2,751.32.

This money provided relief for 520 cases in the city, representing 1,475 persons, according to the report, while in the county 322 families, including 1,291 children, obtained assistance.

The cost of administering relief in the county was $6,027.19, or 17.6 per cent of the total amount of cash administered, the report shows. This figure, however, does not include surplus products.

Wife Beaten With Poker; Driver Held

Ranson Woman Charges She Was Also Struck With Hatchet.

By Harold Blum
(Special Correspondent of The Post).

Ranson, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Wilbur Madison was tried here tonight before Mayor J. F. Casey, and pleaded not guilty to the charge of felonious assault and battery with attempt to kill his wife with a hot poker.

Mrs. Anna Belle Madison, his wife, a frail woman, who gave her age as 24, said trouble began last Sunday night, when Madison brought several companions in for a drinking party. She said that she asked him to stop bringing the men in.

Monday night after he returned from the coal mines near Keyser, W. Va., he went home and found his drinking companions in the house, it was testified. Madison then allegedly accused his wife of improper conduct with the men and told her she had to help him unload six tons of coal. While unloading the coal he struck her, Mrs. Madison said. When they arrived home, Mrs. Madison stated, he beat her with an iron hatchet, with his fist, and then kicked her.

Tuesday he returned home and told his wife, "I'll give you something to remember me by," she said.

He tied her hands behind her and beat her with a red-hot poker, she charged. He threatened to kill her if she reported the attacks or went to a doctor for treatment, she testified. Mrs. Madison broke down and sobbed to Prosecuting Attorney John T. Porterfield, "If you let him out on bond I want you to lock me and the children in jail."

Dr. A. H. S. Rouss testified that the woman had 19 to 20 burns serious enough to warrant hospital attention.

When Madison was asked by Prosecuting Attorney Porterfield if he had anything to say, he replied, "No, let her go."

Mayor Casey held Madison for the next term of the Jefferson County grand jury under $10,000 bond. The prisoner was then placed in the Jefferson County Jail in Charles Town. The council room of this community was crowded and approximately 750 people stood on the outside eager to get a glimpse of Madison.

While the men sought the truckman on the Berryville pike, Madison was located by Constable T. W. Allen and Deputy Neil Smith, of Charles Town, as he crossed the Virginia line. They rushed him to the Jefferson County Jail.

Crime Group Of 3 States Is Organized

Enforcement Officers Name W. A. Huster as Association Head.

Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania Are Represented.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 18 (AP). Organization of the Tri-State Association of Peace Officers was completed here today with the election of William A. Huster, State's attorney of Allegany County, Md., as its president.

Approximately 150 law enforcement officers from the nearby counties and communities of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania attended the all-day conference, called by local authorities to secure greater cooperation in handling crime in the section.

Other Officers Named.

Other officers of the association are: First vice president, Wade K. Newell, of Uniontown, Pa., prosecuting attorney of Fayette County; second vice presidents, C. S. Brown, of Kingwood, W. Va., prosecuting attorney of Peston County; James E. Yarnell, of the Baltimore & Ohio police department at Cumberland; treasurer, C. G. Emmart, chief of police of Hagerstown.

A board of governors is to be named later. It is to be composed of one representative from each county in the territory. The delegates also decided to publish a weekly bulletin, to which all members may contribute.

Newell, in addressing the afternoon session, said that the imaginary State line should not stand between justice and injustice. He said that similar anti-crime groups organized elsewhere have brought great public response.

"The public is awaiting to be aroused," Newell asserted.

Backs Coordination.

Coordination was urged by H. L. Denton, superintendent of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad police at Baltimore. He said there has always been cooperation, but coordination is essential.

This coordination in the Baltimore & Ohio police department, Denton asserted, has meant a reduction of a loss of $12,000,000 from robberies in 1920 to $800,000 in 1933.

There Is Still Ample Time to Select Your Favorite Among the Savoyard Operas

Opening Choice Remains Matter Of Capital Vote

Reprinted From Yesterday's Last Edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Some weeks ago this column made the suggestion that if the Washington music-loving public would commit itself as to which of the Savoyard operas it would prefer to hear, the repertoire of the famous London compnay not only could, but would, be made to conform to the wishes of the ticket buyers.

There were, at the time, I believe, a considerable number of responses to Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater, to whom the brunt of the matter had been shunted by a lazy dramatic department of The Washington Post.

At the moment I discover by hasty utilization of Mr. Alexander Graham Bell's convenient, but, at times, irresponsible invention, that Panjandrum Cochran is absent from the precincts of his usual professional activities and I am, therefore, unable to state what the result of the popular expression was with regard to the Gilbert and Sullivan works that Washington would most like to hear.

Send Them in Again.

This is a matter of some concern to me at the moment because Mrs. Constance L. Todd has just called up to say that the Bryn Mawr Club has purchased the first night of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's engagement at the National in the form of a benefit and would like to know which would be the likeliest of the repertoire of nine operas with which to inaugurate the week.

There is a puzzle for you. If not for you, at least for me!

The only thing that seems feasible at the minute is to ask for an entirely new vote.

What is it you would like most to hear the D'Oyly Carte Company do as the vehicle of their introduction to this season's Washington's audiences? The complete catalogue of the company's available pieces evades me for the time being, but I should say that among the works that might reasonably be expected to be heard would be "The Mikado," "Trial by Jury," "Patience," "Ruddigore," "Iolanthe," "Yeomen of the Guard," "Cox and Box," "The Pirates of Penzance" and "Pinafore."

Whichever of these you would most like to hear sung, Mrs. Todd and Panjandrum Cochran, of the National, both will be pleased to learn.

So Mr. Charles Warren McClintock happens in to say that the finest entertainment, by far, next week, will be provided by Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner in her inimitable single-actress dramas of her own authorship. This, as a matter of fact, would be week after next! That has something of the ring of truth to these ears, for we have always been of the firm conviction that Miss Skinner affords a quality of enjoyment not to be encompassed from any other source. It has been charged that the element of dramatic conflict is lacking from Miss Skinner's expositions of character by reason of the fact that two persons, or more, are not on stage at the same time to carry on a verbal duel.

This, to me, is a sheer fallacy. Miss Skinner is an artiste to her fingertips, to originate a quaint phrase, and Mr. McClintock seems, as a consequence, for the first time in his life, to be on the winning side!

More About Mr. Breeskin.

Pursuant to the slightly derogatory remarks contributed to this palladium by Mr. Boris Shishkin a day or so ago, there comes the phone call from Daniel Breeskin recalling that some of his work as synchronizer of tunes to titillating tintypes, after all, was inspirational.

Mr. Breeskin brings back to mind that the most imposing of his "scoring" of pictures, was, perhaps, impressed upon the public consciousness by such musical embellishments as were accorded the screenings of "Daddy Longlegs" while he was still on the staff of Tom Moore at the Rialto; "Kismet," starring Otis Skinner; "Camille," with Norma Talmadge, and "The Volga Boatmen," all thrown upon the screen at the Metropolitan Theater after Dan had become, through instrumentalities that need not be gone into at this writing, a member of the pay roll of the Crandell organization.

This was an intricate business, the scoring of music to the silent films. It required careful timing of the running speed of the celluloid, a minute knowledge of music, a comprehensive grasp of key sequences, and an infallible sense of harmonizing the chromatic idiom with what was being attempted to be said on the screen.

Dan Breeskin was a master of this sort of thing—and still is, for that matter, although the necessity of some one's being has passed—and I still regret that Mr. Shishkin missed the genesis of Dan's distinction.

Universal, the studio that has gone in for the gruesome perhaps a little more enthusiastically than any of the others, has got Boris Karloff, ace of the sensationalists, doing a chore for Uncle Carl Laemmle which bears the sinister title of "The Bride of Frankenstein." They are still apparently trying to top the record of the late Lon Chaney.

Boris is not permitted outside his dressing room or off the set unless he wears a black silk head sack to conceal his gruesome make up. He has two cops by his side to fend off the curious.

The make-up weighs 45 pounds, and makes Boris look all of 7 feet tall. It takes seven hours to put on, necessitating his appearance at the studio at 3 a. m.

All of which is supposed to intrigue the imagination, and serve as a "build-up" for this Frankenstein.

Robert Loraine Again.

Robert Loraine will leave Hollywood Saturday by airplane after completing retakes in the studio, in order to be in New York on Monday morning to begin rehearsals in one of the leading roles in the new Edouard Bourdet play "Les Temps Difficiles," the hit of the last year in Paris, which F. Rolbein recently announced that he would produce in the East this season if he could solve casting difficulties.

Mr. Rolbein further announces that the English title which has been chosen for Louis Bromfield's adaptation of the play will be "Times Have Changed."

Rehearsals of three or four weeks will be followed by an out-of-town engagement before the Broadway premiere, which will probably take place during the last week in February. Other leading members of the cast will be announced early next week.

So I remained away from the office as late as might be, lest the Messrs. Will Rogers and Roy Atwell combine their forces and make a flank attack. So far, all is well. Press time was quite a while back, at that!

Avariciousness Note.

Oh, very well, then, if this is not enough, look over across the way to another amusement page and learn what Rubinoff has been doing—if anything!

And the top of the morning to you, too—which is certainly keeping in the Rubinoff idiom!

Fights Bring Close Of Transient Camp

Brunswick Center Abandoned After Melee.

Brunswick, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Because of frequent brawls at the Negro transient center here since its establishment about a year ago, the camp was closed permanently yesterday, and the 12 occupants were ordered to leave town immediately.

Residents have complained numerous times of the conduct at the colony, and the climax was reached during the past week-end when knives and razors are said to have been brandished during a melee.

Jewel Parkin Named As Head of Hospital

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Miss Jewel Parkin, for the past six years assistant superintendent of the Mary Washington Hospital, was elected superintendent of the institution today at a meeting of the board of managers.

Four Properties Face Somerset Tax Auction

Four pieces of property in Somerset, Md., are being advertised for tax sale today by John F. Holland, town clerk and treasurer. The amount of tax arrears totals $159.41.

According to the advertisement any property on which taxes have not been paid by April 8, 1935, will be sold at public auction at 5:30 p. m. April 8, 1933, at the Somerset schoolhouse.

No Word But "Exotic" Will Do

No other description than "exotic" quite encompasses the strange beauty of this remarkable girl, Margot, who made her first bid for film fame as the principal feminine character in that bizarre picture, "Crime Without Passion," conceived and executed as their first joint productional activity by Ben Hecht and Charlie MacArthur. Margot will be seen next with George Raft and Carole Lombard in "Rumba," although it now begins to develop that she is more actress than dancer. She is a native-born Spaniard who began her career in Mexico.

Man Reported 113 Succumbs in Davy; Father Died at 107

Welch, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The death last night at Davy of Peter Rakes, declared by relatives to have been 113 years old, was reported today.

The family stated that Rakes was born February 11, 1821, at what is now Richlands, Va., and worked regularly until 1931. He served three years in the Confederate army. His father, Lewis Rakes, died at 107, relatives said.

He is survived by his widow, Sarah, 75.

Consolidated School Will Be Dedicated

Westminster, Md., Jan 18 (Spl.).—Formal dedication of the new Winfield, Carroll County, consolidated school will be held Thursday night, according to an announcement made today by the board of education.

Board members have accepted an invitation to be present at the dedicatory exercises, when Harry Zepp, Mount Airy, vice president of the board, will accept the building in the name of the board of education from M. S. H. Unger, superintendent of schools.

Rubinoff Stars On Earle Stage In Near Future

Maestro Returns to Radio in a Short Time to Resume 'Mike.'

Rubinoff, famed violinist of the stage, screen and radio, is now on the first vacation from the air he has been able to secure for four years.

During that time he never missed a Sunday broadcast. It is most unusual for a star to remain on one program, backed by one sponsor, for that length of time and even more so never to miss a program. In addition to the radio, he set an all-time record on Broadway by conducting the orchestra at the New York Paramount Theater for three years. Even these were only his major activities. He also directed the dance orchestra at the Roosevelt Hotel, played dances throughout the eastern part of the nation, made motion picture shorts and composed music.

Vacation time for such a person, you would think, would be spent in relaxation and pleasure, but not so with Rubinoff. He has spent the major part of his holiday helping others.

Conducted Benefit.

A week after he went off the air he conducted the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra in a special concert for the benefit of the Cincinnati Musicians Association. This organization which endeavors to keep the unemployed musicians of Cincinnati working during the year by staging a series of operatic and popular concerts, met with a deficit during the past year, and came to Rubinoff asking his assistance.

He agreed to help and succeeded in clearing this debt so they may start a new year with a clean sheet. He not only conducted the symphony, but had special scores made, at his own expense, and devoted months of preparation to insure their success. He also sent his personal press representative to Cincinnati to guarantee the commercial success of the concert for the muscians.

While there, he left the music hall after a strenuous four-hour rehearsal to play for the aged and sick at the Huntingdon County Hospital, almost an hour's ride from the city, and returned just in time to begin rehearsal again.

His latest good deed was to cut short his one-week vacation in Miami and journey 18 hours out of his way to play for the patients at the Warm Springs Foundation, in Warm Springs, Ga. Not satisfied to appear alone he had his accompanist, Homer Phillips, go from New York to Warm Springs to accompany him.

Transported Patients.

All thoughts of infantile paralysis were forgotten during the hour's program as Rubinoff through his violin rippled the air with the syncopated melodies that caused youngsters' eyes to sparkle, crippled bodies to keep time and faces to reflect the happy emotions his music caused.

Habitues of Broadway are reputed to be as hard as the pavement beneath their feet. Yet here is a man who knows Broadway as you know your own backyard, and a man who has attained fame beyond one's wildest dream and yet he goes out of his way to bring enjoyment to those less fortunate than himself and asks no recompense. He, who commands a king's ransom every time he touches bow to the strings of his violin, becomes a wandering minstrel at the first suggestion that there is some group that is unable to hear him.

Plays Many Benefits.

He has appeared at as many charitable events in New York during his vacation as he does while he is engaged. He has played at most every leading hospital and home throughout the Nation and intends to continue to do so as long as he can bring enjoyment with his music.

Rubinoff will appear at the Earle Theater in person starting January 25. This is the last week of his holiday.

Sunday, February 3, he returns to his friends of the air. He will be heard each Sunday evening from 8 to 8:30 over the Columbia network.

Execution Date Set for Newton Stayed by Peery

Respite Until April 19 to Allow Additional Inquiry by Counsel.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Noah Newton, of Fredericksburg, sentenced to die February 15, was given a respite until April 19 by Gov. Peery today for the purpose of permitting his counsel to make further investigation of the case.

Newton was condemned for the murder of a former sweetheart by Judge Frederick W. Coleman in Stafford circuit court after the man had admitted having killed the woman and had thrown himself upon the mercy of the court.

Counsel for the condemned man hope to be able to prove the murder was committed in the heat of passion while the accused was under the influence of liquor, and that, consequently, the sentence of the court was too severe.

The fact that Newton, after waiving his right of trial by jury, received the death penalty from the court, made the case unique.

Hunt Planned Today By Warrenton Club

Warrenton, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Plans for a hunt have been announced by the Warrenton Hunt Club, to be held tomorrow at Clovercroft, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, jr. The run will include part of the course used in the annual Gold Cup race.

Another hunt will be held Monday at Waterloo, club officials announced.

Virginia May Move Offices Of State Conservation Board

Richmond, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Removal of three important offices of the Conservation and Development Commission from the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, to Richmond, is under consideration, and the commission has directed the chairman, Wilbur C. Hall, to investigate and report upon the plan, it was learned today.

The commission is slated to meet again February 19 and 20.

Mr. Hall said that a careful study will be made of the advantages and disadvantages of centralizing all of the bureaus of the department here.

One other complication involving location of a bureau also came up when the department of education notified Mr. Hall that it will be necessary for it to occupy the three fifth floor rooms now held by the park bureau of the department.

The office building already is crowded, and no one yet knows where or how the commission will be quartered. Space now is held on the first and fifth floors of the State office building in the capital, in the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Building at Charlottesville, and at Front Royal.

The commission has arranged to make a tour of the State park system during the second week of May.

Gov. Peery has issued formal authority for the commission to pay the salary of the chairman, an item not formally appropriated by the 1934 Assembly. The bureaus located at the university are forestry, geology and water resources.

Mrs. George Graham Inherits Half Share in Dr. Ragan Estate

Hagerstown, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Mrs. George Graham, Conduit road, Washington, was bequeathed half of the huge estate of her great-uncle, the late Dr. Otho H. Ragan, whose will was probated today by the Orphans Court of Washington County.

Another grand-niece, Mrs. Charles L. Paul 3d, of Charleston, S. C., was bequeathed the other half, both young women to receive the entire estate when they have reached 40 years of age. In the meantime, they will receive incomes from the estate along with Mrs. Coralie L. Douglas, mother of Mrs. Graham, who resides on Conduit road, Washington; Mrs. Eloise Fechtig, Charleston, mother of Mrs. Paul, and another niece, Elizabeth W. Bell, Greencastle, Pa.

Former Attorney General Alexander Armstrong of Maryland is executor of the will.

The original will was dated December 19, 1924, and there were three codicils since revoking many provisions of the original.

The only other provision in the will was a $5,000 trust and $500 outright to Edward Gigous, a trusted employe. The office equipment is left to the Washington County Hospital.

Sleeping Sickness Is Fatal to Woman

Trappe, Md., Jan. 18 (AP).—The maladay which proved fatal to Mrs. Agnes Slaughter, sister of the former major league baseball star, Frank (Home-Run) Baker, was identified today by physicians as encephalitis, or sleeping sickness.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at her residence here. She is survived by her husband, John A. Slaughter, and one son, John A. Slaughter, jr., and her brother, Frank Baker, has large farming and banking interests here.

The diagnosis of the fatal illness was made by Dr. James A. Ross, the family physician, and Dr. C. H. Halley, health officer of Talbot County. Health officials said it was the first time in many years a case of the malady had appeared in Maryland.

Mrs. Slaughter was stricken last Friday while doing household work at her home. She soon lost consciousness and died yesterday without rallying. She was 44 years old.

Ice Group Elects C. L. Paul as Head

Richmond Man Chosen in Norfolk Meeting.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—C. L. Paul, of Richmond, was elected president of the Virginia Ice Manufacturers Association at the closing session of the twenty-first annual convention of that organization at Virginia Beach today. He succeeds J. U. Reardon, of Alexandria.

N. C. Taylor, of Staunton, was named first vice president; J. E. Overbey, of Danville, was selected as second vice president, and O. A. Reardon, of Alexandria, was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

Members of the executive committee include M. C. Elliott, Charlottesville; Barry Hammond, Alexandria; J. W. Easter, Norfolk; R. R. Waltimyer, Richmond; M. W. Bennett, Clarendon; L. R. O'Hara, Yorktown; J. U. Reardon, Alexandria; J. P. Leigh, Portsmouth; M. G. Munce, Richmond, and V. B. Strawser, of Crewe.

Churches to Mark Peace Sunday Soon

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—In an effort to further the cause of international peace, the Loudoun County Ministerial Union, meeting at the home of the Rev. J. A. Welbourn, in Leesburg, designated a Sunday in the near future as "Peace Sunday," to be observed by all the churches and Sunday Schools. A general plan of cooperation among the churches for that purpose was approved.

Mrs. Blanche M. Melvin, welfare worker, gave an account of relief work in the county and discussed the problems involved in assisting the families needing relief to become self-supporting.

A steering committee to work out plans for the work was appointed as follows: Ralph Boring, of Lincoln; the Rev. Henry Cole, of Hamilton, and the Rev. G. Peyton Craighill, of Leesburg.

Wife, Girl Shot, Husband Jailed

State's Attorney Charges Virginian Was Drinking Before Shooting.

Berryville, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—James W. Pierce, about 45, of Clarke County, was lodged in the county jail at Berryville today by State Officer George Miller after the wounding of his wife and stepdaughter yesterday. Pierce is charged with felonious assault with intent to kill.

His wife, Mrs. Edith Pierce, 35, and stepdaughter, Vivian, 16, are patients in the Winchester Hospital. Mrs. Pierce was wounded in the chest, a .22-caliber bullet passing through her body from left to right. Her daughter wa shot in the back. Her physician said tonight the bullet still is unlocated. It is believed both will recover, however.

Capt. Frank Wray, Commonwealth's attorney, said there is evidence Pierce was drinking prior to the shooting. The girl said she was wounded first and that when she recovered from the shock, she saw her mother lying on the ground also wounded.

Pierce is being held without bail. It is probable his case will be given to a grand jury January 28.

Air Liner Landed Before Passengers Learn of Danger

With its great stabilizer suddenly tearing loose, an Eastern Air Transport plane began vibrating in mid-air at 3:40 o'clock yesterday morning, only a few minutes after it had taken off from Washington-Hoover Airport bound for Newark.

A veteran pilot, 34-year-old Fred A. Jones, and Co-pilot G. V. Frieberger succeeded in landing the ship with its three women and two men passengers and five bags of mail at Capitol Airport, Bladensburg, Md., before the passengers learned of the trouble.

Air-line officials said the slip stream from the propeller had spewed ice and mud on the stabilizer as the plane took off, ripping away its fastener. Passengers and cargo were transferred to another plane and the flight was resumed after an hour's delay.

Club Hostess Held In Fatal Shooting

Cambridge, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Mrs. Melvin A. Rose, hostess at the Sandy Hill Country Club, where James Murphy was killed, was brought to this city from Baltimore yesterday following an order from the grand jury to rearrest her after she had been exonerated by a coroner's jury.

Mrs. Rose claims the shooting was accidental, as the gun was loaded by William Smith, proprietor of the place, without her knowledge. Judge T. Sangston Insley told the grand jury the fact a person did not know a gun was loaded was no excuse from liability in the taking of a life.

Snow Brings Forecast Of Bumper Grain Crop

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The snow which blankets this part of Maryland is welcomed by farmers, who report prospects of one of the best wheat crops in years.

The snow acts as a blanket to the grain against extreme cold weather and almost invariably, say farmers, a bumper crop follows when there is plenty of snow during the winter.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

Strange as it seems, when Sir Conan Doyle wrote his world famous series of detective stories—the adventures of Sherlock Holmes—the man he made his hero was patterned after a living man who had nothing to do with the investigation of criminal cases. The real life Holmes was Dr. Joseph Bell, a physician under whom Doyle studied medicine.

Dr. Bell had the uncanny power of telling a man's past history merely by looking at him and studying his actions, clothes, demeanor, and other characteristics. Doyle tells of one case where Dr. Bell met a patient for the first time, and just by looking at him and hearing him speak, determined accurately that he was an ex-soldier, recently discharged as a noncommissioned officer in a Highland regiment stationed at the Barbadoes.

This he knew because the man, although polite, kept his hat on—a soldierly characteristic which would have been outgrown if he had been out of the army long. The man appeared to be Scotch, he had a bearing of authority but obviously was not a commissioned officer, and he was suffering from a complaint peculiar to the West Indies.

Many times in Doyle's fiction his detective-hero likewise reconstructed a man's past by simply glancing at him or hearing him speak.

Club Owners Talk Dogs; Stymied

Go Into Extra Innings on Braves' Problem; Success Seen.

Reaffirm League Stand Baseball and Racing Will Not Mix.

By Edward J. Neil.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP).—Club owners of the National League went into extra innings tonight in an effort to solve the financial problems of the Boston Braves, beset by racing dogs, but without any evidence of what that solution might be.

With a pause only for lunch, the magnates and League President Ford Frick worried at the situation from 10 a. m. into the evening dusk, and the only definite word that came from the consulting chambers was reaffirmation of the league's stand that baseball and dog racing do not mix.

Opposed to Idea.

"The club owners and representatives again went on record as being unalterably opposed to playing National League baseball games in any place or park where dog racing is held or permitted," the statement said.

The problem centers around the developments that followed efforts of Emil Fuchs, president of the Braves, to recoup his baseball losses in Boston by establishing a dog track for night racing in Braves Field this summer. The league promptly declared this impossible, and now the Braves' lease on the ball park has been declared null and void in favor of an agreement with a dog racing syndicate, leaving the ball club homeless.

Making Progress.

"I feel we have accomplished something," said Frick after the first few hours of discussion of a new financial set-up for the Braves. "We are making progress and I expect that before today's session adjourns there is an excellent chance that the situation will be adjusted satisfactorily from the standpoint of the National League, and to the satisfaction of the baseball world."

Out-of-town club owners canceled reservations they had made on trains home tonight. The clubs were represented as follows: St. Louis, Sam Breadon; Pittsburgh, William E. Benswanger; Chicago, P. K. Wrigley and John O. Seys; Boston, Emil Fuchs and Charles F. Adams; Brooklyn, Robert Quinn, James Mulvey, Joseph Gilleaudeau and Stephen McKeever; Philadelphia, Gerald P. Nugent; Cincinnati, Mary MacPhail; New York, Charles A. Stoneham, James J. Tierney and Leo Bondy.

Far into the night the magnates wrestled with the vexing problem and if they were any nearer to a solution they took no one into their confidence.

They did not even take time out for dinner, sending out for trays of food instead and continuing their discussions over sandwiches and coffee.

College Group Reaffirms 'Old Saw'

Athletes Are Due No More Than Other Students, Is Report at Atlanta.

ATLANTA, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—The committee on recruiting of Association of American Colleges today reaffirmed "the historic position that athletes should receive no more and no less consideration than any other group of students."

"All students should be treated exactly alike as regards scholarships, grant-in-aids, loans and jobs," its report said. "We believe that athletes themselves would benefit greatly if all institutions would receive and treat them exactly as all other students."

Scholarships, loans and jobs should be granted, the report urged, only on the basis of merit or need.

Athletic proselyting received only minor attention in the report devoted mainly to "unfair competition in student recruiting generally."

The report was termed a preliminary one as it was filed at the closing session of the college association meeting here. The committee, headed by President J. Charles Turck, of Centre College, Danville, Ky., will continue its study another year.

The committee recognized that the right kind of student solicitation" will help both college and students, but pointed to numerous harmful practices arising from rigorous efforts to keep classrooms full at any price during the economic depression.

Ray Morrison Named Coach At Vandy

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 18 (AP).—Ray Morrison, ringmaster of the famous "aerial circus" at Southern Methodist University, is coming back to the scenes of his student triumphs as head football coach at Vanderbilt University.

He wired Chancellor James H. Kirkland late today from Dallas that he accepted Vanderbilt's offer to succeed the veteran Dan McGugin, who quit his active coaching duties at the end of the past season to devote his full time to the post of athletic director.

Neither Morrison's salary nor the length of his contract was announced. It was understood, however, that he will receive an annual stipend of $10,000. He will bring one assistant, Russell MacIntosh, from S. M. U. The new coach is expected in Nashville early next month to take over spring practice.

Six Weeks' Uncertainty.

"Happy to accept invitation to work with you. Best wishes," Morrison wired Chancellor Kirkland, who said he was pleased that the matter had been settled after six weeks' of uncertainty.

Morrison, a native of Mackenzie, Tenn., and quarter back on the Vanderbilt team from 1908 through 1911, has been at S. M. U. since 1922.

The Mustangs' many intersectional contests under Morrison won them recognition as a team not only excellent in football prowess, but with a touch of the spectacular which pleases crowds and fills stadiums. Morrison is generally considered an inventive, resourceful and unorthodox type of coach.

Went to Military School.

Upon graduation from Vanderbilt Morrison became athletic director and teacher at Branham and Hughes Military Academy. In 1916 he went to S. M. U. to assume the enormous task of teaching mathematics, coaching football, basket ball, baseball and track, serving as manager of all the teams and supervising the physical training of all men and women in the school.

During the World War Morrison went to Fort Oglethorpe in 1917, and in 1918 came to Vanderbilt as football coach and Y. M. C. A. secretary. When Dan McGugin returned the following year, Morrison went to the Gulf Coast Military Academy as athletic director. Moving to Dallas in 1920, he was freshman coach two years before becoming head football coach in 1922.

Mississippi State Sets Sasse Parley

Meeting Slated Monday on Coaching Situation.

Starkville, Miss., Jan. 18 (AP). Those who believe Mississippi State's football teams can be lifted from the doldrums by a nationally known coach were called upon tonight to assemble in Jackson next Monday presumably for the purpose of assisting in obtaining the services of Maj. Ralph Sasse, former Army mentor.

It was reported that Maj. Sasse has been invited to Jackson to confer with members of the athletic board.

President Humphrey said today Maj. Sasse was being considered by the board as Capt. A. Ross MacKechnie's successor and indicated that the former Army coach had been requested to come to Mississippi to talk terms.

Ekaitis Denies West Md. Offer

Would Like to Remain at Washington College.

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Jan. 19 (Spl.).—George Ekaitis, football coach at Washington College and an alumnus of Western Maryland, said today he had not been approached concerning the coaching position at the Westminster school, although it has been persistently rumored that he will succeed Dick Harlow.

"I like Washington College," Ekaitis stated. "And nothing would suit me better than to stay on as football coach here. I have had no official offer from Western Maryland, nor do I know whether I will receive one. Whether I would accept the position or not must await the time when and if such an offer is made."

Ekaitis, who also boxed for the Green Terrors and appears to be capable of coaching the ring team, indicated his attitude would be influenced by the attractiveness of the offer.

Haygood, Long Gridiron Figure in South, Dies

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 18 (AP).—A heart attack suffered while visiting here today ended the career of James R. Haygood, 54, who had devoted his life to football in the South for more than 30 years.

He was head football coach at Southwestern University, Memphis, Tenn., where for the last four years he had directed athletics and turned out small but scrappy elevens who regularly challenged teams from much larger schools.

Might Be True, Says Baer of Betrothal

Mary Kirk Brown at Side; "Almost Anything Might Happen."

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Rumors that Max Baer will be married again within two weeks "might be true," the heavyweight champion of the world smilingly admitted today.

"I won't say yes and I won't say no," replied the beaming Baer when asked about the possibility of a marriage to dark-eyed, dark-haired Mary Kirk Brown, of New York and Atlanta. "Almost anything might happen."

Baer was at the Roney Plaza Sun Club when interviewers found him today. Miss Brown was there, too, in polka dot pajamas. "Come darling," she smiled, "or we'll be late."

But the champion lingered to discuss the report. "I am going back to New York after I fight Jimmy Maloney here next Thursday night," he volunteered.

Will Return to Miami.

"Then I'm coming back to Miami for a month. You can't tell what this Florida moon and the palm trees will do for me then."

Baer and Miss Brown have been together frequently since the pugilist arrived here Wednesday. The girl, in her early twenties, arrived on the same morning to join her mother, Mrs. Gloria Perry, winter resident of a fashionable Miami Beach hotel.

The champion escorted her to a cocktail party Wednesday afternoon. They were at the Embassy Club and Barney Gallant's New Ira's Club until an early hour Thursday morning.

Newspapermen began interrogating Miss Brown as early as yesterday afternoon. She was all but cordial.

"I've just met him," she snapped. She said she "understands" Baer is in Miami, "training for something," but she could not be sure whether he was training "for a fight or for a rhumba."

No, No, She Declares.

"Yes, I've been out with him, but so have a lot of other girls. Engaged to him? No, no, my Lord, no."

Babe Risko Is Matched With Dundee in Garden

China Will Return To Davis Cup Play

Japan and Canada Missing; January 31 Deadline.

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—With 13 days still to go before the lists are closed, the British Lawn Tennis Association, holder of the Davis Cup, today announced that 14 nations had entered the 1935 international tennis competition, including China, which has not played since 1928. The deadline is January 31, with the draw scheduled for the next day.

Two leading challengers of other years, Japan and Canada, are missing. China has challenged in the North American zone along with the United States and Mexico. Brazil and Uruguay have filed in the South American zone and the other nine in the European zone.

Those which will play in Europe are Australia, Czechoslovakia, France and Germany, the zone semifinalists of 1934, who automatically qualified, and Holland, Italy, New Zealand, Poland and South Africa.

Subsidizing Defended by Pitt Coach

Jock Sutherland Says He Sees No Harm in Aiding Athletes.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 18 (AP).—Rising to the defense of subsidization in college athletics, Dr. John Bain Sutherland head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, voices the belief there isn't anything wrong "in aiding the boys who play football."

The tall, slightly graying Dr. Sutherland, with a reputation as the "Silent Scot," was asked to give his opinion of the round of discussion over the country on the system of helping students who win recognition in athletics.

The Pitt mentor, known as "Jock" wherever football is played, said:

"I don't care who is subsidized on my squad. As far as subsidization of players is concerned, it is getting no better fast, although I do believe it is not being carried on in the way it once was. For my part, I can't see how it is going to be prevented.

"Usually you will find the ones who are kicking the loudest are the ones who are merely covering up more than others.

"I got some help going through school and I can't see anything wrong with that.

"The boys working on college papers, members of the band and hundreds of others receive aid. I can't see any difference in aiding the boys who play football."

Dr. Sutherland was a lineman on the University of Pittsburgh's 1916 football team, called by many football men one of the greatest of college aggregations. That eleven was coached by Glenn Warner, and "Jock" succeded him after Warner went to Stanford.

No Eastern team has beaten a Sutherland-coached eleven in several years.

Virginia U. Defeats V. M. I. Five, 33-27

Fights Off Late Rally; Sturm Top Scorer.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—University of Virginia basket ballers jumped into an early lead here tonight and fought off a desperate V. M. I. second half rally to win, 33 to 27.

Capt. Henry Sturm and Zeisberg paced Cavaliers with 11 and 9 points, while Charlie Hancock's 7 points led V. M. I. Scorers and Frank Raffo's defensive work stood out. The Cavaliers ran up a 10-to-2 margin before Hancock sank the first field goal for the Cadets after twelve minutes.

By John R. Vosburgh.

BEATEN and downtrodden in interhigh basket ball for three successive years, Western High yesterday rose out of the depths of 29 straight series defeats to tumble the highly favored Maroon of Tech into the ranks of the vanquished, 22 to 19, and throw the annual race for the championship into something close to turmoil.

While the Georgetowners were scoring their brilliant upset, Eastern widened its series lead at the expense of Roosevelt, 38 to 27, for its third series victory in three starts.

Capt. Lavelle Dean, playing slightly more than half the game, led the Lincoln Parkers' offensive with 23 points to write a new individual scoring record in the interhigh records. The Eastern ace tallied all his counters in the second half, pulling Eastern up from the short end of a 16-8 score at half time to win in a walk. Tech and Western played on the Roosevelt floor. The other game took place at Tech.

Packs Many Thrills.

The Tech-Western game packed enough thrills to last for the rest of the series. Marking resumption of relations between the two schools for the first time since members of their football teams battled in a fist fight which canceled the remaining games of the grid series, good sportsmanship and clean play were apparent throughout. The keyed-up Western students at one time gave Tech a technical foul shot when they booed one of the officials' decisions but the Western team quickly stilled its rabid followers. The place was in a virtual uproar for the entire 40 minutes of play.

Flashing a fast-passing, fast-shooting game which had the Techmen running in circles throughout the first half, the Red team jumped to a 14-4 lead and then displayed some brainy basket ball in the last two periods to hold off the rallying Maroon five when the pace became warmer.

Standing out from start to finish was the individual duel between Capt. Francis (Reds) Daly, of Tech, the premier scholastic player in the city, and Capt. Phil Maloney, of Western. For the first time, probably in his playing career, the great red-head found himself held scoreless from the floor.

Quarter Back Stars.

It was a battle between two football players, Maloney, a quarter back, and Daly, a tackle, with the quarter back walking off with all the honors. The rough and ready Maloney not only shackled Daly completely, but found time to snare two baskets and two free shots for 6 points, while Daly was making good twice from the foul line for his sole points. Maloney was appointed captain for the game by Coach Cliff Moore shortly before the opening whistle.

The defeat was the first of the season for Tech at the hands of a scholastic team. Only the Georgetown Freshmen held a victory over the Manual Trainers, whose season's record read 10 victories in 11 starts prior to yesterday's tussle.

A heavy favorite to beat the Red team and a favorite to take the interhigh crown, Tech now is enmeshed in a triple tie for second place. Despite Eastern's lead at the present, the strength displayed by Central and Western virtually makes it a wide-open race for all four teams.

Scoreless From Floor.

Western held Tech scoreless from the floor throughout the first half. Young Joe Hanley, at center for Western, was keeping Billings covered like a tent and with Maloney dogging Daly to ineffectiveness Tech was in a sad way. Western had a 9-3 lead at the end of the Occaquan High Wins.

Alexandria, Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Occoquan High School won its fourth victory in five starts at Lee-Jackson High School here tonight, winning an overtime game from Lee-Jackson High, 24-17. The score was 16-16 at the end of the regular playing time, but the visitors led by W. Bourne, rallied strongly to win going away. Lee-Jackson won the girls' game, 31-16.

6,000 Feet Down an Alp—Skiing Great Fun!

Takes But Three Weeks to Learn; Little Man Easier to Teach.

By Paul Gallico.

INNSBRUCK, Austrian Tyrol, Jan. 11 (via mail).—Notes from the Tyrolese Alps: Everybody here has skis. Young men and fine, strapping-looking young girls with their hair done in two long braids and hanging down the sides of rosy faces, old gentlemen with white whiskers, fat ladies, thin ladies and even children—boys and girls who can be no more than 6 or 7 years old.

Every day, sunny or cloudy, snow or clear, they have themselves hoisted some 6,000 feet up the side of an Alp, don their skis and, with knapsacks on their backs, they are off to play in the snow on the sloping mountainsides. In the middle of the day they come into the little rest house called the "See Grube" (why an Alpine restaurant some 10,000 feet above sea level is called the Seaglades I will never know), flushed, laughing and mostly covered with snow from head to foot. They then unpack their knapsacks and take out thick, black bread sandwiches, order a plate of hot soup and a bottle of beer from the restaurant and make their midday meal.

It makes one feel stodgy to be on foot, and more or less nailed to one spot, especially, when, after their midday repast, the ski-runners, young and old, step onto their long, flat boards, slip their wrists through the two leather thongs on the end of their two balancing and pushing sticks, and go slithering off around the corner of the little chalet. I followed to the corner, stomping in street shoes through a couple of feet of snow, just to see where they went. Behind the house was a huge white slope, simply peppered with ski-runners, climbing, gliding, zigzagging or tumbling into the snow.

Miney Myerson, 4 to 1, Takes Hialeah Feature Race by Length

Quel Jeu 2d Under Poor Handling

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—The Arcadia, a 6-furlong dash for 4-year-olds and upward, attracted the best field on today's card and resulted in a one-length victory for G. W. Ogle's Miney Myerson. The gelded son of Amberjack, away from the races since mid-November, at Bowie, had all his old speed and held the Arden Farms' Quel Jeu safe. The latter, weakly handled, beat C. T. Grayson's Hope To Do by a length and a half for the place.

Miney Myerson closed at just under 4 to 1 and made the fast time of 1:10 4-5, three-fifths of a second slower than his own track record. Some Pomp and Crowning Glory were equal choices. The latter broke poorly and never could catch a horse. Some Pomp fared little better.

Takes Daylight Lead.

Jockey C. W. Smith performed faultlessly in the saddle astride the winner, which was one of the best sprinters at Narragansett prior to his one disappointing effort at Bowie last fall. The boy sent his mount into a daylight lead. The bearer of the green and white-hooped silks ran the speedy Hope To Do into the ground and had enough left to stave off the closing bid of Quel Jeu, which might have come closer under a stronger finish by M. Winters. The others were well beaten.

General Parth, a handicap winner at the Tropical Park meeting for the Peconic Stable, owned by James D. Norris, of Chicago, ran a mile in 1:37 to win the Eau Gallie Claiming Handicap, supporting feature to the Arcadia. Well played at $8.60 for $2, the 4-year-old bay son of General Lee closed a big gap to prevail in a gallop by four lengths under Eddie Litzenberger. Arthur Hullcoat's Garden Message likewise finished fast to annex the place, a half length in advance of George Boehle's Major General. Marmion, the favorite, stopped to a walk after threatening the leaders leaving the far turn.

Purple Knight Wins.

Purple Knight, a first-time starter from the stable of H. C. McGehee, showed a high brand of speed in the 6-furlong dash for maiden 3-year-olds that ushered in today's program. Closing at $38.90 for $2, the colt romped into a long lead and won by five lengths. At one time he was nearly ten lengths clear. Winged Flight closed a lot of ground and took the place by a half length from Lady Wisdom. The time was 1:12 2-5.

Races for green juveniles are supposed to be tough on the talent but they had no complaint coming when Eddie C., $4.20 choice, overcame the worst of the breaks and won the second race by a half-length. The young gelding was in close quarters early, but caught the tiring Zowie in the last furlong and held Little Nymph safe in the final drive. Little Nymph finished fast to take the place from Berry Patch. The winner's time for the three furlongs was :35 1-5.

Kindacorn Victor.

Kindacorn, one of several well played platers in the seven furlongs of the third, was extended to the limit to take a half-length decision from the lightly backed Doris B. It took one of Don Meade's best rides to save the day. Flowery was another half-length back. Kindacorn overhauled Sun Cloister before reaching the stretch and held on stubbornly to the end, returning $8.10.

An odds-on favorite was beaten a nose when Seawick was nipped right on the wire by the $14.40 for $2 shot Pocket in the sixth race. Elwawa, the early leader, was third, a half length behind. The latter and Hardware, which finished fourth, were in close quarters in the blanket finish right at the end.

Dear Al: Hialeah Race Track, Jan. 18.

When something new in the way of turf accessories is found, this race track will have it. Just to prove that they are on their toes, officials have provided a space at the bottom of each race on the program where notations regarding the change of equipment on horses can be made. The opening day brought a play of $250,931, of course a record for Florida this winter. However, the mark fell $5,000 short of the first day of the 1934 session. Track officials are satisfied and predictions are being made that the average handle for the season will be around the $300,000 figure. Play is expected to make a steady rise until the peak of the meeting is reached. Racing Secretary Charles J. McLennan is being congratulated on his handicapping. In the opening day's $2,500 race the first five horses were separated by only a length and a half. I received a letter today signed "Heavy Going," from Bethesda. He, or she, says: "Please have Mike and Joe run that foot race you've been harping about. I'm betting 3 to 1 that both of them break down before they reach the half-mile pole." Mum's the world about today's picks. BILL.

First race—Wha Hae has all the earmarks of a winning favorite in the day's opening sprint. This juvenile has shown a world of speed and needs only a good ride. Wise Duke comes to the races backed by good trials and may be a factor. Baby Talk is from the Bradley barn and is dangerous.

Second race—Gifted Lady appears to have found a sprint where her brand of speed will be all necessary to gain a set of brackets. Scotch Queen looks like the one to beat here. Masked Revue may be better than rated and deserves money mention.

Third race—Epaulet probably will draw Wright for the saddle work and I expect to see this one in the thick of the battle for the main award. Sun Fairplay won rather impressively in Maryland last fall and if up to a race will have something to say in the stretch run. Great Haste for the show end.

Fourth race—Foxy Agnes is one of the sharpest 3-year-olds on the lot and will be hard to take care of in this mile test. Georgie Watson is entrusted with the handling, and I look for a good ride. Earl Porter and Stegal for the place and show.

Fifth race—Late Date has proven that he is at tops, and I expect another winning effort from him. He hooks up with New Deal and gets a 4-pound break in the weights. Sabula, one that I have tried to awake, is due to surprise any day now.

Sixth race—Fairly Wild, with Bobby Watson riding, may find this field to his liking and step home. Seems capable of handling the top-weight assignment. Don't Blush for the place, and Peedeeque to show.

Seventh race—I'm certainly expecting big things from the Watson Brothers, because I'm going to My Counsellor, with Georgie up, in the finale. Long Bit and Little Lad for the other awards.

9-Year-Old Choctaw Wins at Even Money

San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 18 (AP). The Choctaw, still a useful performer despite his 9 years, carried Mrs. V. Russell's silks to a narrow victory in the 1 1-16 miles feature at Alamo Downs.

Winner of the Juvenile Handicap at Hawthorne in 1928 when he paid 70 to 1, the aged gelding returned only even money for his gallant effort. Coming from off the pace, he whipped C. E. Wilson's Baby Wrack by a neck in a stirring stretch duel. C. E. Smith's Twill was third.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PURPLE KNIGHT, $38.90, $16.90, $12.30; WINGED FLIGHT, $15.60, $7.20; LADY WISDOM, $4.40.

PURPLE KNIGHT broke running, ran into a long lead, saved ground all the way, and won easily. WINGED FLIGHT got away slowly, but worked his way up, and finished fast. LADY WISDOM, away in a tangle, closed a big gap. FLIGHT OF GOLD, on the outside, finished gamely. SAINT CLEO ran a fair race. FLYING SNOW ran out on the stretch turn. DAN SKILLING stopped to a walk.

SECOND RACE—Three furlongs. Nursery course (straightaway). Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:47½. Off at 2:49. Winner, J. J. Moran's ch. g. (2), by Stimulus—Virginia. Trained by D. Mara. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:35 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EDDIE C., $4.20, $2.60, $2.80; LITTLE NYMPH, $4.40, $3.40; BERRY PATCH, $10.70.

EDDIE C. away in a tangle, was forced to overcome a lot of early interference, and finished with a rush in final sixteenth. LITTLE NYMPH, on the outside, came with a powerful rush and was wearing the winner down. BERRY PATCH, well up from the start, held on gamely. ZOWIE broke well in his stride, showed good speed, and ran a fair race. SURRY showed a good effort. CAMDEN is sure to improve over this effort. OTWAY is worth noting.

THIRD RACE—Seven furlongs (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:18½. Off at 3:19. Winner, A. Papa's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINDACORN, $8.10, $4.60, $4.00; DORIS B., $9.00, $6.50; FLOWERY, $17.70.

KINDACORN was a bit slow getting into his stride, moved up fast on outside around turn, took lead in stretch, and stood long drive gamely. DORIS B. was hustled along from the start and made a game effort. FLOWERY was in close quarters in early part and ran a fair race. SUN CLOISTER displayed keen speed for six furlongs and then tired. MIDSHIPMAN is sure to improve. REVONAH tired chasing the pace.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Arcadia. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won cleverly; place, driving. Went to post at 3:46½. Off at 3:48. Winner, G. W. Ogle's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINEY MYERSON, $9.90, $4.50, $3.40; QUEL JEU, $4.70, $2.90; HOPE TO DO, $3.40.

MINEY MYERSON got away fast, raced HOPE TO DO into defeat, then drew away and gamely stalled off the determined bid of QUEL JEU. The latter was outrun in early part but came with a weak finish. HOPE TO DO had speed for half a mile, then tired. WEST MAIN saved much ground on stretch turn, but stopped fast. SOME POMP, away well, had no mishap. CROWNING GLORY, away poorly, and just galloped after the field.

FIFTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000. The Eau Gallie Claiming Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:16. Off at 4:17. Winner, Peconic Stable's b. c. (4), by General Lee—Parthia. Trained by E. Hayward. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENERAL PARTH, $8.80, $5.70, $4.40; GARDEN MESSAGE, $5.60, $4.80; MAJOR GENERAL, $5.80.

GENERAL PARTH broke slow, had to go around his field, closed with a rush in stretch and won going away. GARDEN MESSAGE was miserably ridden. He was taken all over the layout and finished very fast on his own courage. SUN MONK was well up for entire trip. REBEL YELL showed good speed, but stopped badly in final furlong. STAR FIRE had speed for half a mile. SOME KNIGHT broke slow and trailed far back all the way.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:49. Off at 4:51. Winner, Cary T. Grayson's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—POCKET, $14.40, $4.10, $3.00; SEAWICK, $2.70, $2.40; ELWAWA, $4.40.

POCKET, away well, was kept well up, came around field in stretch and just got up to win in last stride. SEAWICK was used up racing ELWAWA into defeat and tired. ELWAWA displayed keen speed, but was bothered some right at the finish. HARDWARE, on the inside all the way in stretch, was in close quarters. HASTINIP had no mishap, being outrun from the start.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:17½. Off at 5:21. Winner, Mrs. W. E Martin's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FLAMING LIGHT, $8.60, $4.10, $2.80; NOBLE SPIRIT, $4.70, $3.00; FREE, $2.40.

FLAMING LIGHT broke very fast, was sent to the front going into first turn, displayed good speed and drew away easily in stretch. NOBLE SPIRIT, away fast, moved up gamely and held on well. FREE was a stout factor from the start and closed fast. INFILEE ran good race. HAPPY HOPES closed a big gap. MARCASITE was almost knocked down turning out of back stretch.

C.U.'s Ringmen V. P. I. Hosts Tonight

Are Expected to Avenge January Defeat; Have Improved Team.

MINDFUL of a cold, black night last January, made even blacker by the flying fists of a bruising squad of rugged mittenpushers, Catholic University's ringmen go into action against V. P. I. at 8 o'clock tonight at Brookland with dynamite in their gloves and revenge in their hearts.

The invaders scored a 6½-1½ victory over the Redbirds last winter at Blacksburg, but it is doubtful if they can repeat tonight, for the Gobblers have slipped a trifle and C. U. is stronger.

Both teams have been revamped since their opening matches last week. An injury to Danny Pyne's shoulder forced him to withdraw from the lists tonight, while enforcement of a freshman rule has removed two of his mates, "Sully" Grecco and Fred Mix, from the line-up.

Mulligan May Get Call.

Either George Mulligan or Red Orth will replace Pyne. Mulligan is more experienced and probably will draw the assignment, although Orth's steady improvement has caught the fancy of Coach Eddie LaFond. Mulligan fought only one fight last winter, winning by a knockout.

Max Brinkman is the second newcomer to the Cardinals' battle array. He faces Will Rothery in the 165-pound class. The former Tech High lad scored a third of C. U.'s points in the V. P. I. match last season, holding Capt. Granville Bussy to a bloody draw.

The third and final change in Catholic's line-up will see Dick Doherty battling in the 145-pound class in place of Fred Mix, who was kayoed in his first bout last week. Doherty's opponent will be a Washington youth, Buddy Herman, a green, but ambitious youth.

The remainder of the line-up will be the same that punched its way through Bucknell last week to a 7-1 victory.

Fred Hall is the only veteran appearing in the V. P. I. line-up. He faces Capt. Ed Thibideau in the 135-pound division and it should be the liveliest scrap of the evening. Thibideau was the only C. U. man to win last winter, and the chap he whipped was Fred Hall, whom he floored for a nine-count.

Has Seven Sophomores.

Seven sophomores will carry Tech's colors into the ring, but there are some who can hit and hit hard; Bob Callahan, for instance. Callahan will tackle Angy Restaino in the 125-pound class and another good bout is in prospect. The Gobbler went to the final of the Southern Conference tournament last season.

The line-ups:

Catholic U.	Weight.	V. P. I.
Miro	115	Hull
Restaino	125	Callahan
Thibideau	135	Hall
Mix	145	Hull
Grecco	155	Dillon
Oliver	165	Rothery
Mulligan	175	Carmel
Fleming	Heavy	Rankin or Zimmerman

Jadick Replica Furr Target In Drills

PHIL FURR, District welterweight champion, who meets Johnny Jadick, former junior welterweight champion, in the feature bout of a program of punch at the Auditorium Monday night, will be prepared to cope with a boxer of the type of the former titleholder if training routine means anything.

Furr has been concentrating his gymnasium workouts on one Joe Ferrone, a former Golden Gloves champion, whose method of maneuvering in the ring is declared by close observers almost an exact duplicate of that employed by Jadick.

Johnny is a stand-up-straight type of fighter—so is Ferrone. Jadick hits as well while moving away as he does while advancing—so does Joe. Joe also picks punches out of the air as does the one-time conqueror of Tony Canzoneri.

Ferrone in Prelim.

For his services as an animated punching bag for Phil in the training campaign, Ferrone has been elected to do six rounds of preliminary punching against Marty Bond, of Baltimore, on the same card. Bond is one of the most seasoned boxers now operating in Baltimore. Ferrone generally is expected to complete the seasoning process by salting him away.

Three four-round bouts will round out the program. Gene Harrington, a Marine welterweight, will make passes at Billy Wells, a sparmate of Landis, in one of them. In the others, Sammy Sweet will face Benny Kessler, Baltimore bantamweight, and Sam Julian, a lightweight from Washington, will oppose Charley Breckenbacker from Baltimore.

Twenty Grand Due In Handicap Today

Will Make His First Start Since Fall of 1932.

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 18 (U.P.).—A definite line on Twenty Grand will be obtained after the running of the $2,500 San Felipe Handicap tomorrow, in which the 1931 Kentucky Derby winner is scheduled to make his first start in competition since the fall of 1932.

Burdened with 126 pounds, the 7-year-old son of St. Germans—Bonus has drawn eighth post position in a field of 11, all of which are candidates to the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, to be run here on February 23.

Trainer William Brennan has entered Gillie to support Twenty Grand in the name of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable in tomorrow's race, which is conditioned for 3-year-olds and upward, at 1 mile.

Coucci Rides Big Beau To New Track Record

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP).—Big Beau, Twenty Grand's workout companion from the Greentree Stables, received an excellent ride from Silvio Coucci today to set a new track record of 1:51 flat at Santa Anita Park. He came from behind to win the Huntington Park $1,000 handicap of a mile and a furlong. This was four-fifths of a second faster than the mark set by Rowdy Boy early in the current meeting.

Last through the first half mile, Big Beau, 6-year-old black horse out of Supremus, started moving up on the back stretch and turned home in fourth position. Under Coucci's urging he headed the field with 50 yards to go and won going away.

Maryland U. Boxers Triumph, 6-2, After Tossers Bow, 39-31

Richmond U. Is Victim In Ring

By Lewis F. Atchison.

HELD firmly in the unrelenting grasp of old Maryland hospitality, the University of Maryland shared another twin bill with Southern opponents last night at Ritchie Coliseum before a throng of 3,800 fans.

The Terrapins dropped a 39-31 decision to North Carolina on the court in a thrill-packed game that had chills tingling up spines and partially atoned for this with a 6-2 win over the University of Richmond ringmen.

Undefeated either within or outside of the conference, Carolina outplayed the home team by a comfortable margin and deserved to win. But Richmond's boxers were powerless in the face of a withering barrage of Maryland punches.

165-Pounders Active.

The 165-pound match between Capt. Freddy Vaughan, of Richmond, and Jack Herbsleb, Maryland's representative, developed into a pool room brawl, with both men standing toe to toe in the center of the arena and flailing away with both hands.

Vaughan went down for no-count in the second after havinb Herbsleb on the verge of a knockout in the first. He went down twice in the second, once from a wild left to the jaw and again of his own volition. The referee called it a draw.

The Terrapins scored again as Walter Webb danced and tapped his way to a decision over inexperienced but willing Dave Krapin. The Richmond youngster attempted to offset Webb's neat boxing with wild, bullish charges that gained him nothing.

Floored for a count of nine in the first, second and third rounds, Barty Tenore, Richmond's 155-pounder, lost to Maxie McAboy on a technical kayo after 1 minute and 4 seconds of the third round. Tenore was strictly a defensive boxer after one of Mac's steaming rights to the bread basket in the first round.

Both Teams Forfeit.

Each team forfeited a bout before entering the ring, so it was all even as short little Bill Waller climbed through the ropes to trade blows with lanky Ray Danier—but not for long.

Waller climbed all over his taller opponent, belabored him with an assortment of well-timed punches to win the first two rounds by the proverbial city block. Lanier rallied in the third, but only a knockout could have won for him. That's what the fans thought. The referee called it a draw.

Ivan Nedomatsky, hair slicked back in movie fashion, put the Terps one up on their guests in the second bout, a 135-pound affair, knocking out "Winnie" Crenshaw in 45 seconds of the first round. Crenshaw crumpled under a withering barrage of lefts and rights to the head and was almost knocked through the ropes. Referee Ed Crockman halted the slaughter.

Tarheels Are Smooth.

Unleashing a smooth, well-oiled passing attack that penetrated Maryland's ragged zone defense North Carolina stormed the Terrapin breastworks and carried the night with a well deserved 39-31 victory.

It was the Tarheels' fifth consecutive victory of the Southern Conference race and firmly established them as the foremost contender for the 1935 championship.

As bewildered as a pack of hound dogs in a blizzard, Maryland was powerless to stop the visitors' initial thrust that carried them to a 24-9 lead midway in the first half. They were never headed despite the Terps' frantic but futile play in the closing minutes.

With Jim McCachren, its all-Conference forward, directing operations, North Carolina filtered through the home team's defense like mercury sliding through a tea strainer. Most of the points were made close into the basket, frequently with the scorer wide open for the ever-ready passes of his mates.

McCachren Is Injured.

McCachren was injured late in the game and removed to the infirmary with a bad gash over his eye. Bill Andorka, of Maryland, also was removed from the fray but for an entirely different reason—too many fouls.

Maryland's most serious threat failed to bridge the gap between the teams but it did bring them within four points of the visitors, 26-30, midway in the final period. But when the Terps seemed on the verge of drawing abreast of them, the Tarheels applied the pressure and pulled ahead to a safer margin.

Carolina's close guarding, a sticky man-to-man defense, kept Maryland off balance throughout the rest of the period and the visitors froze the ball to clinch the matter.

Buscher, although far from right, was Maryland's high gun. For Carolina, Jason Glace, a tall, dangling center, and Mel Nelson were high, but it was McCachren's sterling leadership that guided the North Carolinians to victory.

Hyattsville's Five Downs Bowie, 33-9

HYATTSVILLE High School's basket ball quintet advanced into a tie with Mount Rainier High for the lead in the Prince Georges County senior court championship race by routing Bowie 33 to 9 yesterday afternoon on the National Guard Armory floor at Hyattsville.

Hyattsville High's girls' sextet made it a clean sweep by drubbing Upper Marlboro 39 to 15 on the Hyattsville floor in an opening game for the girls' county championship.

St. John's Slates Eight Grid Rivals

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Closing negotiations with Elon College, of North Carolina, for a game to be played here on October 12, the 1935 football schedule of St. John's College was completed today.

Eight games are listed, the season opening and closing with two traditional rivals, Maryland and Johns Hopkins, respectively.

The schedule:

September 28, Maryland, at College Park. October 5, Randolph-Macon; 12, Elon College; 19, Virginia, at Charlottesville; 26, American University.

Aldie Boys and Girls Win Over Leesburg

Aldie, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Aldie High School boys and girls basket ball teams scored a double victory over Leesburg High here tonight. The boys team won, 21 to 15, with Frank Ish tallying 10 points for the winners, while the girls took a thriller, 26 to 25, with Miss Pearson giving Aldie victory in the last five seconds of play with a fast shot.

Harrisonburg Teachers Announce Court Card

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—A schedule which will bring the strong teams of the Savage School of Physical Education, of New York, and the Farmville State Teachers College to Harrisonburg for two of the four games to be played here, and which will be completed by games against New College, of Columbia University, and the State Teachers College, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., was announced for the basket ball team at the State Teachers College yesterday.

The schedule:

Shepherdstown, January 25 or 26. Harrisonburg.
Blackstone, February 8, Blackstone; Westhampton, 9, Richmond; Farmville, 15, Harrisonburg; Savage, 23, Harrisonburg; East Stroudsburg, March 1, East Stroudsburg, and New College, 9, Harrisonburg.

St. Rita's to Oppose Y.W.C.A. Senior Team

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—St. Rita's basket ball team, a member of the Washington Recreation League, will play a regular league game at the Washington Y. W. C. A. tomorrow night against the Y. W. C. A. senior team.

St. Rita's has won two games, tied two and lost two. It has five more games scheduled. Besides its regular schedule, it has booked engagements with Glen Bernie, Alexandria High, Jewish Community Center, St. Mary's Academy, Alexandria High alumni and St. Agnes' Episcopal School. Teams desiring games may book them through Mildred Mess at Alexandria 6-F-13 after 6 p. m.

Coach at Frostburg.

Frostburg, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Eddie Finzel, this city, who gained fame in soccer circles by winning a place on the all-American team which visited Scotland last year, has offered his services to the local Boy Scout organization as coach for the current basket ball season. Mr. Finzel will supervise practice matches every Saturday at the gymnasium of State Teachers College.

Rockville Five Tops County League

Damascus High Routed, 63-15; Ochsenreiter in Star Role.

ROCKVILLE High took undisputed possession of first place in the Montgomery County league yesterday when it defeated Damascus High, 63 to 15, for its seventh straight win, on the Rockville court.

Although the varsity played but a little over a quarter, Gene Ochsenreiter kept up his sensational scoring, accounting for 15 points. Wilson scored 13 for runner-up honors. Johnson, the visitors star, accounted for 11 points. The losers were held to three foul shots in the first half, Rockville leading 24 to 3.

Letters Are Awarded By Hagerstown High

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Forty-six letters were awarded to Hagerstown High School athletes at a banquet held at the school.

Letters were presented as follows: Field ball, Gladys Kuhn, Peg Schlosser, Eleanor Shue, Jane White, Helen Keller, Rose Ludwig, Norma Smith, Blanche Woods, Elizabeth Beard, Yvonne Calhoun, Jane Reed and Edna May Leiter; soccer, Hopkins, Stonesifer, Murray, Holmes, Moore, Kelley, Kendle, Redmond, Ridge, Springer, Mills and Carpenter; football, Ayers, Crockett, Dorsey, Bob Eves, Fisher, Gardner, Gaylor, Hoffman, Hutson, Humphrey, Meighan, Peddicord, Smead, Staley, Webb, Worth, Zook, Farra, Knode, Miller and Frakes.

C. U. Fencers in First Test Against Hopkins

Fencing, Catholic University's most recent addition to the realm of local intercollegiate sports, makes its debut this afternoon at Brookland, where the Catholic U. swordsmen cross blades with Johns Hopkins U. The cutting-up begins at 3:30 o'clock.

Catholic's team will consist of Al Goenner at No. 1; Jerome Rozyski, No. 2, and Bill Suite, No. 3. Each member of the local team duels each member of the visiting squad—nine matches in all.

Nelson, Handball Ace, Plays Exhibition Here

George Nelson, Y. M. C. A. singles handball champion, will play an exhibition game against Wallace Winkler, of Washington, today at 4 p. m., in connection with the program of the conference of the District Physical Educational Association.

The men's tumbling team from Roosevelt High School and the Y. M. C. A. badminton team also will give exhibitions at the same time.

Poolesville Defeats Sherwood, 37 to 26

Poolesville High exhibited its best form of the season last night in trimming the Sherwood courtmen, making their Montgomery County League debut, 37 to 26, on the Poolesville court.

The hosts compiled a 20-to-10 lead at the half, and with Daniels and Cubbitt throwing them up, staved off a threatening Sherwood rally led by Ray Rurner and coasted home with a 11-point lead. Daniels and Cubbitt accounted for 13 and 12 points.

Bucknell Here, Meets G. U. Tonight

Hilltop Five Same That Faced Navy; Hargaden Seeks Score Honor.

FIGHTING its way through a wilderness of defeats in one of its worst seasons of recent years, Georgetown makes another attempt to halt its losing streak tonight at Tech High School where it meets Bucknell in a conference game at 8:30 o'clock. The Hoya Frosh and Central High School will supply a preliminary attraction an hour earlier.

Georgetown can obtain outright possession of fourth place in the conference standings, which it now shares with Carnegie Tech, with a victory tonight. The Hilltoppers turned the trick earlier in the season, whipping the Bisons by a 26-15 count on their home floor.

G. U. Uses Same Team.

Coach Fred Mesmer intends to use the same team that started against Navy last Wednesday and played a great game, aside from scoring enough points. Capt. Ed Hargaden and Don Gibeau will team at forwards, with Chubby Parcells, center; Ben Zola and Joe Corliss, guards.

Bucknell probably will rely on Monahan and Wisherspoon, forwards; Davis, center; Filer and Fitzgerald or Johnny Sitarsky, guards. Sitarsky was the hero of Bucknell's win over Miami in the first annual Orange Bowl game in Florida last December.

Tonight's game gives Hargaden another opportunity of increasing his scoring average in the conference. While not particularly striving to score all of the points, the Syracuse ace would not be adverse to annexing the championship, which escaped him the past two seasons, once by a single point.

Standing of the teams:

Rudy Dusek Added To Mat Program

Faces Fischer Thursday; Others Are Signed.

In an effort to make the wrestling card at the Auditorium next Thursday night the most stupendous, magnificent, colossal—in other words, pretty good—program of its kind ever presented here, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday signed an elegant mob of hulk heavers to perform in the preliminaries to the Ed (Don) George-Jim Browning headline exhibition.

Ribald Rudy Dusek, the Topsy of matdom, will face Eli Fischer, who once gave his all for deal Old Rutgers, in a semifinal scheduled for 45 minutes. Roisterous Rudy has proven such a delight to local grunt and groan addicts that he is becoming almost a fixture here. Fischer has reigned as a prime local favorite in the past.

Karl Pojelio, the lithe Lithuanian, will face Stan Sokolis in a 30-minute time limit preliminary. Pojello once had aspirations on the heavyweight wrestling championship. Sokolis is a familiar figure in Washington rings.

Little Beaver, the ferocious redskin, will oppose Mayes McLain in another preliminary scheduled for 30 minutes.

Might Be True, Says Max Baer

a much milder form, between Baer and Miss Brown first appeared when she was his guest after the Baer-Carnera fight at Westchester Country Club in New York.

She was married here a year ago to Robert Martin, stock broker, but the union was short-lived. They parted at the end of a week. The marriage climaxed a whirlwind courtship on the sands at Miami Beach.

Baer will leave tomorrow for Tampa, where his brother, Buddy Baer, is scheduled for a bout Monday night.

While the champion pursued romance, his manager, Ancil Hoffman, was reported ready to sign with the New York free milk fund for babies for future title defenses.

Bill Farnsworth, promoter for the milk fund, announced that Hoffman would sign within 48 hours to break loose from Madison Square Garden which holds a contract for Baer's next championship fight.

"Hoffman phoned me to arrange a conference," Farnsworth said, "and within 10 minutes we had reached an agreement. Hoffman has sought to promote bouts himself either in the Garden or in the Garden's Long Island city bowl, but a representative failed to show up here this week to close the deal."

Johnston Laughs Off Milk Fund Report

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Announcement from Miami that Max Baer would be signed to defend his world heavyweight championship for the New York milk fund brought terse comment from President John Kilpatrick of Madison Square Garden.

Chargers in Triumph.

Jimmy Foxx Visions A's in First Division

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18 (AP).—Take it straight from Jimmy Foxx, those who remarked about his "insanity" in switching from first base to catcher for the Athletics will find the shoe on the other foot when the final pennant standings for the 1935 campaign are compiled next September.

"And," says the mild-mannered lad from Sudlersville, Md., with the batload of dynamite, "if we win the pennant or land high in the first division—and I think we will—I hope I remain as crazy for the rest of my baseball career."

The burly slugger's conversation was made today by way of setting everybody right about his agreement to leave the first base duties for the coming season to a rookie recruit, while he dons the mask and chest protector.

"Do you think I'd go behind the bat if I didn't think the Athletics had a chance to finish in the money?" he asserted, and then, answering his own question:

"Certainly not. I honestly believe we'll have a good chance to win the pennant. That's why I agreed to become a catcher."

"He convinced me that the A's had a first-division ball club," Jimmy said, "and that my catching would help the team materially. So it didn't take me long to give him an answer.

"Believe me, I really like the idea of returning to my old job. I've heard remarks about my insanity for going back of the plate. Maybe I'm crazy, for doing it, but I don't believe I'm going to get hurt. I know how to catch."

Jimmy isn't new to the catching job. Nor is he strange to the pitching box or any of the infield and outfield posts, for he has performed adeptly at all of them.

Laffoon Again Shoots 68 in Practice

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP).—A chill wind and cloudy skies added their handicaps to a long, three-spotted course today as two dozen of the country's leading professionals unlimbered their clubs in preparation for the $2,500 Sacramento Open golf tournament, starting tomorrow.

Despite the adverse weather Ky Laffoon, Chicago, and Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., gave par a beating in practice rounds.

Trees Are Hazards.

The scene of the tournament is an 18-hole course with a yardage of 6,787 from the back tees and par of 36—36—72. It is comparatively flat and free of many gaps, but oak trees, spreading across many of the fairways, provide a distinct hazard for the player whose shot is all out of line.

Among those on hand for the tournament, which will end Monday, are Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., and John Revolta, Milwaukee, who tied for the Los Angeles Open championship this week, Ghezzi winning in the play-off.

Western Upsets Tech in Series

first quarter and though playing for time in the next period had a 14-9 advantage at half-time.

Tech put on the steam in the second half, no longer outclassed by the calm and deliberate Westerners. But it was not until the lanky, 16-year-old Hanley went out of the game for four personals shortly before the final quarter that the Techmen began to look dangerous. They closed the third period trailing, 19 to 10.

With Hanley no longer on his neck, Billings cut loose and scored three baskets in less time than it takes to tell it. A foul by Daly and one by Billings brought the count to 19 to 18, but it was the closest the score was to become. Joe Brennan gave Western a healthier lead with a spectacular side shot with four minutes to go, and then Western wisely played for time. The Tech players, Vermillion and Farrell, shot over the back board when they did get the ball, in their anxiety to tie the score.

Billings Goes Out.

With two minutes to play, Burns made good on a foul shot and Billings went out of the game on personals. Roland missed two fouls for Tech after Brennan had missed two for Western. The Georgetowners continued their strategy of keeping the ball in play and the game ended as Rea, of Tech, sank a foul for the final point.

Roosevelt's first-half lead came at the expense of Eastern substitutes, who remained in the game until shortly before the end of the second quarter. It was all Dean in the second half, however.

Holding the Rough Riders scoreless, Eastern took a 17-16 lead in the third quarter and Dean & Co. stretched it at will in the final period.

Mounts Weigh Selection of New Coach

Board Not to Make Choice for Some Time; Many Seeking Job.

EMMITSBURG, Md., Jan. 18 (AP). Pending a thorough review of the records of all applicants, the Mount St. Mary's College Athletic Board today disclosed it would make no recommendations for appointment as the school's athletic director for some time to the college council.

Arthur H. Malloy, athletic director and coach of the Mountaineers' teams for several years, recently resigned to devote his entire time to his duties as college steward. He will continue his athletic coaching until the end of the school year.

The major problem facing the athletic board is to find a man qualified to handle the football, baseball and basket ball teams, as well as to supervise the school's athletic program. The board believes there are few outstanding coaches who can handle the combined jobs efficiently.

Most of the applications received so far are from men versed mostly in football, although there are several applicants who have had experience in baseball, also. The appointment must be approved by the college council before it is announced.

Thomas Gallagher, of Philadelphia, newly elected president of the National Alumni Association of Mount St. Mary's College, conferred with the athletic board this week, but it was understood no decision was made.

Joseph Lawler, former three-letter athlete at Catholic University, who has been coaching football, basket ball and baseball for the past few years at Jessup (Md.) High School.

John R. McNamara, graduate of Boston College in 1927, where he played football, baseball and basket ball; former member of the Boston Braves baseball team, formerly an assistant coach at Fordham University, later holding a similar position at Boston College.

R. N. Frank, former football star at the University of Pittsburgh and line coach at Amherst College.

Leslie Avery, coach at Roxbury School, Cheshire, Conn.

Frederick Five Tops Poolesville, 25 to 24

Poolesville, Md., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The Frederick Celtics nosed out the Poolesville Rangers in a close and hard-fought game, 25 to 24. The Rangers started like winners and at half time led by 7 points. After reducing the lead to 4 points in the third round, the Celtics struck their stride and evened the score. A foul shot by Holcomb proved the winning point.

Silver Spring Swamped by Alexandria

Apperson and Nugent in Star Roles as Twins Win, 41 to 9.

ALEXANDRIA HIGH increased its lead in the Inter-Suburban League last night before a packed armory in Alexandria, defeating the luckless Silver Spring five, loser in its last four starts, 41 to 9.

After the first three scoreless minutes the Twins started the assault on the visitors' basket and, led by "Nap" Nugent, ran the score to 8-1 at the quarter and increased it to 15 to 4 at the half.

The Taksils were even more baffled in the third quarter and failed to score as the hosts, their passing attack functioning for the first time in three weeks, piled up 15 points to lead 30 to 4, with Johnny Apperson doing the bulk of the scoring.

Robertson's foul goal in the middle of the last quarter started a belated rally on the part of the losers, but the hosts had the game well under control.

Apperson led with 13 points, and Nugent, 10. Shorb's 4 points led the losers.

Wheat Values Point Higher; Weather Aids

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Predictions of the coldest weather yet this winter gave an upward trend to grain prices today, lifting wheat at one stage a cent a bushel.

With almost the entire domestic wheat belt unprotected by a snow blanket, considerable anxiety as to likelihood of crop damage was manifest, but official forecasts indicated the cold wave would generally be preceded by snowfalls. Authoritative estimates suggesting an Argentine exportable wheat surplus 17,000,000 bushels less than recent Government figures had some bullish effect.

Wheat closed nervous, unchanged to ⅝ higher compared wtih yesterday's finish; May, 97½-⅝; corn, unchanged to ½ up; May, 86½-⅝; oats, at ⅛ decline to ⅛ advance, and provisions varying from 5 cents setback to 30 cents gain.

Pertinacious buying in small lots distinguished wheat trade, especially near the end of the day. Helping to impart strength to prices was the fact that Liverpool wheat quotations were a good deal higher than had been expected.

Cotton Market

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—After overnight foreign buying orders had been executed at slight opening advances, cotton turned easier today, sagging 17 to 20 points from initial highs under profit-taking and liquidation. Failure of the demand of Thursday to broaden further led to the conclusion that the Bankhead bill quota figures for 1935 had lost their influence for the time being. May sold off from 12.65 to 12.48 and closed at the low with the general market barely steady at a net loss of 12 to 14 points.

Net gains of 4 to 5 points were established in early trading, but these levels attracted active profit-taking and recent buyers were credited with reselling.

During the morning a fair volume of trade buying orders were uncovered on the first slight reactions and again in the afternoon buying appeared for foreign account, but there was no follow-up, and the general trend was lower. March contracts sold off from 12.59 to 12.39 and October from 12.57 to 12.38. Final prices were at or within a few points of the lows for the day. Exports today 13,917, making 2,826,267 so far this season. Port receipts, 21,863. United States port stocks, 2,929,462.

Cottonseed Oil

Bleachable cottonseed oil closed strong today, advancing 7 to 13 points into new high levels for the year. Total sales were 176 contracts. Houses with cotton and Wall Street connections, as well as Southern trades were the best buyers while the offerings seemed to be supplied largely through profit taking. Crude oil was higher at 9¾ cents bid at all Southern points. Lard closed firm and not far from new high views. Extremely cold weather developing throughout the West and Northwest was expected to bring about a much better demand for lard and many of the allied products. Bleachable spot nominal; January closed 10.95, March, 11.15; May, 11.17; July, 11.23.

A little demand for the coarser grades was being received by fleece wool houses. Strictly combing 56s blood Ohio and similar lustres sold occasionally at 36@37 cents in the grease. Limited quantities of strictly combing 46s, ¾ blood were taken at 34@35 cents grease basis, but for the most part demand remained very narrow. Topmakers, however, were beginning to have a little better call for their stocks of the wool.

New York, Jan. 18.—There is a growing sentiment in favor of the repeal of section 77 of the bankruptcy act, which covers railroad reorganizations, and a return to the proceedings in equity receivership which have been used to reorganize railroad corporations over a long period of decades in the past.

Section 77 of the bankruptcy act was enacted in 1933 in order to hasten and facilitate railroad reorganizations. In times past, fear of obstruction by a dissenting minority among the holders of a particular security issue disturbed in a reorganization was constantly suspended over the heads of those who managed such proceedings. As a result, foreclosure sales had to be resorted to in order to determine the value of the holdings of dissenters, so that they could be disposed of without impairment of their constitutional rights.

Under section 77, such foreclosure sales were made unnecessary. When two-thirds of any class of security approves a plan, the statute provides, the remainder is automatically bound. The constitutionality of this provision of the law has never been tested, however, and some eminent members of the bar are frankly skeptical that it will be upheld.

Perhaps a more serious defect of section 77 is the requirement that stockholders of a railroad in bankruptcy must accord two-thirds approval to a plan of reorganization if their interests are adversely affected thereby, unless the court holds that the corporation is insolvent. Since, under past precedents, insolvency has been determined by the courts in bankruptcy cases on the basis of the cost of a corporation's property, rather than its current earning power, it would be very difficult indeed to wipe out the stockholders in that way. Hence, section 77 gives to the stockholders a dominant voice in the formulation of a railroad reorganization plan, since it is necessary to secure two-thirds consent from them.

Only One Reorganization Plan Drafted Under Section.

Only one railroad reorganization plan, that of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, has so far been drafted under Section 77. This plan has not yet been subject to a preliminary hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission, however. The serious uncertainties surrounding proceedings under Section 77 have made it abundantly evident that fundamental amendments to Section 77 will have to be drafted in order to make the use of this law at all practicable. Experts attached to the office of the coordinator of transportation have been at work on this matter for some time. It is common gossip among interested New York banking houses, however, that serious difficulty is being encountered in drafting a satisfactory series of amendments to the law.

In the meanwhile, a strong plea for complete abandonment of Section 77 as unworkable and probably unconstitutional, and for a reform of the old procedure in equity receivership as a substitute, is made by Louis B. Wehle, former general counsel of the War Finance Corporation, in the current issue of the Yale Law Review. Mr. Wehle advocates the enactment of a new statute, outside the bankruptcy act, to guide the Federal courts in future equity receivership proceedings affecting railroads. Such a statute will seek to simplify equity receivership, and will provide also that the Interstate Commerce Commission shall assume a large measure of jurisdiction over reorganization, as is provided already by Section 77.

Regardless of any new legislation, however, powerful pressure against the consummation of railroad reorganizations at this time has been brought to bear by financial institutions. As holders of railroad bonds, they do not relish having the debts of carriers scaled down now, when earnings are at low ebb. Institutions do not like to have their bond holdings reduced in principal amount or turned into stock, especially if they feel that an early general improvement in business and railroad earnings is likely to restore their bonds to good standing or limit their sacrifice to a lowering of the coupon rate of interest.

Stockholders in No Haste To Reduce Principal of Stock.

Railroad stockholders also, as demonstrated by the recent effort to hasten reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, are in no haste on this score. In fact, every type of security holder feels he is likely to gain by holding up reorganization until conditions improve.

To meet this situation, Mr. Wehle suggests a second statute which would enforce speed in railroad reorganization under emergency conditions. This second measure would provide for special rules to be promulgated by the Chief Justice for the guidance of the Federal District Courts in hastening reorganizations. Special "reorganization judges" would be assigned to particular railroads under this plan to hurry the procedure in each case.

Approximately 20 per cent of the railroad mileage of the country is now under the jurisdiction of Federal courts, pending reorganization. At least an equivalent mileage is owned by companies now on the verge of financial collapse. The breakdown of railroad earning power has been so severe and widespread, therefore, that a clarification of the future economic and regulatory status of the carriers has become a necessary prerequisite to efforts to effect permanent readjustments of their corporate financial structures.

Bond Market Holds Firm in Smaller Sale

Secondary Issues Make Best Showing; Trading, $9,190,000.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Domestic corporation bonds were rather dull but fairly firm in today's listed market dealings.

While both traders and investors were still a bit timid regarding the outcome of the gold clause controversy now before the Supreme Court, there was no renewed rush for issues bearing the gold payment provision.

In fact, bonds of the secondary groups, which would not be especially benefited by a ruling against the Administration's monetary program, made the best showing. Prime loans were steady.

Some Wide Gains.

A number of wide gains in scattered issues were attributed partly to business improvement affecting the companies concerned.

There was only a turnover of some $1,280,000 in United States Government securities, but improved prices predominated in this department.

Among corporate gainers of 2 to 4 points were American Type Founders 6s at 41, Colorado Fuel & Iron 5s at 75, Colorado Industrial 5s at 30½, Laclede Gas 5½s at 68, Milwaukee Electric 5s at 85½.

Nickel Plate Up.

Nickel Plate 6s at 68, Otis Steel 6s at 81, Paramount-Publix 5½s at 64, Sharon Hoop 5½s at 88, Southern Colorado Power 6s at 92½, and Vanadium 5s at 91¼.

Transfers totaled $9,190,000, par value, against $10,249,000 yesterday. The Associated Press averages for the rails, industrials, utilities and low-yield issues advanced from .01 to .23 of a point.

The foreign section was quiet and irregular. The Germans steadied and French loans improved.

Bankers Fight Flat Deposit Insurance Rate

By Charles P. Shaeffer.
(Associated Press.)

Powerful opposition by big bankers to a flat assessment of one-eighth of 1 per cent of total deposits as a membership fee in the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was reported yesterday in authoritative circles here.

The protest was said to have gained force at a two-day meeting of the reserve city bankers in New York earlier this week.

Bankers from 50 leading cities at that time agreed to fight the proposed assessment as liable to cause a hardship on the larger banks to the advantage of the smaller ones.

In Legislative Proposals.

The flat assessment on total deposits already has been incorporated in the legislative proposals which the FDIC, through the White House, will send to Congress in the new banking program.

The attitude of bankers was described privately as being that certain large institutions in New York City, and elsewhere, would be forced to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars annually as a membership assessment, while less than 2 per cent of the total deposits, in many instances, would be fully insured due to full protection being granted on accounts only up to $5,000.

Spokesman for Group.

It was said further in the same unquotable quarter that Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the board of the Chase National Bank of New York, who came to Washington after the meeting, was acting as spokesman for the group, and that he presented a protest against enactment of the proposed law. This, however, was not immediately verified by officials.

The subject of an insured bank's liability to the FDIC has always been a disputed one since insurance of deposits was inaugurated more than a year ago.

Many bankers claim that under the present law their liability is unlimited, as it provides an original assessment of one-half of 1 per cent of the insurable deposits of member institutions, but that the corporation can assess each member an additional amount if it requires more capital.

Curb—Specialties provided the principal price movements. The market was almost unchanged. Sales totaled 108,000 shares.

Wheat—Predictions of cold weather gave an upward trend to grain prices. Wheat was unchanged to ⅝ higher. May wheat sold at 97½; July at 88½.

Silver—Bar silver was steady and unchanged in New York at 54¼ cents per ounce. In London it sold off 1-16 penny to 24 9-16 pence. (United States equivalent, 53.98 cents per ounce.)

Gold—Bar gold advanced 2½ pence to 142 shillings 1½ pence in London. (United States equivalent, $34.67.)

Dollar—The United States dollar stood firm in foreign exchanges. It stood in New York with reference to other currencies, $4.88 to the English pound; 6.58½ cents to the French franc, and 40.07 cents to the German mark.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—Trading on the stock exchange was cheerful today. A general improvement took place early especially in giltedged securities, industrial and gold mining shares, but profit taking later caused slight recessions. Transatlantic issues recovered part of their early losses. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Trading was favorable on the bourse today—with notable advances in Air Liquide and deBeer shares. The closing was firm.

Week's Revenue Freight Loads Are Increased by 55,602 Cars

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended January 12, totaled 553,675 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced today. This was an increase of 55,602 cars above the preceding week when loading was reduced by New Year's holiday. It was, however, a decrease of 3,591 cars below the corresponding week in 1934 but an increase of 43,782 cars above the corresponding week in 1933.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week ended January 12 totaled 199,958 cars, an increase of 17,968 cars above the preceding week, 15,554 cars above the corresponding week in 1934, and 38,705 cars above the corresponding week in 1933.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 150,468 cars, an increase of 23,517 cars above the preceding week but decreases of 8,079 cars below the corresponding week in 1934 and 8,537 cars below the same week in 1933.

Coal Loads Mount.

Coal loading amounted to 131,930 cars, an increase of 4,385 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 6,367 cars below the corresponding week in 1934. It was, however, an increase of 13,121 cars above the same week in 1933.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 26,276 cars, an increase of 4,267 cars above the preceding week, but decreases of 3,278 cars below the corresponding week in 1934 and 4,282 cars below the same week in 1933. In the Western Districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended January 12 totaled 16,586 cars, a decrease of 2,298 cars below the same week in 1934.

Live stock loading amounted to 15,347 cars, an increase of 1,527 cars above the preceding week, but decreases of 2,424 cars below the same week in 1934 and 2,814 below the same week in 1933. In the Western districts alone, loading of live stock for the week ended January 12 totaled 11,436 cars, a decrease of 2,378 cars below the same week in 1934.

Forest products loading totaled 19,920 cars, an increase of 3,767 cars above the preceding week, 1,745 cars above the same week in 1934, and 5,826 cars above the same week in 1933.

Ore Loads Up.

Ore loading amounted to 2,901 cars, an increase of 453 cars above the preceding week, but a decrease of 317 cars below the corresponding week in 1934. It was, however, an increase of 477 cars above the corresponding week in 1933.

Coke loading amounted to 6,875 cars, a decrease of 282 cars below the preceding week, and 425 cars below the same week in 1934, but an increase of 1,286 cars above the same week in 1933.

Five districts—Eastern, Allegheny, Pocahontas, Southern and Central-western—reported decreases for the week of January 12, compared with the corresponding week in 1934, in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, while two districts—Northwestern and Southwestern—reported increases. All districts, however, reported increases compared with the corresponding week in 1933.

Nickel Plate Railroad's Net Halts Losses

Radio Board Declares Dividend Covering All Accumulations.

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 18 (AP).—Nickel Plate Railroad today announced net income for 1934 was $38,633.95, compared to a deficit of $1,203,636.30 for 1933.

Operating revenues for last year totaled $33,143,864.46, an increase of $2,496,358.26 over the previous year.

Dividends have not been paid on the preferred "A" shares since the first quarter of 1932, although the company's earnings took a turn for the better in the final quarter of 1933 and profit in the first nine months of 1934 aggregated $4.39 a share on the class "A" stock.

The total amount which will be distributed to holders of 395,597 shares of class 'A" outstanding is approximately $4,520,000. The payment will be made on February 19 to stock of record January 29.

Directors of the General Foods Co. today declared the regular quarterly dividend of 45 cents a share on the common stock, payable February 15 to stock of record February 1.

Directors of the Associated Dry Goods Co. declared a dividend of $3 a share on the preferred stock, payable March 1 to stock of record February 7. This is the first payment since $1.50 was ordered on June 1, 1932.

Equipment Needs For Oil Industry Put at $100,000,000

T. S. Hose Says Further Exploration for Fields Is Important.

New York, Jan. 18—More than $100,000,000 of new capital is required currently by the oil industry to meet the need for replacement of refineries and refining equipment, it is estimated in this week's issue of the T. S. Hose petroleum review, which states that there is not an oil "field today that does not require an expenditure of large sums of money to bring pumping and production equipment up to date."

"It costs money to explore for new oil fields," says the review. "Each day our petroleum reserves are being depleted and since the discovery of the East Texas field over four years ago, and the collapse of the price structure of crude, exploration work has been at a standstill.

"This is a dangerous situation not only from the standpoint of the oil companies which should have reserves to draw from as their existing properties become depleted, but also to us as a Nation. It takes time to drill and equip an oil field and get it into production and still longer to discover a new oil field. A complete geophysical survey, which may show up the possibility of production on 1,000 acres, would probably cost between $200,000 and $400,000.

Stocks Change Little Under Dull Trading

News Developments Aid Some Issues; Radio Moves Higher.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Financial markets turned in a rather colorless performance today, with stock market leaders mostly moving in a narrow range.

News developments gave a fillip to a few stocks pushing them ahead for good gains, notably Radio preferred "A", on which all dividend accumulations were cleared up by declaration of a $9.62½ payment.

An advance of 5⅝ points to 59¾ followed on good volume, and the preferred "B" trailed along for a gain of 4 points.

Goods Issues Stimulated.

Associated Dry Goods issues received a similar stimulus with a $3 dividend declaration of the first preferred, the first disbursement since June, 1932.

The second preferred was the chief beneficiary of the announcement, lifting 5⅝ points to 70, while the first preferred was 2½ points better at 93.

Gainers of a point to around 3 points or so in this division included issues of Republic Steel, American Type Founders, Mullins Manufacturing, Universal Pipe & Budd Manufacturing, the last responding to announcement of a recapitalization plan.

Rails Barely Steady.

Rail stocks generally were barely steady, but in the bond market good advances were seen in the rail list.

Chesapeake & Ohio liens were firm at around the best levels for the past year, and both investment and secondary loans of other roads turned in good gains on the day.

The dollar eased in relation to principal foreign monies. The pound sterling rose one-quarter of a cent, and the French franc was .01½ of a cent better at 6.58⅝ cents.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

In London the dollar was soft at 4.88 3-16 to the pound sterling, while in New York the British unit moved ahead ¼ of a cent at $4.88¼.

The dollar was easy in Paris at the equivalent of 6.582 cents to the French franc, and in the American market the franc rose .01⅛ of a cent to 6.58¼ cents.

Guilders at 67.42 cents in New York were .09 of a cent higher. Swiss francs rose .07 of a cent at 32.32 cents and belgas were .05 of a cent better at 23.32 cents.

Curb's Prices Close Almost At Last Levels

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Specialties provided the principal price movements in the dull curb exchange trading today. Many of the leading industrial and utility issues closed virtually unchanged.

Dealings were narrow from the opening and the list was practically trendless until the late afternoon, when a mild upturn developed.

Among inactive issues, Lane Bryant preferred rose some 13 points in a small transfer. A. O. Smith advanced 5 points in an exceptionally active turnover for that issue. Flintkote "A" canceled its improvement of the previous day, but gains of around a point were recorded by Hiram Walker, Lake Shore, Pan American Airways, United Shoe Machinery and Ford Motor of Canada.

Steady to slightly higher quotations appeared in American Cyanamid B, Aluminum Co. of America, American Gas & Electric, International Petroleum, Swift & Co., Wright Hargreaves, Newmont & Distillers Corporation-Seagrams.

Transfers, which approximated 108,000 shares, were about the same as the day before.

Funds Ready for Part Of Greek Bond Interest

New York, Jan. 18.—Spayer & Co. and the National City Bank of New York, as fiscal agents for the Greek government 40-year 6 per cent secured sinking fund gold bonds, stabilization and refugee loan of 1928, announce that, in accordance with the agreement between the Greek government and the League Loans Committee (London) published on November 17, 1933, they have received funds sufficient to pay 35 per cent of the interest due February 1, 1935, on the above bonds.

Such payment will be made, on or after that date, at the offices of the fiscal agents upon presentation of the coupons, accompanied by a letter of transmittal. The coupons will be stamped with the dollar amounts paid and will be returned to the bondholders, who should reattach the sums to their bonds.

Nonferrous Little Affected By Gold Case

Domestic Copper Improves as Lead Buying Expands; Zinc Is Steady.

New York, Jan. 18.—"Possible action in reference to the 'gold clause' case now before the Supreme Court in Washington seemed to have little influence on nonferrous metals," Metal and Mineral Markets reports this week.

"The price of tin was pushed around quite a bit because of the gyrations in sterling exchange, but prices for the domestic items were easily maintained, with the undertone steady to firm. The volume of business was larger than in recent weeks, particularly in copper." The report continues:

"Unfavorable December copper statistics failed to disturb the market. Foreign copper was under some pressure because of disappointment over the slow progress in the preliminary conversations in reference to the control scheme.

Copper Trade Better.

"Demand for copper in the domestic market improved substantially last week. Total sales for the seven-day period exceeded 7,500 tons, reaching the highest level of any week since the middle of last June.

"In addition to the generally satisfactory interest of consumers in the metal, other favorable developments of the week included reports that the business of the brass mills was picking up nicely, and that some interests which had been out of the copper market for some time were again buying metal.

Lead Buying Expands.

"Sales of lead for the last week were larger, the total being in excess of 4,800 tons. Though most of the call was for February shipment metal, a fair quantity of January was specified in the week's purchases.

"This buying imparted a better tone to the market, and, in some quarters, it was said that should the demand continue, a higher price level seems unwarranted.

"Consumers are reported to be about 30 per cent covered against their February requirements. The quotation held at 3.70c, New York and 3.55c St. Louis. Corroders were the largest buyers of lead last week.

Zinc Is Steady.

"Demand for zinc last week was of moderate proportions, total sales for the calendar week ended January 12 amounting to about 4,000 tons.

"Price of the metal was unchanged and steady at 3.75c, St. Louis, throughout the seven-day period.

Wool Goods Mills Supplied With Orders

New York, Jan. 18.—Wool goods markets are not quite as active as they were in the last weeks of the old year, but mills are satisfied with the business that they have booked and expect to maintain the current rate of operations for at least three or four months, according to a report issued by the New York Wool Top Exchange Service.

"Judging from the amount of business already placed and the orders that are expected to develop shortly, it is possible that many mills will continue to produce spring goods until May. The general opinion in the trade is that the spring and fall seasons will overlap.

"Overcoatings mills are preparing their new lines for presentation to the trade shortly, and have already done considerable quiet business," says the exchange service. "These same mills are already operating at capacity on suitings and topcoatings for spring and are at their wits' end trying to crowd more production onto overloaded schedules.

"There is still much dissatisfaction among mill men over the low prices at which business is being accepted. The industry appears to be passing through another one of its periods of profitless prosperity. Machinery activity is at a high rate, and pay rolls are larger than they have been at any time in the last 14 months, but mill owners and managers are not making money and there is little possibility that stockholders will realize anything on the large amount of business being done."

Champion Feeder Steers Sell at Record Price

Denver, Jan. 18 (AP).—A price of $16.25 a hundredweight for feeder steers, the best since 1930, was paid at the National Western Stock Show today for a champion carload of Herefords, shown by W. A. Braiden, of La Jara, Colo.

Awards Top 24 Million In Construction Field

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Engineering contract awards total $24,044,000 for the week as reported by the engineering News-Record, a drop from the high volume of awards last week.

Of this total $2,118,000 represents private work and $21,896,000 public construction of which $5,139,000 is for Federal awards and $16,757,000 State and municipal.

Stocks Increase Planned.

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange has received notice from the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Co. of a proposed increase in authorized common stock from 1,100,000 shares to 1,700,000 shares.

Inventory—the bane of a merchant's existence! You know what it means? Counting every item in stock; thousands of auto accessory sundries. Naturally, it's easier to count cash in the till than goods on the shelf even though we forego profits and take a licking on prices. So we are shooting for a turnover that will eliminate much of this labor. There are too many items on sale to list each one in this announcement, but remember, our entire $100,000 stock is marked down in many cases lower than cost! No matter what you need you can get it here for less.

Walt Mason, Himself

The Defeated.

We are sailing up Salt River in our old and leaky boat, and we make the welkin quiver with sad cries from every throat. There are wrecks of other schooners which sailed up here long ago, filled with pale and weeping crooners giving voice to endless woe. And our emblem is the raven, which stands out in bold relief, and we seek some quiet haven where we may enjoy our grief. All of us were optimistic ere election day was reached, and our words were eulogistic on the future, as we preached. Soon we'd reach our old-time glory, we predicted, right along everything was hunkydory, everything was going strong. Better things might be expected, there were signs on every hand; then we thought we'd be elected, and of course we'd save the land. Once we had official station, things would take an upward turn, we'd provide regeneration, we would make the old lamps burn. Feeling sure we would be winners, we were full of hopeful thought; all poor men would have their dinners when we got the jobs we sought. But we lost in the election, and our hearts are bruised and sore, we were sunk in black dejection as we sought Salt River's shore. Up its waters we are sailing, up that worst of crooked streams, and we fill the air with wailing over broken hopes and dreams. Optimism is demolished and the future's bleak and gray, since we were so badly polished on that dark election day. Since the voters made their blunder, giving us the well-known air, everything may go to thunder, not a kopeck do we care.

Fund Planned For Renewing Loans of HOLC

Billion Is Called Likely; Congress Asked to Extend RFC.

Introduction in both Houses of an Administration bill extending the life of the RFC two more years after January 31 coincided yesterday with a statement by President Roosevelt that more money is planned to continue the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Plans are still tentative and no figure for the HOLC has been set, Mr. Roosevelt said, but $1,000,000,000 has been mentioned in Administration quarters. This amount would be issued in home loan bonds to clear up the applications now on file, for which funds are not available.

One provision of the RFC bill places under the budget director "determination of the expenditures which shall be made by the corporation, notwithstanding the availibility of funds authorized by Congress." Other provisions would:

Continue the Export-Import banks to June 16, 1937, and the Commodity Credit Corporation to April 1, 1937.

Authorize the RFC to purchase capital stock in mortgage loan institutions in an effort to revive the real estate mortgage market.

Authorize the RFC to extend loans until January 31, 1935, and to purchase or guarantee railroad obligations.

The bill was brought forward in the Senate by Senator Fletcher, and in the House by Representative Steagall, chairman of the Congressional Banking Committee. A hearing may be held by the Senate committee on Tuesday, in which case Chairman Jesse H. Jones probably will testify.

Meantime, another bill introduced in the House by Representative Woodrum Democrat), of Virginia, would permit the RFC to lend to colleges and other institutions of higher learning for buildings and other self-liqidating projects.

Machinists to Fight Navy Yard Pay Cut

A meeting to protest a 5-cent-an-hour pay cut affecting a dozen machinists employed at the Navy Yard has been scheduled for tomorrow at the Avenue Grand Theater, 645 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, by Columbia Lodge, No. 174, of the International Association of Machinists. The announcement was made yesterday by L. P. Ousley, president of the lodge.

At the Navy Yard, officials said the pay cuts had resulted from a reduction in the ratings of the machinists involved, and was based on "inefficiency." They said there was "nothing to" a rumor that some 150 other workers at the yard might be subjected to a similar cut. For the workers affected, the pay cut takes effect Monday.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

More news on James Farrell, Washington winner of Kate Smith's talent hunt. After being signed to a two-year contract with C. B. S. Artists' Bureau, he said, "It's just like one of these things you read in books, or see in the movies."

He explained further, "I hung around local broadcasting stations in Washington, and had some auditions. I sang on several local programs but never on a network. I decided that I would watch for an opportunity to get into some contest—something out of the ordinary that might lead to bigger things in radio. Then I saw the announcement of Miss Smith's contest and I entered. And, so," he said simply, "here I am."

Tomorrow at 12:30 over WJSV, song hits from Eddie Cantor's new movie, "Kid Millions" will be presented. In connection with this program audiences are invited to write letters on "What I Would Do With a Million Dollars." Fifteen sets of guest tickets to the picture will be awarded for the best contributions.

The "Three Maids in the Night," a singing trio that was popular here about 10 months ago, has banded again for broadcasts on N. B. C. southeast network. The three, Grace Shannon, Hazel Money, and Dot Mooreland, will be booked at a local night club.

Two more birthday celebrations are scheduled for today. One: Robert E. Lee celebration, WJSV. 3 p. m., includes an address by Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, author of a biography of the general, and music by the United States Army Band. On WRC at 12:45, Mrs. Horace Van Deventer will tell you about "Robert E. Lee—the Man."

WMAL carries the celebration for Edgar Allen Poe, at 11 p. m. A dramatization of the "Fall of the House of Usher," reading of Poe's poems, and organ music constitute the program.

Cast of "La Forza del Destino" includes Elizabeth Rethberg, Giovanni Martinelli, Gladys Swarthout. Geraldine Farrar will discuss opera and singers between the acts.

PWA Engineer Honored.

Arthur S. Tuttle, PWA State engineer, has just been elected president of the American Society of Civil Engineers. PWA executives point out that the selection of Mr. Tuttle to head the oldest national engineering society, composing 15,000 members, is further recognition by the engineering profession of the highest type of engineers employed by PWA.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S birthday will be celebrated again this year at Government Printing Office with a benefit vaudeville show of 16 acts in Harding Hall, January 30. Proceeds of the affair will be used for treatment of infantile paralysis victims, apportioned as follows: 70 per cent will be given for the treatment of persons in the District and 30 per cent will go to the national committee for delivery to the President for presentation to the President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research.

Public Printer A. E. Giegengack has appointed the following committee to prepare the program: Dr. George C. Havenner, chairman; J. Thomas Ford, William J. Cassidy and Howell K. Stephens (P).

Tickets will go on sale early next week at 50 cents each.

Commodity Credit Dinner.

Tonight the employes of Commodity Credit Corporation will honor Gov. and Mrs. Lynn P. Talley at a dinner and dance at the Mayflower Hotel. Arranging the affair is a committee consisting of Miss Velta Thompkins, Mrs. Myrtis Hillman, (P), and Charles A. R. Pritchard.

De Atley Memorial Planned.

Memorial services for Mrs. Alice V. De Atley, last surviving charter member of the H Street Christian Church, will be held at the church, Sixth and H streets southwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m., with the Rev. C. N. Williams presiding. Mrs. De Atley died January 12, and was buried last Monday in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Legion 40 and 8 To Parade Tonight

March to Precede 'Wreck' of Candidates.

Marking its first public appearance in Washington since organization shortly after the World War, La Societe des Quarante Hommes et Huit Chevaux—the 40 and 8, fun unit of the American Legion, will parade tonight in the downtown district.

Headed by Grand Chef John H. O'Connell, the "voyageurs," wearing their French smocks and chapeaux, will assemble at Thirteenth and New York avenue at 5:45 p. m., and with the Drum and Bugle Corps of Costello Post of the legion in the van, will march down Thirteenth street to Pennsylvania avenue and thence to the Coast Guard Armory on Water street. The parade precedes the semi-annual initiation, or "wreck," of candidates for membership in the society. There are 21 candidates.

Heavy Rains Bar Aid To Stricken Navajos

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 18 (AP). Dr. W. W. Peter, medical director of the Navajo Reservation, said today he had been informed by telephone recent heavy rains in the Indian country had made roads nearly impassable and had seriously increased the plight of the Navajos stricken by a severe influenza epidemic.
